Victor Hugo's Masterpiece at Ritz

"Captain Salvation"

What part does a girl who is "well-known on the Boston water front" play in the life of a young theological when the narrow minded villagers find be has taken care of her after rescuing her from a distressed ship? And what does the girl who has been brought up in these surroundings of narrowness think of the act of her lover? Lars Hanson, Marceline Day, Pauline Starke and Earnest Torrence tell the story in the picture "Captain Salvation" at the Rivoli today and tomorrow.

Charlie Murray

Who doesn't know Charlie Murray? But he is a little different in the picture at the Rivoli on Saturday, "Steel Preferred." It is the story of a young steel worker who is ambitious and rises from common helper to head of the mill. Vera Reynolds and William Boyd also star in the picture.

Bebe Again!

We have with us again a college picture with a popular star, Bebe Daniels. Bebe isn't interested in sports but the girls place her as the star number in the coming swimming meet. But she cannot swim! On the day of the channel swim with the other schools she plunges into the water. After a short distance she collapses and is taken into the boat of her friend, Mr. Spangle. They go speeding along for a good distance and near the end of the swimming course and far in the lead of the other girls the boat hits a fishing boat in the fog. She is hurled into the water and in her efforts to stay up she reaches the shore and is acclaimed winner of the meet.

In the coming meet she continued to win but this time is an able swimmer. Gertrude Ederle has entered the picture and teaches her. "Swim, Girl, Swim" will be at the Rivoli on Sunday and Monday.

The Far Cry

It was a far cry between the American customs and those followed by an American mother in Paris that led to the seeming downfall of her daughter. This is one picture that shows a mother who does not have her child's interest at heart. Leads in this picture to be shown at the Rivoli on Tuesday and Wednesday are taken by Jack Mulhall and Blanche Sweet.

Good Week at Ritz

We would call this week's attractions at the Ritz the best since many weeks. Today "Les Miserables" will be shown again; on Friday, "Silk Stockings"; Saturday, "Blood Will Tell"; Sunday and Monday, "A Texas Steer"; Tuesday, "Red Heads Preferred" and Wednesday, "Backstage."

Victor Hugo's Masterpiece

"Les Miserables" is the masterpiece of an author whose works will always live—Victor Hugo.

It is the story of a man who has been on the wrong side of God. He is changed from a thief and hard-hearted brute to a kind and loving old gentleman. And again "A little child shall lead them." It takes place in France during the revolution and sets forth the horrors of the times. A special cast makes this master's novel a screen masterpiece.

"Silk Stockings"

Blondes! They aren't always as cold as they appear. At Least Laura La Plante isn't that way in her late picture "Silk Stockings."

Just what do silk stockings mean? To a man whose wife finds a pair in his clothes it may mean divorce. To the girl who needs them but lacks the cash it's a different problem.

Real Jesse

"Blood Will Tell" brings the favorite again. It's a story of a brother and sister who buy a ranch and go west to take possession. During a hold up Buck comes to the rescue and asks for a job on the ranch. But he finds that the ranch they have bought is his own. He finds that the girl, who is Kathryn Perry, has stolen his heart. A puzzling situation enters when he tries to prove his ownership to both the ranch and her heart.

"A Texas Steer"

America's Ambassador-at-large is in pictures again and takes the lead in "A Texas Steer." Will Rogers is elected to Congress against his wishes. His wife and daughter are socially ambitious and get the votes for him.

It's a scream to see Will appear before Congress in a nightgown. And the picture was actually taken in Washington which makes it all the more comical. Louise Fazenda, Ann Rork, Sam Hardy, Lilyan Tackman and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., have parts in the picture.

"Backstage"

William Collier, jr., Barbara Bedford, Alberta Vaughn, Eileen Percy and many other favorites appear in "Backstage," the story of the life of follies' girls and the way they work things when broke.

The chorus girls are forced to take up their bedroom in a taxi cab when they are thrown out by their landlady. They attend a party after a long time without food. And finally it's a question of whether the love of the stage or the love of a man is greatest.

The Atonement and the Lutheran Church

The Lutheran church teaches and believes with the Bible that man is saved solely and alone through the Atonement of Jesus, that is, that Jesus Christ, the sinless Son of God, took upon Himself our sin and in our place and for us, by the shedding of His blood made full, complete payment for all our sins and thus reconciled us to His Father. Believing this, the sinner is acquitted and saved.

TWO AUTOS HIT HILLTOP WOMAN

Mrs. Jennie Sloan, 60, Knocked Down by One Car, Run Over by Another; Improving.

Mrs. Jennie Sloan, aged 60, of 547 S. Wheatland Ave., who was hit by two cars on Saturday night is improving at Mt. Carmel hospital.

Mrs. Sloan was knocked down by one car and run over by another as she left the Camp Chase car at Sullivant and Wheatland avenues a little while after midnight Saturday. She stepped from behind the street car into the path of a car driven east by Harry Nawano, 245 S. Monroe Ave.

She grabbed the fender of the car and was dragged about 25 feet before the driver could stop. The slippery condition of the street caused the car to continue to slide. When the car had stopped she fell to the street. Another car coming from the same direction, driven by C. H. Borar, 54 N. Central Ave., ran over both her legs.

Borar explained that when a man ran out and tried to stop him he thought he was being held up and continued on his way. He did not see the woman on the street.

Mrs. Sloan was taken to the hospital by police. She was found to be badly bruised but her condition later was much improved.

A surprise party was held at the home of Mr. C. A. Hackman, 295 S. Eureka Ave., Saturday evening, in honor of Mr. Hackman, daughter Kathryn, and Carl Jr., all having birthdays in the same week. Those present were: Miss Margaret Scully, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Hackman and daughters Thelma and Dorothy, and sons Ralph and Howard. Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kalkbach, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Thompson, Mrs. Everett Higgins and son Carl Eugene, Mr. Robert LaFever, Mrs. T. H. Bell, Mrs. Noble and sons Phillip and Virgil Willard and daughter Ruth, Mr. and Mrs. George Kimble and daughters Helen, and Mary Louise and son Richard, Mr. Frank Winkler, Miss Ethel McDowell, Mrs. Earl Stormont, Edna Hackman and the hostess, Mrs. C. A. Hackman.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Brown, daughters Martha Ann and Mary Jean and son John Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wright, 89 S. Powell Ave., and daughter Nan and son Charles, spent Saturday and Sunday with Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. Orville Journell and family in Bellefountaine.

Mrs. Andrews Injured

Mrs. Mack Andrews, aged 45, of 405 S. Eureka Ave., suffered three fractured ribs and possible internal injuries, Sunday, in an auto collision, when the machine driven by John E. Thomas, 202 Sandusky St., struck the auto of W. S. Lombard, 115 Midland Ave., with whom Mrs. Andrews was riding. Lombard had stopped for a red light when Thomas crashed into him.

FIRE PLUG PROVES HINDERANCE TO ROLLER SKATER

Fire plugs may sometimes prove unsociable to roller skaters.

At least that's what Albert Rice, student at Highland Junior High school thinks. And he should know, because last Friday he suffered a fractured left arm when one of the large iron plugs loomed up before him as he was speeding to school on roller skates. His arm was bandaged and now he is carrying it in a sling as a reminder of his attempt to become friendly with the water plug. The accident occured at Sullivant and S. Terrace St.

Albert lives at 615 S. Terrace St.

Mr. H. G. Deems was honor guest at a surprise birthday dinner given by Mrs. H. G. Deems at their home, 32 N. Roys Ave., Tuesday, Feb. 14. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Harrison and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Simpson.

Broadcast at WCAH

Two Hilltop boys, Raymond Roese of S. Harris Ave. and William Oger of Roys Ave. are broadcasting from station WCAH, Hotel Fort Hayes each week. They are known as the Harmony Twins. Their part of the program usually comes at noon and in the evening.

Control Auto By Radio Saturday

Francill to Demonstrate Wireless Control of Car at Broad and Eldon at 3 Saturday

Hilltop people will have a chance to see a radio controlled car performance this Saturday afternoon. Maurice J. Francill, radio wizard will demonstrate how he can control a car by means of a wireless system at the Central Ohio service station, Broad and Eldon avenues, at 3 p. m.

This radio control demonstration will take place in the drive of the gas station.

Mr. Francill is famous for his wireless control programs.

He operates ordinary stock model autos by radio. He gave his first exhibition at Broad St. between High and Third Sts. on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Jordan, 127 S. Westmoor Ave., entertained with a family dinner in honor of Mrs. Jordan's father, Mr. W. H. Deems, 33 S. Westmoor and her brother, Mr. H. G. Deems, 32 N. Roys Ave., Sunday, Feb. 19.

Miss Martha Myers, 78 N. Burgess Ave., gave a miscellaneous shower at her home on Feb. 17 for Miss Remba Griffin, 51 N. Princeton Ave. Miss Griffin will be married to Mr. Edward Myers on March 3.

Two Injured in Auto Accident

Machine of R. A. Chrisman Wrecked When Struck Sunday Afternoon.

J. H. Kile of Springfield suffered cuts about the head, a bruised hip and leg, and Mrs. Kile, his wife, sustained a wrenched back, when the auto in which they were riding with their son-in-law, R. A. Chrisman, 21 N. Burgess Ave., was struck and almost completely wrecked by the machine of Mr. Peifer of Miamisburg, at Ogden avenue and West Broad street, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Chrisman had gone to Springfield early in the day after Mr. and Mrs. Kile and were within a square of Mr. Chrisman's home when the accident occurred.

Mr. Chrisman was traveling east on Broad street and went to turn into Ogden avenue. He stated that he thought the Peifer machine intended to turn into Ogden avenue also and stopped, intending to let Mr. Peifer turn ahead of him. However, Mr. Peifer did not make the turn and struck the Chrisman machine about the center and rammed it against a telephone pole and the curb, doing considerable damage.

Prof. King will present the following students in a recital at the St. Paul's Evangelical church, 22 S. Warren Ave., on Tuesday evening, Feb. 28, at 8 o'clock.

Bonnie Brower, Martha Cooley, Edna Acker, Doris Shirkey, Jane Allen, Lois McCoy, Frances Smith, Margaret Hier, Elizabeth Curby, Ruth Dell and George Muller.

This program will be followed by several piano duets by Prof. King and Mr. Muller. There will be no charge for the recital.

Birthdays Scarce

Eighty-four years old and only 20 birthdays in that period is the record of Mrs. Melissa Watson, 548 Belvidere Ave. But she will have another birthday next Wednesday, Feb. 29. She is one of the few that are deprived of as many birthdays as the general run of people. Mrs. Watson has resided in Columbus 41 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eickholt, (Amanda Jerwers), 180 N. Powell Ave., announce the birth of a daughter Sunday at St. Ann's hospital.

WEST HIGH ALUMNI TO GIVE CARNIVAL

New Alumni Association Hopes to Unite Old Classmates at Celebration on Saturday Night.

A carnival is to be presented at West High school on Saturday night by the newly organized West High Alumni association. All graduates of West High school are invited to be present that evening.

The purpose of the carnival is to raise money to carry on the work of the association and to draw the West High graduates together in order to establish a strong alumni association to take part in the preparation of the new West High school now under construction at Powell avenue in Broadview addition.

For the evening the building will be decorated in keeping with the carnival spirit and many forms of entertainment will be offered.

The new association has plans for several other events of this nature in the near future and hope to re-unite the former classes into one of the strongest groups of it's kind in the city.

Banner Sunday at Nazarene Church

An effort is being made by the Warren Ave. Church of the Nazarene to have an attendance of 400 at Sunday school on next Sunday morning. A banner is being offered by the Ohio District for the largest attendance.

Prizes are to be awarded to the person bringing the largest number for the morning and also for the largest family present, and for the oldest and youngest person present.

Another feature of the event will be conveyance for anyone desiring it. Those desiring a conveyance call Ra. 2016W.

1136 Enrolled at Highland School

Highland Parent-Teachers Meeting Tonight Will Be in Charge of Men and Boys.

Eleven hundred and thirty-six students are enrolled at Highland Avenue school according to the figures of H. H. Reighley, principal. This shows an increase of 71 in the Junior High department over the figures of last semester. There are 263 enrolled in the elementary grades.

The February meeting of the Highland Parent-Teachers association will be held at Glenwood M. E. church this evening at 7:45. The program will be in charge of the fathers and sons.

Rex Johnson of Central Y. M. C. A. will speak on "The Worth of a Boy". The Westgate chorus will give a few musical numbers. The aims of the Boy Scouts and the Junior High Torch club will be explained. The social hour following the meeting will be in charge of the fathers. All fathers are requested to attend.

Officers of the newly organized Junior High Girl Reserve club at Highland were elected at a recent meeting. They are: Madge Markins, president; Iris Gill, vice president; Virginia Miller, secretary, and Edith Temple, treasurer.

The purpose of the club is "To find and give the best." The club meets every two weeks. It is under the direction of Miss McGregor and Miss Kennedy, members of the faculty. There are 35 members in the club at present.

Republican Club

The Eleventh Ward Republican club will meet on Monday night, Feb. 27, at the Hillcrest Baptist church. A pot luck supper will be served at 6:30.

School Patrols Prove Success

Columbus Auto Club Now Has Five Schools With Student Safety Organizations.

A survey of the safety work being done by the Columbus Auto club shows that one of the biggest aids rendered to the city in the past few months by the organization has been the experiment of school patrols now being carried on by five schools of the city.

The school patrol system has met with hearty approval in this city and more schools will organize a system of the same nature in the near future. The patrol is selected by the principal of the school from the elementary boys.

Each boy on the patrol is equipped with a Sam Brown belt, a badge and carries a long pole with a flag at the end lettered "Stop". These boys report at school at stated times ready for duty. They signal to passing motorists and form a lane with their poles and flags and the children cross the street in safety.

This system of school patrols is approved by the mayor, safety director, chief of police and superintendent of schools.

Hilltop in Council

When the city council met on Monday night the following matters of interest to the Hilltop were presented:

A resolution was adopted providing improvement of Hague avenue and Wiltshire road.

The question of smoke abatment in the city was presented and council set aside next Monday night for a public hearing on the ordinance.

HILLTOP REAL ESTATE ACTIVE

Hilltop property continues to move, according to A. C. Trabue, salesman for Valleyview lots, who reports the sale of four homes to be erected in that addition in the near future. Contracts were signed by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Taylor, 1042 Hildreth Ave.; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ruh, 661 Harig Ave.; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Evans, Donaldson Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Martin, of Jackson pike.

Roy Christman has secured the contracts to build the homes. This will make a total of 67 dwellings in this addition.

CERTIFICATES OF MERIT GIVEN 12

Twelve students of John Burroughs school have been awarded certificates for excellence in penmanship. Arthur Skeeles, writing supervisor, made the awards.

The following received the certificates: Mildred Rice, Ruth Harper, Esther Franks, Charline Frye, Margaret Miller, Gerthel Smith, Dorothy Brown, Charlotte Patrick, Marion Rentler, Walter Richards, William Martin and John Logan.

The Back Door Euchre club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Hempy, 391 S. Park Ave., Monday evening. Prizes were won by Mr. Joe McConnell and Mrs. Fred Marsh, and consolations by Mr. Henry Beachler and Mrs. Frances Hempy. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe McConnell, 393 S. Park Ave.

HIGHEST SCORES IN TOURNAMENT

Out of a Possible 360 Score for Three Games, R. Bieber Turns in 313 Count.

The headpin tournament for Hilltop bowlers which opened at the Hilltop bowling alleys Monday is creating a great amount of enthusiasm among the pin smiters in this section and some remarkably good scores have been turned in for the three games counting in the scoring.

A score of 360 pins is possible in three games. The highest score turned in up to Wednesday noon was 313, rolled by R. Bieber.

R. Gemeinhardt is a close second with 306; B. Miller, 296; J. Smith, 288, and J. Shank, 284.

The tournament continues through this week and is open to any one living on the Hilltop.

Special Sermons

A series of sermons is being preached by Rev. A. C. Baughman of the Hilltop Lutheran church on Wednesday evenings during Lent on the Seven Statements of Jesus while on the cross. These are the most startling statements of his whole career.

The first sermon was delivered Ash Wednesday evening on the topic "Praying for Enemies." The following sermons are in the series, "Forgiving the Sinner," "Mary's New Son," "Forsaken of God," "Thirsting Souls," "Finishing the Work" and "In the Eternal Arms."

"FISHING IS GOOD"; TEMPERATURE FALLS BUT FISH BITE

Despite the cold and snow of the past week, fishing is good, says A. C. Trabue, 2644 Elliot Ave., Valleyview addition.

Mr. Trabue, full of fishing fever, cleared away the snow on Sunday and dug some worms. On his way to the dam with his pole and fishing worms he stopped for gasoline at a station and received a hearty laugh from all. A short while later he returned with a dozen nice Blue Gills.

By this time his fever was rising and the temperature was falling so in the afternoon he started out again. Only one other man, V. G. Seipel, Valleyview, had nerve enough to venture out. After an hour and a half the two returned with 22 more fish.

"Fishing has been extra good for the past two weeks above the dam," says Mr. Trabue. "They are hungry now and sure do bite."

Hit By Auto

Mrs. F. E. Upchurch, 39, colored, of 173 S. Oakley Ave., was taken to the White Cross hospital when she was struck by a car at West Broad and Front streets Saturday evening. She suffered bruises about the right side of the body. The car was driven by George Mead of Canal Winchester.

Open House at Glenwood M. E.

Epworth League to Have Round Table on "Problems of Youth" Sunday Eve.

Friday night will be open house at Glenwood M. E. church. The program will be in charge of the young people of the church. It will consist of musical and dramatic selections in the chautauqua try outs before the manager, G. F. Barber and be criticised by Joe Wyman.

Following is the program:

"Opera Contralto Soloist," "Eva and Topsy," by the Radio Twins; "Ye Old Fashioned Twin," "Jubilee Quartet," Negro Spirituals, "Marimba Artists," one-act comedy, 'Neighbors.' The program will start at 8 p. m.

A series of meetings will begin in the Epworth League on Sunday night at 6:30, when a round table discussion will be featured. The topic of discussion will be "Problems of the Youth of Today." Kenneth Dickerson will have charge of the program. Dr. Barber will act as councilor.

The annual Mission and Bible study classes of the League started last Sunday at 4:30. They will continue to run for six weeks. A 40-minute fellowship period will follow between the classes and the League services. Dr. Barber will be in charge of the Bible study. The mission study will be under the supervision of Mrs. D. E. Leach.

WORLD WAR VET STILL MISSING

Gordon Morrow, Missing Since Friday From Home of Aunt on Belvidere Ave.

No word has as yet been received from Gordon Morrow, 32, World war veteran who disappeared from the home of his aunt, Mrs. U. G. Drake, 215 Belvidere Ave., on Friday evening.

When the Record reporter interviewed Mrs. Charles Morrow, his mother, who lives in Lockland, she gave the following story, "We left home on Friday morning for Winton Place just outside Cincinnati where we were to take the train for Chillicothe. Gordon was to return to the hospital there for treatment for shell shock received in the war. He had been home since Christmas.

"While we were waiting in the station he left me. I thought perhaps that he had gone on to the hospital so I came on to Chillicothe. There I had a telegram from my sister Mrs. Drake, here in Columbus, saying he was here.

"My sister from Cleveland was here and excited the boy. Then he left about 10:30 Friday night saying he was going to telephone his father and ask about gun. His father received no call from him."

Mrs. Morrow came on to Columbus but her son was not here when she arrived. He has not been seen since. Red Cross and the Veterans Bureau are trying to locate him as are the Columbus and Cincinnati police departments.

Gordon served in the army in France for 18 months. Since the war he has spent most of his time at home. He has been in the hospital but one year.

When he left he had about $1.50 in cash but was well dressed. He is described as being about five feet three inches tall, weighing about 145 pounds and in perfect physical condition.

He was a good piano player, typist and restaurant worker. Before the war he was employed as a railroad clerk.

Mrs. Morrow states that if he will come home his leave of absence will be prolonged.

Thursday afternoon, Feb. 23, the Amity Embroidery club will meet at the home of Mrs. George Muller, 227 N. Harris Ave. The last meeting was held at the home of Mrs. E. C. Hammond, 92 Highland Ave., Feb. 9, when a 12 o'clock luncheon was served to eight members.

Home Destroyed

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Thompson one mile south of Reynoldsburg, on the Reynoldsburg-Pickerington pike was destroyed by fire early last Wednesday morning.

An improperly adjusted coal heater caused a slight fire at the home of Mrs. Olive Kaufman, 47 N. Harris Ave., last Friday morning. The damage was slight.

Develop Student Initiative

High schools and junior high schools aren't the only ones that have student councils and allow their students the powers of student government. The student council at West Broad Street school is now in its fifth year and is a success from all standpoints.

"The duties of the council members develops initiative, responsibility, and dependableness," says Miss Harriet Judd, principal of West Broad school. "The system is working very satisfactorily and the students take excellent care of things."

The council consists of as many members as there are classes in the building. All members are from the sixth grade classes. They are elected by the members of the various classes. It is an honor for any sixth grade member to be elected to this body, and is also something to look forward to for the underclassmen.

The council meets once each week with the principal, Miss Judd. They have elected their own officers and the president presides over the meeting. Matters that come before the group are: fairness in playing marbles, care of school property, safety on the streets, fair playing in the yard, fighting, thoughtfulness in looking after the little children, and proper actions in the halls and on the streets.

Each member of the council has a station on the grounds and is responsible for the children that are in that section.

After the council has had a meeting each member reports back to the group he or she represents and tells of the things that are discussed in the meeting and also any message that the principal wishes to convey to them.

The president of the council presides at the assembly meetings held every Friday. The present president of the council is William Frasure; vice president, Winifred Keller; secretary, William Haines. The council is elected every ten weeks.

Miss Judd also explained that many other students have a part in other school activities. They have a clean up committee, two glee clubs, a postman and many other positions that develop initiative. Nearly 150 students have a part in this work.

Two student council members are stationed at Hague avenue as the classes leave the building and aid the students in crossing the street. The janitor of the school has police powers and escorts the children across Broad street.

Substitutes are Lois Green, Doris Hoon, Anna Raether, Viola Beckwith.

WHILE WE WAIT

Last week two more people were killed by a Big Four flyer at the West Broad street crossing. Accidents of such nature are no longer uncommon. And the voters have given their consent to have this crossing eliminated. But we wait.

A few weeks ago an announcement was made to the effect that work on the new underground crossing at West Broad street and the Big Four R. R. would be started as soon as the weather would permit.

The winter weather is not scheduled to last much longer. This being so we should see work on the crossing started within a few weeks. And furthermore it should be hastened to completion. The toll of lives at this danger spot has reached what should be its limit and this period of waiting should terminate.

TO WEST SIDE HIGH

Soon the Hilltop will have one of the finest high school buildings of the city. For that matter there are few cities in the country than can boast of their schools as Columbus can. The new West High building in Broadview is nearing completion. And it will be ready for classes in the fall of 1929.

But what has the school to start on in the way of school spirit and backing? One of the most important and valuable assets is it's graduates. This is true if they are yet interested in the school and will be proud of the new building and share it as the present students do.

An alumni organization was organized a few months ago for the purpose of holding the old grads together. Already it has functioned quite successfully and is continuing it's work by giving a carnival at the school on Saturday evening.

This isn't exactly for the purpose of having a good time, but is for the purpose of building strength and spirit for the new school. All those who are West High graduates should feel it their duty to support their own organization in this and other undertakings.

BOGGS-CLARK WEDDING

The marriage of Miss Beatrice Boggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Boggs, 225 Guernsey Ave., to Mr. Robert E. Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Clark of Cleveland, was solemnized Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock by Rev. J. Marshall Page, pastor of the Boulevard Presbyterian church.

The aisle leading to the altar was bordered with single candles—10 on either side—connected with ropes of smilax and white satin ribbon. Candles were also placed on the steps leading to the chancel, and white cupids were in front of the altar. The chancel was banked with palms and ferns; the altar was covered with silver cloth, and panels of silver cloth were draped against the green velvet curtain which formed the background. The wedding was the first to be held in the new church which is located at the corner of Northwest Boulevard and West Second avenue. Every pew was filled.

Mrs. Hugh Earhart, pianist, and Miss Mae Bunce, violinist, played "To a Wild Rose," while the ushers were lighting the candles. Preceding the ceremony, Mr. Carlos Ury, baritone, accompanied by Mrs. Earhart, sang "I Love You Truly" and "All for You," and through the ceremony, "At Dawning" was played.

Miss Marian Mangold was bridesmaid; Mr. Roy Resch of Cleveland was best man; Mr. Thomas Pace and Mr. Harry Rook were ushers, and Robert Earl Boggs, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

The bride wore a flesh-colored, satin period gown, sleeveless and long, the skirt being covered with ruffles of tulle one inch in width, edged in gold thread. She carried a bridal shower of butterfly roses and forget-me-nots, and the rose point handkerchief which her mother had carried on her wedding day. She wore no veil.

Miss Mangold carried Madam Drews roses. She wore a pale blue bouffant taffeta frock trimmed with flesh colored tulle bow which was fastened with a rhinestone ornament.

The ring-bearer wore a suit of black velvet with a white satin blouse, and carried the ring on a white satin pillow.

One hundred guests attended the reception at the Boggs' home following the ceremony.

The out-of-town guests attending the wedding were: Mr. James F. Clark and Miss Helen Clark of Cleveland, father and sister of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Resch of Cleveland, and Mr. and Mrs. Bertram A. MacKinnon of Chicago. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Clark, is spending the winter in Honolulu and did not attend the wedding.

When Mr. and Mrs. Clark return from their wedding trip they will be at home at 235 Guernsey Ave.

Mr. Clark is employment manager for the F. & R. Lazarus & Co. He is a former student of Cornell university and a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity. The bride attended Oxford College for Women.

THE AGE OF OPPORTUNITY; WORLD ON THE UPGRADE

THE LUCKY AGE

No vision of the millenium formed in the Fifteenth century could have equaled the realities of 1927.

A great part of the things which people were most hopelessly trying to accomplish then has been done today.

People who talk about "the good old days" are either ignorant or silly.

Civilization has been set back in its progress from time to time.

The Dark ages succeeded the grandeur of Rome, which, after all, was only the grandeur of the nobility. The common people of that city did all the work, got all the cuffs and kicks, and shared all the poverty.

But children born today find the world on the upgrade, and, as far as opportunity for enjoyment is concerned, getting better and better.

We are not yet free from war, or sure that this plague has been exterminated.

But the busy inventors of war machinery are arranging for the next war to extend far behind the battle lines, into the interior cities, and into the meeting places of the statesmen who usually make wars.

And when that is possible, wars will become fewer and fewer.

The son of a poor man today can get a better education than could the son of a king in the days of Louis XIV. He can also get better food, and better medical care, and more sensible, although not such elaborate clothing.

One of the greatest of all accomplishments in the doing away of superstition which made fear one of the most dreadful burdens of life in the days of witchcraft and black magic.

Poverty there will be as long as there is idleness in the world.

Crime there will be as long as rascality exists, and rascality will be long in exterminating.

But the general standard of conduct is higher today than it has ever been, and more safeguards are thrown by the nations around the foolish people who fall easy prey to designing schemers.

The hours of labor are much shorter than they ever were, and the wages are better.

We still have much to learn about the cause of financial depression and the means of removing it, but panics occur with less frequency, and even great shortages of crops do not affect the people of a nation as they used to.

Mothers used to pray that their children might be born under a lucky star.

And this age, while it is capable of improvement, is the best age that the world has ever known—more filled with opportunity, and more rich with the fruit of human labor.

More Beauty-Inspired Than Ever Are the Silk Prints For 1928

If any there be who think that gay prints "have had their day," they are very happily mistaken. On the contrary, the mode announces in accents clear, a return engagement for prints. More thrilling, more beauty-inspiring than ever are the incoming 1928 prints, making their appearance in fashion's

Many of the new prints are already realm under the title of midseason frocks which breathe the very breath of spring in the freshness of their colorings and patternings.

According to advices from Paris prints will be very popular for wear this spring and summer, fashioned simply but smartly as is the model in ground of this delectable print is navy, for navy is forespoken as outstanding for the coming months. The white plaited georgette jabot lends a distinguishing touch to the costume.

Perhaps the prints which are creating the greatest sensation at the present moment here in America are those featuring American Indian designs and colorings. Indian pottery, blankets, war paint, feathers and the entire paraphernalia of Indian costume have inspired these striking new patternings. Naturally the colors are pronounced and very effective.

Especial interest is attached to silk prints for spring in that they are contributing so definitely to the development of smart ensembles. Attractive models feature three-quarter length coats, maybe of kasha, of tweed or of popular basket cloth, which are lined with striking printed silks. These are posed over one-piece frocks of the self-same silk as the coat lining. Very exquisite afternoon ensembles use velvet for the coat, preferably black, although pastel tones are being featured for these in the South.

It is expected that the chiffon-floral frocks will be outstanding when summer comes, for the reason that they are even at this moment being worn by fashionables who are spending their winter in the sunny South. These are styled with all the feminine graces of fluttering hemlines, which are charmingly irregular, with myriads of floating streamers, jabots and panels featured in connection with necklines and hiplines, girdles and sleeves.

MACAROON ICE BOX CAKE

2 dozen macaroons, chopped fine.
1½ cups mixed nut meats (English or black walnuts.)
2 cups powdered sugar.
½ cup butter.
3 eggs.
1 teaspoon of almond or vanilla flavoring.

Cream sugar and butter, add beaten egg yolks. Mix well and add nuts, fold in the beaten egg whites and add flavoring. Line a loaf pan with wax paper and arrange a layer of macaroons and alternate with batter. Place in ice box or other cold place for 24 hours. Remove from pan and slice. Serve with whip cream.

BAKING POWDER BISCUITS

2 cups flour.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
½ teaspoon salt.
¾ cup water or milk.
3 tablespoons fat.

Sift dry ingredients, work fat into the flour, and gradually add liquid, mixing into a very soft dough. Turn onto a floured board, and flatten to a thickness of one-half inch by gently pressing with the hands, cut, put into a floured pan and bake in a quick oven.

DATE CAKE

1 cup chopped nuts.
1 cup chopped dates.
1 cup granulated sugar.
1 cup boiling water.
1 cup flour.
1 tablespoon butter.
1 egg.
1 teaspoon soda.

Stone and chip dates and place soda over dates and pour boiling water over both. Mix well and let stand. Cream the butter and sugar, add beaten egg. Add date mixture, nuts and flour. Line pan with waxed paper and bake in a very slow to moderate oven. Served with a creamy caramel frosting or whipped cream.

HOME USES FOR THE LETTER FILE

The letter file is more substantial and useful than it looks. Its joints defy great heat and pressure, and it therefore makes a good tray for the kitchen in baking custards and potatoes.

All these articles may be put into the tray—the different individual custard cups and potatoes, together, and then put into the oven with one motion. There is not so much danger of burning in removing the different articles from the oven, as they can all be removed at once.

The letter file makes the perfect spinach washer. Many people go without this valuable food element because of its hard washing. If it is put into a letter file and held under running water, the grit is quickly loosened without the individual handling of each stalk.

The letter file also makes a quick cake cooler, as the air space underneath it large and the cake does not fall or become soggy from too slow cooling.

It makes a good tray for holding fresh vegetables so that plenty of air can be circulated around them to keep them from spoiling.

Another proof that it is bad practice to make faces at people is found in the fact that a man in Kansas City was held as a robber because the man he had robbed recognized that he had a very large mouth. Three thousand miles away, people in New York saw their neighbors in London one evening last week. This is the result of television. Marvels of science are being unraveled every day. We understand that the time is soon to come when the people of one city will step into a tube and three minutes later arrive at a city possibly 300 miles away. This being so, the time will soon arrive when a student in Ohio State university may be able to board at home even though he lives in Chicago.

Quality counts. This must refer to the number of outfits the well-dressed man has. Mayor Walker on his trip to the south for a week has twelve coats and twenty-four shirts. Eight pairs of shoes are in his wardrobe, too. It doesn't mean that he intends to walk a lot or get his shirts dirtied up on the beach sands but it only shows that he shows success by the clothes he wears. And a few more people back home could well profit by his example. It pays to look well.

LUCY SHOPS ON HILLTOP

Have you seen the new visca straw hats? Burnside's Millinery has a new shipment of them in all the new shades. The one I liked best was in ombre shades of brown and blue with a stunning 'kerchief scarf of ombre shades to match the hat. The only reason that the hat is still in the store is that it is not the hat for me, I can only admire it on the hat rack.

There is something about a jewelry store that I just can't resist, so of course I just had to drop into Sulzberger's to see what was new. And this is what I saw—new bar pins in white gold and white gold pendants set with semi-precious stones in the style jewelry. Yes, I really did succeed in getting out without one, but that was because the clerk in charge didn't turn his back long enough for me to get out with one.

You have heard a lot about the loud underwear that the well-dressed man is supposed to wear this spring? Those loud stripes and gay blocks have been worn by men on the Hilltop for several months, Shank says. Well, I have never seen them worn, but they are good looking in the box and the advantage in getting hubby to wear them is very apparent for the silk shirts which are worn with them can be worn by the better-half. Anyway that is the best excuse I could use for these nifty garments of the underworld.

Ninety miles from the Gulf of Akaba, the eastern arm of the Red Sea, is the Arabian desert city of Petra, which English archaeologists will soon explore. The city is carved out of sandstone cliffs, and the only approach to it is through a defile twelve feet wide between high rocks which almost meet overhead. Petra is deserted, and explorers have seldom entered it because of the danger from hostile Bedouins. It was the Edomite capital in Old Testament times. There are many "high places" where them early inhabitants worshiped. There are temples of Egyptian and Graeco-Roman architecture, and the ruins of a Crusader's castle. The temples are carved out of the sandstone rock, whose natural colors are soft shades of "vermilion, saffron, orange, pink and white." In one of the tombs the Arabs believe that Aaron is buried. In Solomon's time the Gulf of Akaba was an important part of the trading route to the East, and Petra was a commercial city. Alexander the Great sent an expedition against Petra but could not take it. It was conquered by the Emperor Trajan's forces in A. D. 105. After the Crusader's time the city remained empty until the World War, when Colonel Lawrence and his Arabs won a battle there against the Turks.

Donald's Inheritance

By MRS. E. O. CARLSTON

Author of "Donald's Deception" and "For Freedom."

Presently, one game of cards being finished, the winner of a large pile of money being gouge. Jim, the cards were thrown aside, and a conversation was commenced, part of which was of interest to the two crouched beneath the window.

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" came from young Jim.

"Now, what tickles you?" asked one of his companions.

"I was just thinking of the time when I played a little joke on my old man, Sam Clinton. Give me another glass, and I'll tell you all about it."

A nudge in the ribs from the well-dressed man at his right should have been a warning, but young Jim proceeded with his story.

"Well, the old boy had made a will, the terms of which were highly beneficial to me. Then after several months, he decided to affect a reconciliation, and requested me to bring the document to him, so that he could destroy it then and there. I immediately brought him a document that this fellow"—glancing toward the man on the right—" had given me."

Here he was again interrupted by a warning gesture from the other man.

"Well, any way," he went on, "the old fool destroyed another document by mistake, and the will still exists."

"What are you tryin' to tell us?" the man, who somewhat resembled a wild animal questioned. "Cut out the beer words, and maybe I can tell what you talk about."

"Go on, Jim. Tell us the rest," another suggested.

"I asked him if he intended to make another will, but he said he expected to die intestate. Consequently, if the plans we made today go along O. K., I'll be sitting pretty in a few months from now."

"Oh, so that's your game, is it?" one of the men asked. "What do we git out of it, I wants to know?"

"Just the same, Donald, I advise you not to be hasty."

"All right, then. Now let's talk about more pleasant topics. It seems that Father Hornswick and Fred should be returning before long."

"They will probably be here any time now; and quite likely will want something to eat. I must get to work now, Miss Gordon has slept long enough. Believe I had better awaken her." She started toward the house.

"Let her sleep away. For goodness sake, don't disturb her."

"I am going to though. You just wait. I'll tell her where you are, and that you want to see her," the girl teased.

"You little vixen, come here."

Donald quickly caught her, as she attempted to run away, and pulled her slender form toward him, taking care that a view of their position would be obstructed by the large tree trunk.

"Just to firmly convince you that I do not want Miss Gordon's society—" He did not complete his sentence, but his strong right arm held the girl in a tight embrace, while he forced her lips to meet his; once—twice—three times. Then, slowly, he released her, but by some hypnotic influence he seemed to possess over this particular piece of femininity, their eyes gazed steadily into one another's, unflinchingly. Donald opened his lips to speak, but the girl suddenly turned away from him, and ran toward the house.

When she reached the kitchen, she found the object of Donald Clinton's mental depression, busy at work in the kitchen.

"I just had to do something," she explained to the young girl. "It ain't my nature to let other folks wait on me, and your pretty hands ain't used to so much dish washing."

"My hands do look awful, don't they?" Then glancing through the window, she saw Donald approaching the house.

"Quick, Phyllis," she said. "Give me that apron."

The exchange was quickly made, and when Donald entered the room, the girl he was becoming very much interested in was alone.

"I wonder why Fred and Esther haven't returned," the girl remarked, partly to guide the conversation to impersonal channels.

"They are likely to be here any time. No danger of Fred getting lost," Donald said, confidently.

The girl went about her work, without giving any further signs that she was alarmed about her friends. When the meal was served, those present ate with fairly good appetites, but all were now more or less concerned over the two missing young people. Long into the night they waited. Donald, disliking to leave the women unprotected, did not venture to locate his chum and the girl who was with him. Finally, the long monotonous waiting becoming intolerable, Miss Alma Gordon, Audrey's maiden aunt, said to the young man standing in the doorway, watching keenly for the approach of Esther and Fred:

"Why don't you walk over to Farmer Greene's home? Probably he could help you to locate them."

This was not necessary, however, as the rumbling of wheels was soon heard coming toward the cabin. Fred and Esther had waited for James Clinton to return to the woodland hut. Then, after he and his companions had retired for the night, Esther and Fred, wearily following the road that led away from the hut, presently found themselves nearing the home of the farmer. They finally succeeded in rousing the man from his slumbers, and being an obliging person, he was glad to assist them to reach their destination.

"Yer welcome to stay here fer the night, he suggested.

"Thanks, Mr. Greene," Fred replied, "but our friends are probably anxious about us, so we must return tonight."

In a short time, they were rattling along the unimproved road in the dilapidated vehicle belonging to the farmer. Before entering the house, Fred and Esther agreed that it would spoil the little joke on Donald if they should tell him immediately of the information they had received regarding the part James Clinton had played in connection with the will of Mr. Clinton. Being very tired, they only gave a brief account of their adventure to those who had been anxiously awaiting their return for several hours. The two young men occupied a downstairs bed room, and, as soon as they were alone, Fred informed his chum of the fact that they had located the temporary dwelling of James Clinton, by accident.

"I wonder what his next move will be," Donald said.

"I thought probably we could get some information along that line tonight, but, unfortunately, they were interested in their card game, and had evidently forgotten everything else," Fred said.

Several days later, Donald succeeded in bringing himself to face the ordeal before him. The woman known to him as Audrey Gordon, was alone.

"Miss Gordon, I have a proposition to make to you. My father, in his last will and testament, requested that you and I be—ah—er—married. Are you willing to listen to my proposition?" he asked in a tone that was courteous, but entirely lacking in sentiment.

"Oh, Donald, you dear boy, this is so sudden!" the woman exclaimed. "I will give you my answer tomorrow," and she hastily left the room, leaving the bewildered youth staring after her.

"Great guns!" he exclaimed, indignantly. "Do I have to mention the matter to her tomorrow? I hoped to have it over with today."

The following evening, he again mentioned the subject to her.

"I want you to understand," he said, gently, but firmly. "This is a business contract. After the ceremony is performed which will make us legally man and wife, I will immediately transact the necessary business connected with the apportioning of my father's will. Then I shall divide my share with you, after which, one of us can take steps to obtain a divorce."

"But, Donald, I don't believe in divorces."

"You will, before many months," Donald thought. Aloud he said:

"But you understand, this will not be an ordinary marriage. It is only a business contract."

"Then I refuse your offer," the woman said, pretending to be offended.

As it was after dark, and the two were standing in the yard, a distance of several feet between them, it was easy for Fred who was concealed behind the stump of a fallen tree, to whisper to his chum:

"Tell her you're crazy about her."

"I'm crazy," the slightly perplexed youth said. "No doubt about it, I'm crazy—" he could hardly bring himself to finish the sentence.

Then he continued: "I'm crazy about you."

"Well, if you're real sure, all right. Guess it's my place to name the date. How about a month from now?"

"All right with me. Goodnight."

"Haven't you forgotten something?"

"Oh, yes, thanks for reminding me. I dropped my check book, and neglected to pick it up."

He hastily recovered the article, and with quick steps hurried past her, avoiding further conversation on the subject for that night. After he had entered the cabin, Fred stepped from his hiding place, and was immediately confronted by Phyliss Parsons.

"You'll certainly have to pay me a good pile of money for making such an idiot of myself."

"Don't worry, you are doing fine; and I'll be glad to pay you liberally."

Long into the night, while Fred slept soundly, Donald lay awake, wondering if he was making a mistake. Constantly, the blue eyes of the girl whom he had seen several weeks before in the restaurant at Waterford, seemed to haunt him. But the spirit of revenge was strong within him, and the desire to outwit James Clinton swept aside all other emotions.

The following morning, Donald arose with a feeling of deep depression as a result of the interview of the previous evening.

"This business is getting on my nerves," he said to Fred. "Here I am, engaged to marry a woman I almost dislike, and constantly wondering what Jamds will do next. I think I shall go to Waterford tomorrow. I have neglected to have Smith forward my mail here, and he is so dull! Never does anything without being told a dozen or more times; but he has been with us for a long time, and I do not want to dismiss him."

"How long will you remain in the city?" Fred questioned. "I need you to help entertain the crowd."

"It will be evening by the time I arrive in Waterford tomorrow, I shall remain there tomorrow night, probably returning here the next day."

"Can't stay away from our little cook very long, can you?" Fred teased.

"Oh, confound it! Don't mention her to me now, or I may break with Miss Gordon any minute, and let my inheritance go to thunder."

"Don't be so foolish as that," Fred said.

Evening of the following day found Donald ascending the steps leading to the front entrance of the home that had been his from boyhood. How he loved it! Then he thought of the girl he had left in the mountains. How he would like to bring her here to live! He rang the doorbell, as the door was locked, then resumed his reverie. He wondered if she could easily accustom herself to the beauty and luxury of these surroundings—if she would be satisfied.

A servant opened the door to admit him; but the young man, lost in thought, remained motionless. A cough which was probably forced, from the old servant, roused him from his preoccupied state of mind, and he stepped across the threshold.

After a bath and complete change of cloths the weariness caused by travelling all day partly disappeared. Then he ate the solitary meal that had been prepared for him, and retired to his suite of rooms, which were also on the ground floor of the large house. Adjoining these rooms, was a room his father had used as his private study, and which had never been rearranged since Mr. Clinton's death. The various articles of furniture remained in the same places. The room was never used, except when James—who had overhauled the various compartments of the desk, and had obtained a new supply of stationery and writing materials—was there.

Donald tried to become interested in the evening paper, but found his mind constantly reverting to the girl of his dreams. He wondered if she were thinking of him, if she missed him. Then he would make another effort to concentrate his mind on the printed sheets before him.

"Four die in airplane crash," he read. Then his mind returned to his own problems.

"How will I ever get through the marriage ceremony with Audrey Gordon?"

Then again: "I must forget the situation for a while, so that I can think clearly when the proper time comes."

Again, his eyes glanced over the page before him, but everything seemed so uninteresting. Then he gave way to imagination. He thought of the little scene which took place several days before, when he held a certain young lady in his arms, saying tender things to her. In sharp contrast, he pictured with a feeling of uncontrollable disgust, the interviews he had had with the woman he believed to be Audrey Gordon. For an hour, thoughts that were pleasant, and many that were otherwise, ran riot in his mind.

Finally, throwing down the newspaper he held in his hand, impatiently he crossed the room to his writing desk, with a definite purpose in his mind. Upon examining the contents of the desk, he discovered that his supply of writing paper was exhausted. As the room containing his father's desk adjoined the room he was now in, Donald opened the door between the two rooms, and turned on the electric light. Helping himself to the stationery belonging to James, he attempted to write a letter to Miss Audrey Gordon, to explain that he could not keep his promise to her; but knowing that he was probably leaving a life of ease and luxury, for one of hard work, and, perhaps, poverty, he was naturally hesitant to write the intended communication.

He bowed his well shaped head in the attitude of a deep thinker, and unconsciously, nervously, his fingers fumbled over a carved design on the old desk. A sudden clicking sound reached his ears. His head became suddenly erect, and his eyes lost their dreamy expression, giving place to a look of wonder and excitement, as a secret drawer was revealed to him. He had accidently touched a portion of the wood connected with a secret spring. At first glance, the drawer appeared to be empty, but after a careful scrutiny, Donald saw that it contained a box just large enough to cover the exact dimensions of the inside of the drawer, and having the appearance of being the bottom of the drawer.

After tampering with the box for several seconds, Donald at last succeeded in opening it. To his surprise, it contained a document which was under seal, and bore the words:

"Last Will and Testament of Samuel T. Clinton."

"What can this mean?" Donald wondered. Then his mind reverted to the scene of his father's death bed. The old gentleman had tried to speak, to tell Donald something, all the while, motioning toward the room Donald was now in. It was clear to the boy, now, as he sat there holding the precious article in his hand.

"But what shall I do with it?" he asked himself. "It is under seal, and must be opened in the presence of an attorney. I will have to wait until tomorrow before learning what it contains."

Reasoning thus, he decided to replace it in its hiding place until the following day. Unaware of the fact that he was being watched, he took precautions to leave every article belonging to his brother just as he had found it, and returned to his own room.

"If James had known of the existence of that will, he would have destroyed it, so I must be the only person in possession of the secret. Still, it may be an older will than the only one now known to be in existence. Perhaps father was trying to tell me something else."

Donald dismissed the matter temporarily from his mind, and decided to retire for the night. But when one is accustomed to hearing cheerful voices it is not easy to confine one's self to the unbearable stillness of a large house, practically unoccupied. Donald picked up the telephone and engaged a room at a local hotel for the night. Then, ringing the bell for Smith, who was not slow to answer the summons, he acquainted the man with his intention to seek less lonesome quarters for the night.

He went directly to the hotel, and retired to his room, where he again made an attempt to read the news contained in the evening paper. When he had finally succeeded in concentrating his mind on the pages before him, he was interrupted by the ringing of the telephone. When he answered the ring, Smith's voice came through the wire.

"Mr. Donald?" he questioned.

"Yes," impatiently.

"The house has been robbed, sir. Silver wear and other valuables gone, sir."

"Did you call the police?"

"I did, sir, just before calling you. I hear them downstairs now, sir."

"All right," Donald said. "Be over right away."

When he reached his home, Donald found two policemen at the house, the other two having followed the direction taken by the burglars when they heard Smith's step in the hall downstairs.

"These men are mysterious characters," one of the men in uniform said to Donald, "as we have found many valuable articles which they have overlooked, which were in the same place with things that are now missing."

After an hours time, the other officers of the law returned unsuccessful in their attempt to catch the robbers. As it was then an hour past midnight, Donald decided to occupy his room at home, instead of returning to the hotel. When he awoke the next morning, the sun was high in the heavens. He sprang out of bed, and dressed himself hastily. After he had eaten his morning meal, Donald went directly to the room where his father's desk was located. He passed his fingers over the carved design of the wood, until he touched the exact spot connecting with the secret spring. As before, the drawer was revealed. Donald hastily removed the box, which he opened.

The document was gone!

CHAPTER XI

"Gone!" he exclaimed, gazing ruefully at the empty box. "But who could have known of this secret hiding place? This must be more of James' work."

Donald decided to see a detective, in an effort to regain the missing document. Locking the door of the room that had once belonged to his father, he grabbed his hat, and ran down the stairs. When he opened the front door, he saw a messenger boy alight from his bycicle in front of the house, and then, after a second look at the number on the large house, he walked quickly toward the entrance, where he met Donald, who signed his name to the yellow slip of paper.

"Wait a moment. There may be an answer," he said to the boy, as with nervous fingers he tore open the envelope containing the message. It was from Starkville, and read as follows:

"Esther Hornswick Missing Since Last Night (stop) Inform Her Father"

"Now what can be the cause of this?" he wondered. "If James is guilty, what is his motive?"

Not considering an immediate reply to the wire necessary, Donald dismissed the boy, and ordered the waiting chauffeur to drive to the Hornswick residence. There, he found Mr. Hornswick, anxiously pacing the floor, holding a letter in his hand.

"My daughter has been abducted," he informed Donald. "It is enough to drive a man crazy."

"Then you know?" Donald questioned.

Consider Your Feet

Do you wear the same pair of shoes until they are worn out?

This is a dangerous policy from the standpoint of health. Shoes should be allowed to dry out and become wholesome inside

And it is economical to have several pairs of shoes. They will last longer and look much nicer than the pair that is worn every day.

A rest for a pair of shoes also allows them to keep their shape and be soft and easy on the foot.

And one of the most important reasons for owning several pairs of shoes is that the well-dressed person wears different shoes for different occasions.

"What Price Glory" Best at Ritz
Mystery and Night Life at Rivoli

Ritz Special Today

Antics! Millions of them today. But wouldn't you like to see "The First Auto." It is at the Ritz today. It is fun all the way through. Times have really changed and the styles have changed, too. You will believe it, too, when you see the long dresses, the horses and buggies and the first horseless carriage. Barny Oldfield and Patsy Ruth Miller are the stars.

War Again

War isn't always what Sherman said it was. Along with it goes some glory. But have you wondered "What Price Glory"? It is the name of the screen epic on the late war to be shown at the Ritz Sunday and Monday.

"What Price Glory" is a picture that will be remembered forever. Dolores Del Rio plays the part of Charmaine, Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe take the male leads. All the horrors of war are present but there remains time for fist fights over the beautiful French lass. It is a good match for the "Big Parade."

"Very Confidential"

The above is the title of the show at the Ritz on Tuesday. Madge Bellamy and Patrick Canning have the leads.

To assume another lady's name in order to win the love of an all-American football hero should be very confidential. But even after her faking was revealed he told her confidentially that he loved her.

Fight In Air

Those who missed the picture "Hard Boiled Haggerty," with Milton Sills and Molly O'Day will have a chance to see it at the Ritz on Wednesday. The fight of the German and American planes is truly exciting. And the whole story brings out another angle of the World war situation.

"After Midnight"

Just how long can a girl keep a good reputation by selling cigarets in a night club after midnight. Norma Shearer tells the story in the picture at the Rivoli today and tomorrow. Lawrence Gray plays the part of a gas pipe thug and is reformed by the pretty cigaret clerk.

A Westerner

On Saturday another western story will be thrown on the Rivoli screen. Tom Tyler is "Flying U Ranch" promises to be a novelty in its class.

Mystery

If you like mystery of the crooks and crooked paths of a large city, you will enjoy "Underworld" at the Rivoli on Sunday and Monday. George Bancroft, Clive Brooks and Evelyn Brent take the leading roles. It is a picture of the life in the large city underworld. Police raids, holdups and thefts along with murders and the love between two underworld sweethearts make it exciting throughout. And what is to be done when your sweetheart is sentenced to the chair for murder.

Bebe Again

Bebe Daniels was at the Rivoli last week and she returns on Tuesday and Wednesday in "She's a Shiek." She's the daughter of a shiek but she turns to be a shiek so as to evade the love making of a war like neighbor. She doesn't attempt to put her love making over like Rudolph Valentino but she knows how to shiek a man into falling hard for her. And it isn't a calm love story throughout because Bebe is a fun maker and always puts lots of it into her pictures.

Four hundred is the goal for attendance Sunday at Church of Nazarene.

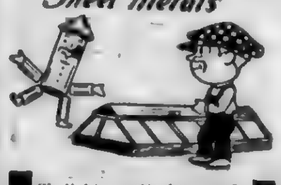
LONG NOW? NO, SAYS JOE

Slush From Cinder Paths and Snow Aren't Pleasing to Josephine College.

Joe and Josephine are looking forward to the time when this quarter will come to an end and they can return home for the much appreciated ten-day vacation. And it won't be long now for there are but three more weeks of school.

Snow on the campus makes a beautiful sight says Joe and Josephine College. And it's lots of fun to hear all the co-eds complaining of the slush in their zippers and the dirt of the cinder paths on their stockings.

Some more of the low down neophytes of the campus were raised to higher levels after a day of initiation last week. They were the pledges of the band fraternity and the Scabbard and Blade, national military fraternity. The cold weather did not blend with band music harmony but the concerts at all points of the campus were very well enjoyed by all the students. And it was a sign that all the old time devilment of College days is not gone when the military boys started parading before the girls' dormitories at an early hour in the morning.



A report from the University Y. M. C. A. employment bureau shows that it has been successful in placing the college men who wanted work into positions that to date have paid $60,000. This shows one of the big parts played by a college Y.

And the Junior prom is here this week. And look what it brought with it. "The Red-Raxzlerry" is out Friday with all the scandal of the year for one dime. It is truly a fruitful sheet. Every student will scan it from front to back in search of his or her name for 'tis an honor some way to have your name appear in the scandal sheet.

Valentine day at the university was not so unusual but for the extra little touches of humor handed out in blackboard sketches of "Deer Teecher" and the comic sheets sent to the prospective life time flappers. But one girl was fortunate in getting a valentine from forty-five boys in her class. She was the only girl among the forty-five so an expression of the love of the whole class was given on the one sheet.

Last fall there were two beautiful swans in Mirror lake but near the approach of the cold winter weather one of them evidently took wing and flew out of the university territory. Since that time the mate has been transferred to the chicken lot of the university farm. It is a good example of royalty mixing with the common rabble. And the caretaker at the farm explains that the big duckling is not at all satisfied or at home with his common friends.

GIRLS' BASKET BALL LEAGUE

Completes First Round of Games Thursday Evening—Friendly Rivalry Among Teams.

The first round of the Recreation League of Girls' Basket Ball at Glenwood shelter house will be completed Thursday evening when the following games are played:

Hilltop Six vs. Billy Goats.
Cardinals vs. Orange and Black.
Glenwood M. E. vs. Zippers.
Red Masque vs. Hilltop Church of Christ.

There is much friendly rivalry among the leaders of the league, especially the Hilltop six and the Glenwood M. E. Among the junior teams the Hilltop Church of Christ, the Orange and Black and the Zippers are showing excellent form. The Red Masques, newly organized this year, and captained by Della Means, is learning much about the game and should be among the teams at the top of the list next year.

Agnes Gatten, captain of Glenwood M. E., has been shooting some pretty baskets, and together with Edith Murray makes a rather formidable pair of forwards. Ted Hamilton as running center and Helen Gatten as jumping center ably cover the center of the floor for the Methodists, and Pat Chase and Louise Compton are stellar guards.

The Hilltop six, past city champs and previously champions of the Glenwood league, has practically the same lineup as last year. Gladys Lennemayer, captain, and Martie Lane hold down the guard positions, Ruth Morris, a swift side center, and Slim Schumaker as jumping center, together with three forwards, Elsie Taylor, Florence Matthews and Mildred Smothers form a combination that will be hard to beat.

Among the junior teams the Orange and Black have a speed pair of forwards in the Baseman sisters, Anna and Dorothy, who range over the floor so quickly as to wear out even the husk'est guards. Helen Hayes and Arvese Lee are another pair of forwards who work well together. Among guards, McDowell, Schoor, Lohr, Simmons and Buchanan do excellent work, and in the center Agin and Lucille Compton show promising material.

Many new girls have been out for the first time this year and are rapidly developing into good basket ball players. As in all other lines of work, practice makes perfect, and the opportunity that the girls have of playing at Glenwood will do much to help them to become real players.

Misses Doris and Florence Shirkey, of 88 Whitethorne Ave., spent the week-end with relatives in Corning.

Mrs. Nellie Curran of 150 S. Warren Ave., has returned home after a three weeks visit with her sons George and Donald of St. Louis.

ANNUAL BANQUET

Of McGuffey Society Will be Held Mar. 27 at Deaf School.

At the annual election of officers of the Columbus McGuffey society held Tuesday night at the State School for the Deaf, John R. Horst, attorney, 328 W. Fifth Ave., was elected president of the society. He succeeds John F. Carlile, who has served as its head continuously since the society's organization nine years ago.

Other officers chosen are Dr. John W. Jones, superintendent of the State School for the Deaf, vice president; Mrs. Myrtle I. Reese, secretary, and Miss Lucy Harvey, treasurer.

Annual banquet of the society will be held at 6:30 p. m. March 27 at the State School for the Deaf. A special program will be presented by the pupils. The society is composed by persons who attended school when McGuffey readers were the official textbooks.

Mrs. Carrie Shirkey entertained the members of the C. C. Chorus O. E. S. Monday evening at her home 88 Whitethorne Ave.

Woman Hit by Car Dies In Hospital

Mrs. Elizabeth Click, aged 61, of 601 W. State St., died in St. Carmel hospital Saturday night after being struck by a car driven by W. A. Horn, 464 S. Ogden Ave., a half hour earlier.

Mrs. Click, accompanied by her step daughter, Miss Elma Walker, was attempting to cross West Broad street at Martin avenue, when the accident occurred. Miss Walker was also struck but her injuries were minor.

Funeral services were held at Coalton, Ohio, on Tuesday.

REPUBLICAN CLUB HEARS JUDGE KING

Hannora, Candidate for County Commissioner, Also Addresses Eleventh Ward Meeting.

W. J. Hannora, candidate for County Commissioner, and Judge John R. King were the speakers of the evening at the meeting of the Eleventh Ward republican club held at Hillcrest Baptist church on Monday evening.

The meeting was an enthusiastic occasion in preparation for the coming campaigns. A pot luck supper preceded the meeting. Entertainment was furnished by Jack Bunch, Mary Jane Shetrone and Mrs. Lavina Andrews.

Judge King centered his address about the work of the women in the organization.

Business Men Meet Tuesday

Community Business Conditions Will be Subject of Speaker at Monthly Meeting.

When the Hilltop Business Men's association meets on Tuesday night, a speaker from the Ohio Retailers association will address the body. The meeting will be held at the Matsonia Barbecue at 6:30.

The name of the speaker has not yet been made known but W. L. Millikin, chairman of the committee in charge of the meeting announced the the speaker would probably be some man from out of the city. He will speak on some subject relative to business conditions in the community.

Following the dinner a short program will be given under the direction of the committee, which consists of Mr. Millikin, C. J. Kohn and Dr. M. K. Weber.

AVATRIX CLUB

The Hilltop Aviatrix club met Monday, Feb. 27, at the home of Miss Etta Mae Wolf for a 6 o'clock pot luck dinner, after which a short business meeting followed when the following officers were elected: Ruth Epperson, president; Magaret Hungleman, vice president; Irma Bartgis, secretary and treasurer.

Committees for the next three months are: Ruth Epperson and Irma Bartgis, social; Emma Lohr and Etta Mae Wolfe, invitation; Margaret Hungleman and Gertrude Held, membership.

At the next meeting the following girls will be initiated: Helen Blair, Graceman Pinsenshaun, Florence Myers, Corinne Miller, Virginia George Jean De Bow and Frances Gilllian.

1928 Auto Tag Sale Surpasses Last Year

More license tags have been issued so far this year than during the entire period of 1927, Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown told members of the Lions' club at a luncheon meeting in the Chittenden Tuesday.

There were 1,373,000 passenger autos and 197,000 trucks licensed in 1927, he said, resulting in a total cash receipt of $10,646,229. With 10 more months to go, he predicted that a new high mark would be set during 1928.

Junior High Groups Meet at Glenwood

On Friday evening the Junior high school and young people's groups of Glenwood church will meet in the social rooms of the church as guests of the Sunday school board. A pot luck supper will be served at 6 o'clock. A youth's conference will follow the supper. The business meeting of the board will follow the conference.

Sunday evening will be set aside as youth night at the Glenwood church. Students of junior high, high school and Young People's groups will be guests of the evening. The meeting will begin at 7:30.

The following will take part in the program: Junior High chorus, Bernois Woodyard, Kenneth Kidd, Zoe Butler, Edna Keefer and Mrs. Edith Cannon.

Mrs. Dawn F. Barnes, 49 S. Westmoor Ave., was very pleasantly surprised in honor of her birthday, Friday evening, Feb. 24, when friends and relatives arrived in the evening with well filled baskets. Those present were: Mrs. Dora B. Burket, Centerburg; Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Kidner, Johnstown; Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Travis and children Bailey, Mary and Wanda, Mrs. W. W. Watts and son Robert, and Mrs. R. S. Garnder of Columbus. The evening was spent in playing games.

Not Authorized

Reports have come to officials of Glenwood church that a young man has been soliciting money for the building fund of the church. Officials advise that such solicitation is unauthorized.

Library Board to Meet on Tuesday

No Site Selected for New West Side Library; 10 New Books at Holmes Library.

The board of the Holmes Hilltop Library will meet at the library on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The new west side branch library will be discussed at that time.

Nothing definite has been done as to the location of the new branch libraries authorized by the city council. Sixty possible sites have been recommended by real estate dealers and other interested persons. Many of these have been investigated but none have been decided upon by the trustees of the library.

List of books are being compiled at the city library for the new branches and new equipment necessary is being provided. The new library branch will probably be located on the ground floor of a well situated building.

The following new books have been received at the Holmes Hilltop library.

David Goes Voyaging—Putman.
The Mountains of Jade—Jewin and Stefansson.
Polaris—Baynes.
In the Sargasso Sea—Janvier.
Garth, Able Seaman—Price.
The Mating Call—Beach.
The Mad Carews—Osborne.
King of the Mess—Birney.
Doomsday—Deeping.
The Claim Jumpers—Hoyt.

SURPRISE PARTY

The officers and members of the degree staff of the Westwood Pythian Sisters pleasantly surprised Mrs. Virginia Calland at her home, 2455 W. Broad street, Wednesday evening, Feb. 22. The event being in honor of her birthday. After an evening of games and progressive euchre the hostess, her daughter Mrs Marvin Green assisted by Mrs. Laura Judy and Miss Mary Crawford served dainty refreshments.

HEADPIN SCORES

Score of 323 Takes First Place in Hilltop Tournament.

In the headpin tournament just closed at the Hilltop Bowling alleys, Jack Welch scored the high number of pins for all entries. His score for three games was 323 out of a possible score of 360.

Henry Hackworth was next high with 317, and E. Bogen was third with 315.

Lawrence Persons was fourth high with 314, while R. Bieber and S. Richardson went into a tie for fifth place, each scoring 313 pins.

Other high scores were R. Gemeinhardt, 308; La Motte, 303; A. Ucker, 303, and Dr. Clevenger, 302.

A total of $45.20 was distributed as prize money. One hundred and thirteen rolled in the contest.

Council Notes

Council Monday night placed Harris avenue, Sullivant avenue to south terminus, on the preferred improvement list for 1928.

The Big Four railroad was also granted permission to construct a spur track across Howard avenue.

Hurt In Fall

Elmer Waits, 45, of Camp Chase and William Chambers of Powell, Ohio, suffered internal injuries on Saturday morning when the scaffold on which they were working collapsed. They were working on the new plant of the City Ice and Fuel Co., at East Main street and the N. & W. railroad crossing.

FOREIGN ART WINDOWS IN NEW CHURCH

St. Aloysius Church Will Be a Beauty Spot on Hilltop; Probably Finished by Easter.

The new St. Aloysius church at Midland and Broad, when completed in the near future will be a masterpiece of art within itself. The beauty of the new church compares well with that of any other in the country. Rev. R. E. Schwarz states he had hoped to have the work completed by Christmas, but was delayed and now looks forward to Easter as the day of the opening. No definite date has been set, however.

The most outstanding feature of the new church is the beauty of its windows. They are imported from Germany, and were painted by Dr. Digtmann, world's famous artist of Lanick, Germany. Dr. Digtmann painted the windows for the Pope's private chapel in competition with artists of the world.

The twenty-four windows represent the Apostle's creed and the life of St. Aloysius. The large rose window in the front of the building represents the lily of St. Aloysius.

Below the windows are the 14 stations of the cross which depict the life of the Lord before Pilot until His crucifixion. These windows are of solid pieces of glass with each color burn in separately. They are the finest produced in a period of 100 years.

All of these glass paintings represent the finest of their type in the world. There are none in the city that will compare with them in beauty. Only one other window in the state has been painted by this famous artist. It is at Covington, Ohio.

Various other smaller windows are placed around the ends of the building and in the vestibules.

The sanctuary floors are of marble as also are the alsles. The marble altars and railings were imported from Italy. The marble statues of the angels on the altars are of Benito stone imported from Italy.

The flooring under the pews will be of oak. Work on the floors will probably start this week. The paneled ceiling is made of solid oak. The pews will propably be the most beautiful in the city. They are of white oak. The organ will be installed under the rose windows in the front of the church but will not obstruct the view of these windows. The lights are antique finished iron.

The church when finished will seat 600 persons. The cost of it will be near $150,000.

"We feel that we are adding something to the Hilltop," Rev. Schwarz stated Tuesday. "When the church is completed the Hilltop people will be welcomed at at any time the church doors are open. They are welcome to view these bountiful windows and also welcome to our services."

Derailed Traction Hits Parked Car

L. C. & E. Jumps Switch Track at Sullivant and Terrace and Smashes Automobile.

An eastbound L. C. & E. traction car jumped the track at the switch at Sullivant and Terrace street on Tuesday afternoon about 1:20 and headed straight on into a Hudson sedan parked on the opposite side of the street. No one was injured.

The running board and fender of the car was smashed and slight damage was done to the body. The car belongs to Edith A. Murhpy, 2524 Sullivant Ave.

A track workman explained that the switch was probably worn and the wheels of the traction took the wrong track. The speed of the car made it leave the track as it swerved to the side.

If the automobile had not been parked on the side the traction car would have probably gone up onto the sidewalk and into the store rooms beyond.

Prohibition Convention

The Ohio State Prohibition convention for 1928 will be held in the new Southern hotel on March 22nd. The work of the convention will be to elect delegates to the National Prohibition convention which is to be held in Chicago on July 10 and 11, name candidates for presidential electors and candidates for state offices to go on petition for nomination. There will be three sessions, morning, afternoon and evening. National chairman, Dr. D. Leigh Colvin; Dr. Aaron S. Watkins and others will speak. There will also be special numbers of good music on the program. The public is invited to all sessions.

WOMEN'S DAY

Record Attendance Expected at Hoge Memorial S. S.

Women of Hoge Memorial church will compete with the men on Sunday for the record attendance at Sunday school. It is "Women's Day" at the church. Sunday school will begin at 9:15 a. m.

Mrs. R. O. Harrison, 58 Binns Blvd., is chairman of the special meeting. She announces that all the classes will be taught by women. Women will also act as officers of the church.

The mother present with the most daughters will also receive recognition.

Last year there were 419 present on women's day. Of this number 185 were men. The attendance for this year promises to be larger than before. All women not attending Sunday school are urged to be present to help make this day another success for the women. On the Men's day, held recently there were more women present than men.

Request Program

The regular Sunday evening request program which is given once each month at St. Paul's United Evangelical church will be given next Sunday evening. Requests should be in not later than Friday evening.

STUDENT INJURED BY LIGHT JUMPER

Lewis H. Wolfe, Senior at Ohio State, Cut and Bruised About Face and Body.

Lewis H. Wolfe, son of Dr. and Mrs. L. D. Wolfe, 2282 W. Broad St., senior in the Law College of Ohio State university received bruises about the legs, chest and head when his car was struck by another driven by Norval Younger, 1669 Merrick Rd., Friday evening.

Wolfe was on his way from the university when the accident occurred. He had started to cross Dublin avenue on Grandview avenue when the other car ran the red light and hit his car. Wolfe's car was turned over and badly damaged. The other car was thrown against a telephone pole near by and also damaged.

Missing War Vet Returns With Job

In Need of Clothes and Money, Gordon Morrow Returns to Home of Aunt.

Gordon Morrow, missing World war veteran who disappeared from the home of his aunt, Mrs. U. G. Drake, 213 Belvidere Ave., on February 17, returned last Thursday. He gave no explanation as to why he left other than the fact that he did not wish to return to the government hospital at Chillicothe.

Mrs. Charles Morrow, his mother, said that he had been working in a restaurant in the city somewhere but would not tell where. He had formerly been employed at a restaurant in Chillicothe.

He returned home because he needed clothes and money. He comes home to see his mothr each day. Mrs. Morrow stated that she was going to allow him to continue working. She believes the steady work will be better for him than the treatments at the government hospital.

Morrow was shell shocked in the late war. He served for 15 months in France.

SOCIAL CLUB TO ENTERTAIN

Robert Morris Social club will entertain with a luncheon honoring Mrs. Francis Yeager at the Southern hotel on Monday, March 5. Saturday noon all reservations must be in the hands of the committee consisting of Mrs. Rea Fishbaugh, Mrs. Emery Bender and Mrs. Ralph Jacobs. Entertainment is being arranged by Mrs. Herbert Deems, Mrs. C. H. Nowell and Mrs. Lou Grimstead.

Gets Fireman's Job

Thomas Morgan, 848 S. Terrace St., has been appointed stationary fireman for the new City hall, Service Director Duffy announced Saturday. The salary of the position is $140 per month.

Lawn Beauty Is Subject of P.-T. A.

Members of the John Burroughs P.-T. A. will meet at the school with other neighborhood residents on Friday night, 7:30, to discuss the beautification of the individual lawns of the community. R. E. Shank will address the group.

Teachers at the school have pointed out the opportunities for improvements in the school district and hope to get co-operation from the residents in regard to this matter.

CLOSES THREE WEEKS MEETING

Rev. C. E. Miller, pastor of the Burgess Ave. U. B. church, closed a three-weeeks evangelistic campaign in the First U. B. church of Chillicothe, last Sunday evening, and will occupy his own pulpit next Sunday.

Rev. Miller reports a great meeting marked by unusually large crowds and scores accepting Jesus Christ and lining up with His church.

Abandon Stolen Car

A man and a woman riding in an automobile stolen from D. J. Robbins, 166 Binns Blvd., abandoned the machine and escaped on foot Tuesday when overtaken by Corporal Fraher and Policeman R. L. Johnson in a police car.

After the man and his companion had jumped, the car continued on its way until it crashed into a machine owned by Clarence Nonnamaker, 61 N. Cassady Ave., parked at 831 Idlewood Ave.

The restrictions on salmon fishing are somewhat different in Canadian waters from those in American waters. In order that the fishermen may know at night when they are fishing in the waters of one country or another, it has been decided to place a powerful searchlight marking the boundary between Canada and Alaska.

H. C. SHETRONE HEADS MUSEUM

Hilltop Man Appointed to Succeed Dr. W. C. Mills at Director of O. S. Museum.

Henry C. Shetrone, 75 N. Chase Ave., was named director of the Ohio State Museum, when the board of trustees of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society met on Friday afternoon. He succeeds the late Dr. William C. Mills.

Mr. Shetrone has been connected with the museum for the past 14 years. Until this time he has held the position of curator of archaeology.

The most outstanding work in the past years has been the exploration and excavation of the prehistoric Indian mounds of the state. He has added much to the society through his published reports along this line. He will continue to supervise this work during the summer.

Dr. E. F. Greenman of the University of Michigan will take the place of Mr. Shetrone as curator. He is at present curator of the University of Michigan Museum.

Mr. Shetrone has been a resident of the Hilltop for many years. He formerly lived on North Burgess avenue for nine years.

"Our ambition is to give Ohio the best state museum in the country," Mr. Shetrone stated when asked about the future work of the museum.

John Burroughs Enrollment 1080

The present enrollment at John Burroughs school is 1080, Miss Daisy Charters, principal announced this week. The figure for last semester was 1121. This decrease is due in part to several withdrawals.

The 1B grade will be placed on half time schedule at the beginning of the week due to the crowded conditions. All others are on full time schedule. Seventy-two children in the 1B grade will be affected by this change.

On Scandal Staff

Mary F. Short, 611 S. Warren Ave., senior in the College of Journalism, at Ohio State university, is circulation manager of "The Red Rasseberry," scandal sheet which will make its appearance on the campus tomorrow.

The paper is issued once each year by Theta Sigma Phi, honorary and professional journalism sorority.

Miss Short is also managing editor of the Lantern, university daily on Tuesday and has charge of the society columns of the Record.

CHOIR TO PRESENT MUSICAL CONCERT

The Hilltop Church of Christ choir, assisted by Mrs. Beatice Birtcher, reader, will present a musical concert and readings at the church, Burgess avenue and Olive street, Wednesday evening, March 7. The choir is under the direction of Ivan H. Reed.

NEW LIGHTS

Traffic Lights Placed at Broad-Hague, Sullivant-Richardson

Two traffic stop lights were put into use on the Hilltop on Friday afternoon. They are located at Hague avenue and West Broad street and at Richardson and Sullivant avenues.

These lights were installed as an aid to children from West Broad street and John Burroughs schools.

Janitors from both schools are on duty at noon and evening and guard the lights. The lights continue throughout the day until late in the evening.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

Frank S. Shuman when he spoke before the Columbus Real Estate Board recently pointed out the fact that advertising was vital to the success of any store.

It's just another statement of an old adage and it works from the angle of the merchant and the customer. To the merchant it means increased sales, quick turnover and therefore greater net profits. To the customer it means a saving in time and trouble and a money saving as well if the ads are read and discretion is used in following them.

It pays to read the ads.

GRADE CROSSING ELIMINATION

When the work of eliminating the West Broad street grade crossing at the Big Four railroad begins the problem of routing traffic past this point will confront the public.

Construction work on this project will undoubtedly require several months. To care for this traffic a short detour around this point should be provided for the convenience of the public traveling this route.

We hope while this construction work is in progress the public will not be compelled to travel over a long detour over roads and streets that were not built to carry such a heavy traffic. The shortest route should be provided and then a roadway constructed that will amply care for this traffic and save time for the public and money for the taxpayer in the repair of roads and streets.

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS

The industrial conditions in Columbus looks much brighter for the near future. With the steel plant taking on additional men, the Ralston Steel Car Co., to take on 800 men, and the prospects of the Ford Motor Co. branch soon to resume operations, business conditions will improve materially.

With these companies placing more men on the payroll it will mean an increased business in all lines of industry in the city.

GREATER SAFETY

Installation of traffic lights at Broad street and Hague avenue, the location of the West Broad Street school, and at Richardson avenue and Sullivant avenue at John Burroughs school will afford much needed protection to the children attending these schools.

Not only will these children get the benefit of these safety lights, but they add much to the safety of the public at these crossings, especially duging the rush hours of traffic in the evening.

We hope council members may see their way clear to installing lights at other congested corners on West Broad street.

Don' little things yourself ain't no savin' if you could be usin' the time for big ones.

Voguish Spring Coats Stress Prestige of Novelty Tweed

All signs point to an exceedingly "tweedy" season for topcoats. The woman who does not sport either a tweed coat or a tweed ensemble will surely be the exception. In the matter of cloakings tweed emphasizes an infinite variety of mannish mixtures whose colorings and patternings fascinate in their novelty and bold motifs.

The model in the picture is such as moves in the very vanguard of the spring style parade. Its striking all-over patterning is done in white and gray, the latter shaded from dark to light. These ombre colorings which tone in a crescendo from pale to deep are prominent in materials of every sort, at present. The collar of silver fox tones in perfectly with the general color scheme of the coat.

Versatility is the word for fashionable tweeds. Not a dull moment do they register in point either of color, design, weight or weave.

If you happen to be wanting a spehyr-weight tweed for a frock you will find scores of them "as light as a feather" awaiting your choice, and in a bewildering array of stunning patternings. To be really chic, they should be made up with the selvedge left for the edge finishings instead of hems, bindings or facings.

The colorings of these lightweight tweeds must be seen to be appreciated. They are adorable and are the rage.

If fancy turns to somwhat heavier tweeds, why not try one of the loose weaves, which are the big thought at this moment for ensemble of skirt and three-quarter length coat? Yours is the privilege of choosing between a twist verdon woven in intermingled colors without defining any pattern ing or a weave which suggests a subtle design employing two tones in its construction. In making up the garment the "classy" thing to do is to fray the edges into a self-fringe instead of hemming or otherwise finishing.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"KNOCKING THE SPOTS OUT OF HIM"

This is an expression used very frequently in common speech in the sense of overwhelming superiority or a "walk-away" victory. Of late it has come into use to express punishment or chastisement, but it is with the meaning of showing superiority of skill and achieving an easy victory that it had its origin.

The saying comes to us from the days when every household had its firearms and even children were taught to use them. Marksmanship was the great accomplishment. And though William Tell was dared to shoot an apple off his own son's head, the usual test of much vaunted skill in this direction was to make the target a playing card and the man who could "knock the spots" out of this was admitted to be an expert marksman and an easy winner in any contest.

And so the expression has come down to us to be used in the broader application of unquestionable victory in whatever the matter may be that is under discussion.

DO NOT CHOOSE TO WED---JOE

Pros and Cons of Collegiate Married Life Fail to Influence Joe; Safety in Numbers.

Just one thing after another happens at a big school or a little one either for that matter but the folks back home are always in on them and when they hear of any thing of interest they begin to wonder if their own children are in any way connected with it.

So it was with Joe and Josephine last week. The mail one morning brought a letter from home but instead of bearing the much appreciated check brought the inquiry if there was any thought in the minds of either as to marriage while in college. Now to trace the matter back we learn that the folks had read an article on marriage in college and their interest was aroused.

Two notable Tennessee educators gave the statements out last week that both pro and con. One stated that marriage while in college was alright because the two persons involved had many things in common and would be a help to each other. He also stated that the student should be single hearted in his love. The other pointed out that students were in most cases unable to judge personalities and should wait until they have had the friendships of many others before making this important decision.

So the folks wanted to know if Joe and Josephine had been in such a state of mind. To make the replies to the question satisfactory they agreed to write home in behalf of the other. And here are the letters:

Dear Folks: We aren't married yet and the prospects are rotten. Believe it or not but there is too much going on here to get so interested as to propose even. And what's the use anyway? Too much fun would be lost in the tie up. And as for Joe, he believes there is safety in numbers. He has so many on the string that he could hardly decide upon any one. And Joe has been studying more than usual this quarter so you have no worry about him.

Josephine.

Dear Folks: Don't worry about the marriage of either Josephine or myself. We are as strong as Gibralter you know. And besides where would I get money to provide for a wife when it's all I can do now to have a date. Josephine is safe too. You should see how the fellows swing her about. As long as there is more than one willing to furnish the good time she is safe. I'll see that she doesn't take the fatal step, folks.

Joe.

Dr. James, Congregationalist University pastor says that such young folks have the right idea and should wait until after school days to make the tie. He also says that companionate marriage is a selfish attitude.

LUCY SHOPS ON HILLTOP

Yes, I have been shopping again. You have guessed it, I like to shop. Have you seen those lovely taffeta pillows in the window at the Hilltop Furniture store. I liked the one of blue taffeta trimmed with two bands of gold cloth. There were two like that in the window but I liked the one with the least amount of gold. There was an orchid one there too, that was really beautiful, if you like dainty colors.

Speaking of pillows recalls the fact that they have to be paid for out of someone's purse so what could be more appropriate than to drop into Seiller's and see what is what in handbags. And as someone has said "We come. We saw. We—etc." The only difference being that I was conquered. There is a nifty handbag which is really accomodating enough, that the nightie can be stored in one side and the clean stockings in the other and what more could one wish for when there is also a coin purse compartment and another for compacts, lipsticks and what have you?

In spite of the groundhog, spring is coming, so naturally my roving eye was attracted by the lovely artificial flowers in the window of the Artcraft store. A little sign informs all that "Orders are taken." Some day I am going to go in and see if they will take orders from me—no one will at home.

Have you been looking for a small or rather thin vanity which can be slipped into that little inside pocket of your coat without giving the impression that you had stuffed a piece of the birthday cake in your pocket when no one was looking? I found just the thing at a local drug store. It is made by the House of Tre Jour and is about the size of a man's watch, one of the new thin ones. Yes, I finished the day of shopping with one of those delicious chocolate sodas.

I'll be seeing you next week.

Debunking History

The month of presidents ended yesterday. And three of the world's most famous men were born in the month someone tells us. Therefore it must be a famous month—at least to Americans because the great men we refer to were fellow countrymen. And as to their birthdays being in the month of February we will not be positive because from a historical standpoint one cannot always be exact.

• • • •

This is a critical age. If you don't believe it just ask the bookstores what their best sellers are. Their reply will assure you that those who criticise others in their books are the ones who are the favorite authors.

• • • •

And along with it goes the fact that today some of these popular writers have taken it upon themselves to debunk history. From the sale of their books they must be having much success.

• • • •

Which brings us to the point where we are told that Johnnie or Mary should no longer be taught that our old favorite, George, cut down the cherry tree, never told a lie, or threw the dollar across the Potomac. No one has disputed the fact that he was the first president—not yet.

• • • •

It may be true that he didn't throw the dollar across the river because no one has been able to find it as yet. But he probably saved it for the winter at Valley Forge.

• • • •

But who are the heroes for the younger generation if we are to discard Washington, Lincoln, and the many others who are falling within the track of the debunker?

• • • •

We leave the problem to those who may know more on the subject but for our own use we begin to wonder more and more. If children of today follow the examples of the elders or hear the stories of the debunker will they soon begin to doubt the world's history and make one to suit their own tastes?

• • • •

Having it thus we would be told that Paul Revere on his famous ride mounted a bicycle or took a taxi instead of the nag that helped him to make the 18th of April, '75, a famous day.

• • • •

And who would not be in favor of having the substance of the Boston tea party changed to homebrew? And to take the bunk out of Bunker Hill we would be told that there were no white in those British eyes.

• • • •

Possibly Lincoln never pulled the pig out of the mud because we don't believe a pig with any hog sense at all would get into the mud so deep that he couldn't get out. We are told that the story of Honest Abe's rail splitting is all wrong because instead he was a maker of toothpicks.

• • • •

To make the later history more natural we would have the king of Spain say to his two best admirals: "We must war upon the U. S. in order to make history. We can't lick her but one of you bozoes must go out and fire upon the Maine." And so they drew straws and the war was on.

• • • •

We do not wish to have the responsibility of placing the blame for the late war on anyone but among the possibilities are Germany, Russia, France, England, Italy, Belgium, Poland, Austria Hungary and United States. But the debunking historians would probably lay the blame at the feet of the island of Pago Pago or Tierra Del Fuego.

• • • •

So goes it with the debunker in history. But we have no worry for 'tis a big world and the truth will be out regardless of the size. Heroes are heroes and will always be with us. And history is history and cannot be held up. So taking the three we will have heroes in history regardless of the debunker.

ATTICS ALWAYS CLOSE TO HEART OF CHILD

The attic is perhaps the most fascinating room of all. Here is found the answer as to why these little houses of New England have endured. Every one of the great timbers is hand hewn and put together with hand-made wooden pegs—construction such as this defies time and the elements. Before one window is a fine old pine table; there is another Boston rocker; quaint little footstools and a sea chest which has been in the house since one of the first sea captains waved good-by to his family, standing beside the lilacs in the dooryard, and set out, his sea chest going with him, for trade and adventure upon the seven seas.

Still above this old attic clings the faint aroma of apples and herbs which once were hung there to dry. And it holds countless memories of children who have played here on rainy days or on cold days of the New England winter when the drifts were piled high over the picket fence and the surrounding country lay buried beneath a blanket of snow. One can imagine the first children playing at being pilgrims and a later generation at being Indians, after the reality of Indians had lost its terror. But whatever the games they played, they were sure to seek the mysterious attic where there were trunks to rummage in, dusky corners to explore and apples to eat.—Arts and Decorations.

Coffee Cake

1 egg.
Butter the size of an egg.
½ cup of sugar.
1 cup sweet milk.
2½ cups flour.
2 teaspoons baking powder.

Cream butter and sugar, mix baking powder into flour and stir flour and milk into butter and sugar, add beaten egg and pour mixture into two cake pans. Sprinkle sugar and cinnamon on top and bake in moderate oven.

Devil Food Cake

2 cups brown sugar.
1 scant cup butter.
3 eggs.
2 tablespoons cocoa
1 cup sour cream.
1 level teaspoon soda.
3 cups sifted flour.
Pinch of salt.

Mix dry ingredients and butter, add eggs and cream, stir well and pour into pans. Eggs do not have to be beaten separately. This method saves the use of numerous pans and other utensils.

Rice Delight

1 cup of cooked rice.
1½ cups cream whipped.
1 cup of brown sugar.
½ cup water.

Fold the rice when cold into the whipped cream. Make a syrup of the brown sugar and water by boiling five minutes, cool; when ready to serve, pile the rice in sherbets and pour syrup over.

Fudge

3 cups sugar.
1 cup milk.
3 tablespoons of light corn syrup.
4 tablespoons cocoa.
4 tablespoons butter.
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Mix cocoa and sugar, add corn syrup and milk. Cook, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Do not stir after fudge begins to boil. Remove from fire when fudge forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water, or temperature of 234 degrees has been reached. Add the butter without stirring, cool until it is lukewarm (110 degrees). Add vanilla and beat fudge until it will hold its shape when dropped from a spoon. Pour into greased pans and cut into squares.

The corn syrup is used to insure a smoother texture and to improve the keeping qualities.

More than four million new poles for telegraph, telephone, and other electric and power companies are needed every year in the United States. These have to be cut from the country's forests, and the problem of decreasing timber supplies and increasing demand for poles is beginning to be serious. In one night's sleet storm, in February, 1927, 763 poles were lost near Baltimore. The tips of Douglas fire which grows as high as a sixteen-story office building furnish many telephone poles. Other trees used are northern white cedar from the lakes states; yellow pine from the South; red cedar, lodgepole pine, and Englemann spruce from the Northwest; and southern white cedar, which is used where there is little danger from ice storms. When a tree is to be cut for a telephone pole, a "topper" climbs up, trimming off all the branches and topping the trunk, so that when the tree falls it will not break others with its sweeping limbs.

Donald's Inheritance

By MRS. E. O. CARLSTON | Author of "Double Deception" and "For Freedom."

"Yes, but where did you get your information. You seem to know all about it."

"Just received a wire from Fred Poston," the young man explained. "How did you hear of it?"

"The cook admitted a tramp this morning at breakfast time, who placed this letter under his plate, demanding a ransom for her release. Here is the note. You may read it."

It was a short note demanding ten thousand dollars for the missing girl's release, explaining that she would be in no danger, unless the delay should be unusually long. It named a place where the money should be placed, and warned against interference of the law.

"I think that I should engage the services of a detective to locate the girl," Mr. Bernswick said.

Donald considered the advisability of such a move.

"I don't know," he said slowly. "If we only knew whether or not the threats they have made are only bluffs, it would be easier to decide."

"A loss of ten thousand dollars would embarrass me financially," Mr. Bernswick said. "But my girl's welfare is more important than my financial condition."

"The trouble is that you may give them the required amount, and then be requested to send more," Donald said, thoughtfully. "If I were you, I should not be hasty about meeting their demands."

Soon, Donald returned to his home, where he retired to the privacy of his room, so that he could think without being interrupted. Was the abduction of Esther Bernswick and the theft of his father's will—both acts being committed the same day—merely a coincidence? Why had Esther been the victim? Was it only for the purpose of obtaining the ransom money, demanded of her father? Donald's conjecture was that James Clinton was responsible for both acts; and knowing his foster-brother, Donald felt certain that James would never carry out his threat, of his volition. The deeper lay in the fact that those assisting James would be less cowardly, and even more brutal.

The young man finally decided to return to the cabin belonging to Fred Poston. He looked at his watch, and, going to the telephone, called the railway depot to learn when the next train would leave for Burlington, a city which was in the opposite direction from Starkville. He was informed that, according to schedule, the train was due in thirty minutes. He rang the bell for Smith, who immediately answered the summons.

"Tell Harry to prepare to drive over to the depot at once. I am going to Burlington," he added, which information he desired the man to give anyone who would be likely to inquire of his whereabouts.

When he purchased his ticket, he perceived that he was being watched. To the ticket agent, he pronounced the name "Burlington," in a very low tone, which was really loud enough to create the impression that he was going to Burlington, but did not want his going to be known to anyone.

After an hour's ride, he arrived at Burlington, unobserved, as the man at the depot of his home city had evidently not considered it necessary to follow him. In Burlington, Donald boarded a train for Stirkville, where he intended to begin his search for the missing girl.

CHAPTER XII

It was late the following evening when Donald arrived at his destination. The general atmosphere pervading around the little group occupying the cabin belonging to Fred Poston had been changed during his absence, as a result from repeated failures to find the girl who had been missing from the cabin for several days.

The first person to greet Donald was Fred Poston, whose haggard expression betrayed hours of mental agony. He had lost all interest in the plans he had made to make his chum the victim of a joke. Still, he refrained from enlightening his friend regarding the state of affairs, as he did not want to say anything that would detract Donald's attention from the subject now uppermost in his mind.

"Any news regarding Esther?" Donald asked, as he entered the cabin followed by Fred, who shook his head sadly, in response to the question.

"Have you tried to find her?"

"Of course," Fred replied, somewhat indignantly. "I spent about an hour on the porch of the hotel at Starkville trying to waken the sheriff, as soon as I discovered that she had disappeared. When he finally opened his eyes, and registered the facts connected with the case in that dull brain of his, he finally mounted his horse, and, ordering his deputies to follow him, went to the shack in the woods where Esther and I discovered James Clinton had been living, as we could think of no one else who would be at the bottom of the things."

"Did you find James?" Donald inquired.

"No, the hut was empty."

"Do you suppose they discovered that you had learned of their whereabouts?"

"Possibly, though I do not know how," Fred replied.

Disappointment showed plainly on the countenance of Donald. He had considered the woodland hut, where his brother had been living, a valuable clue. The only thing to be done now, was to learn where his brother had gone after leaving the hut.

Donald rose to his feet with an air of determination, which was no doubt strengthened by the appearance of a pair of blue eyes in the doorway connecting with the kitchen. After greeting the girl in a rather demonstrative fashion, he left the house, first announcing his intention of talking the matter over with Farmer Greene.

"That old gentleman has spent the greater part of his life in the woods. Quite likely, he would be able to track James to his new place of abode. I shall speak to him about it, any way."

After Donald had gone, Fred and his cousin, who was still posing as an ordinary servant girl, went outdoors to enjoy the night air.

"Audrey, I wish you would tell me everything that you know about James Clinton," Fred said, coaxingly.

"Why?" the girl asked.

"Because you may know something, which, though it may seem unimportant to you, would connect indirectly with this little mystery surrounding Esther's disappearance."

Thus urged, Audrey gave a full account of her friendship with the foster-brother of Donald Clinton, omitting nothing, and concluding her story with an account of the evening when she, Esther Bernswick and Mr. Bernswick had seen James Clinton driving with another woman through the streets of Waterford on a night when he had told Audrey that he would be away from the city "on business."

The girl told of her sudden impulse to follow the car in which James and his companion were riding.

"We followed them to a rooming house on Hawthorne street. I suppose that is where the woman lives."

"Did you ever have reason to suppose that anyone was jealous of you because of James Clinton's professed love for you?" Fred asked.

After a moment's consideration, Audrey replied:

"Only once. I received an anonymous letter advising me to beware of James Clinton, also his brother. I thought at the time that jealousy prompted the writing of the letter. Since then, however, I have been compelled to admit that part of the advice was worth taking, though I cannot understand why Donald's name was mentioned."

"I can guess why," Fred replied. "The person that wrote that note liked James Clinton, but was jealous of his regard for you. The allusion made to his brother was for the benefit of James. This person, being a friend to James, wished to prevent Donald from complying with the request made in Mr. Clinton's will."

"Your theory may be correct," Audrey said. "But what has all of this to do with Esther's disappearance? We are spending too much time making idle conjectures. We need to act, to do something, quickly," Audrey said, in an excited tone.

"Don't be too impatient, my dear. I am as much concerned over her fate as you are, probably more so," he added under his breath, with a deep sigh. "But we must have a clue to work on. Otherwise, we may lose valuable time and accomplish nothing."

"Perhaps you are right; but I do wish we could find her; that we could go to her tonight."

"Has it ever occurred to you that Esther might have been mistaken for you?" Fred asked.

"But why has a request for ransom money been sent to Mr. Bernswick?"

"They probably discovered they had made a mistake, and felt that they should be paid for their trouble from some source."

"Why doesn't Mr. Bernswick send the ransom money as he has been requested to do?" Audrey asked, stamping her foot impatiently.

"He intends to, if we are unable to locate her within the next few days."

"Then you think that the woman whom I saw with James Clinton may be at the bottom of this?"

"It is only a guess, of course," Fred answered. "But I think the clue is worth following up."

"If our idea that Esther was taken away by mistake is correct, do you think James Clinton could be implicated? I don't believe anyone taking orders from him would have made such an error, as he would be more accurate in his description," Audrey said.

"It seems that the person responsible for her disappearance is working independently of James," Fred admitted.

"All we can do is to go to the house where this woman lives. (I remember her address) and if she still lives there watch the movements of anyone who calls on her. We must be careful, though. If we are on the right track, and are suspected of spying, it may make the situation worse than ever for Esther."

"Who's the detective now?" Fred said, with a laugh.

"Oh, I may be all wrong, but all we can do is look into the matter, keeping an eye on this mysterious woman and also on James Clinton, if we can succeed in locating him.

"I wish that Esther had never come to this place. Yet, if she hadn't, possibly I would never have become so well acquainted with her," Fred said.

"Then you care for her, Fred?" Audrey asked.

"More than life," the young man replied.

"I don't blame you," she replied. "I always liked Es better than any of my girl friends. Now, since she has gone away, nobody knows where—"

Audrey began to cry.

Fred placed his arm around her, and drew her head to a resting place on his shoulder.

"Cry as much as you like. It will do you good."

Although Audrey and Fred were cousins, they had spent many hours together since early childhood, and were more like brother and sister than a great many who can truthfully claim the relationship. However, this fact being unknown to a certain person who had just returned to the cabin, and finding it practically deserted, had made a search of the ground to locate his friends, it was little wonder that a glimpse of Audrey and Fred, seated side by side under the large oak tree, in their present position, should send him with flying speed, bewildered brain and aching heart to the interior of the cabin. His mind reverted to the day when he had revealed his increasing affection to the girl whom Fred was now holding in his arms.

"Is it possible that she permits that from anyone but me?" Donald wondered. "Still, what right have I to expect her to be true to me. I have promised her nothing. But, hang it all, any way. What's wrong with Fred? I supposed that a secret understanding existed between him and Esther. One would judge so from his manner toward her. Now, he can make love to someone else without caring what Esther may be enduring."

If Fred had known his chum's opinion of him, at that moment, he would not have entered the living room, preceded by the girl, with such an air of confidence.

"Did you find Farmer Greene at home?" he asked, as he took possession of an easy chair, while his cousin, instantly noticing that Donald was rather "out of sorts," sat down in a shadowy corner of the room to learn what the trouble was about.

"Yes," Donald answered shortly, in response to Fred's question.

"Did he promise to help you search for your brother?"

"Yes," snappishly.

"I suppose he will use that big dog of his to assist in the search."

"Yes."

"That all you can say?"

"No."

"Well, I'll be hanged. What's eatin' you? Why don't you talk, mah. This 'yes' and 'no' stuff doesn't sound like you at all."

Donald had just discovered that he possessed a certain quality heretofore unknown to him—jealousy. The remembrance of the scene he had witnessed between Fred and the girl whom he was learning to care for, enraged and infuriated him. His only defense, he reflected, in the few moments time that elapsed before he replied to Fred's remark, was to let the girl do a little worrying, too. If he could make her think that he was utterly indifferent to her, that his melancholy mood resulted from his love for another person, she would never know the agony of heart and mind that he had experienced when he had seen her in another's arms.

"Pardon me for being so impolite in my speech; but if you cared as much for that girl as I do, you would be acting queer, too," Donald said, trying to make the statement sound natural.

"Why Don! To whom are you referring?" Fred asked, his eyes glancing toward the corner of the room where his cousin was gazing at Donald, spellbound with astonishment.

"That is an odd question. Isn't it natural that I should worry over Esther's disappearance? It is maddening."

Fred rose unsteadily from his chair. Of course, Donald would be concerned over the girl's welfare, but why did it affect him so deeply? Why had he used the word "cared"? Fred crossed the room to where Donald was standing, and placed his hands on Donald's shoulders.

"Is is possible that you care for her, too?" he asked, looking steadily into his chums eyes. Donald did not reply to the question, but turned away from his chum and left the room. Left alone, Fred and Audrey exchanged glances.

"I am disappointed in him," Fred said. "His every act during the past few days indicated that he was head over heels in love with you. Now, he hints that he loves another even better than you."

"I'm glad I found it out," Audrey said, her voice trembling slightly, "before it was too late." But the moisture in her eyes belied her words.

"I'll give that young man a piece of my mind," Fred said, indignantly. "No one can trifle with you and get by." He started swiftly toward the door which connected with the bedroom shared by the two young men. Audrey caught him by the arm.

"Don't you dare, Fred Poston!" she said. "Please don't mention the matter to him."

"Don't worry. I shall not say anything that would humiliate you."

Then he entered the room, where he found Donald with his face buried in his hands.

"Come out of it, Don. We'll find Esther, without a doubt, if we have to pay the ransom requested. In the meantime, you don't want—ah—Miss Gordon to get away. You remember the condition of your father's will. You have scarcely spoken to her since you returned from the city."

"It's no use, Fred. I couldn't get through the marriage ceremony with her, if my life depended upon it. I intend to release her from her promise tomorrow."

"So that you will be free to win Esther?" Fred asked, anxiously.

"Yes."

Fred said no more. He had reasons to believe that Esther would choose him in preference to Donald Clinton but as no verbal agreement had been made, and because Donald was a likable person, he felt as though a barrier had been placed between him and the girl whom he loved.

Impatiently, he untied the shoestrings of his brown oxfords, which showed the results of mountain climbing, being sadly scuffed. With a vicious kick, he sent them flying to the opposite side of the room, and within ten minutes, he had sandwiched himself between the blankets of the bed he and Donald shared together.

So, that day ended. Three people, the victims of a general misunderstanding, tossed restlessly from side to side. Audrey, upstairs with her aunt and the woman who was temporarily posing as an heiress, lay awake for long hours, wondering why Donald's affection had been transferred from her to Esther Bernswick. She yearned for, yet dreaded, Esther's return to the cabin, as, being youthfully optomistic, she felt assured that the girl would be found within a few days.

"How can I bear to see Donald making advances toward her right under my eyes? And how will Fred stand it. But after all, it is entirely up to her, and I believe she would prefer Fred. But that does not help my trouble. I do not wish to be 'second choice'."

Finally, she fell asleep, to dream of the day only a week before, when Donald had kissed her, passionately, longingly.

Downstairs, Donald lived over and over again the same event which made Audrey's dream a pleasant one. Then he would think of the scene he had witnessed that evening: his chum and the girl of his dreams with her head resting on Fred's shoulder, his arm about her waist. Fred, perhaps, was less downhearted than either of the other two, as, after all, Esther was the person who would have to decide which of the two she preferred.

CHAPTER XIII

Near the outskirts of the town of Burton, stood an old mansion, which had been considered a wonderful piece of architecture in its day. To look at the weatherworn, delapidated building, one would never suspect that any part of it was occupied. Window panes were broken, doors were loose on their hinges, the lawn was full of high weeds and shrubbery that had been long neglected. The crumbling chimneys, sagging roof, decaying foundation—all gave to the structure a forlorn and forbidding appearance.

However, in the eastren wing of the old mansion, a section entirely concealed from view of the road on which the house faced, was several rooms which had recently been made safe for habitation. The first floor of this part of the house was unoccupied, but on the second floor, three rooms had been cheaply furnished, containing only bare necessities, such as chairs, a table, two beds, and an oil stove.

The two people now living there presented a striking contrast to one another—one being a coarse featured, sharp-eyed woman, whose features showed the marks mercilessly made by the years. Her companion was a young woman, who despite, the fact that her eyes showed signs of worry and weariness, was the possessor of beautiful features and an attractive personality.

"How long am I to be held here?" she asked the older woman, who had been employed to guard the girl, to prevent her escape.

"Until I git orders from the boss to let you go," was the response.

"Who is the boss?"

No answer.

"I know of no reason why I should be held here against my will. Do you?"

"Yer father says y' kin stay here 'till y' make up yer mind to forgit that man yer engaged to. Yer sister is comin' today to see you, though, so brace up."

"My father! My sister!" the girl exclaimed, in dismay. "Why, woman, my father had nothing to do with this. He is probably frantic over my disappearance this very minute; and I have no sister."

"Don't try to fool me. I ain't as dumb as I look. Yer father has paid me well to keep an eye on you, and I expect to do that very thing."

Irish? You'll Like "Blarney" Then. Football Takes Screen at Rivoli

Haunts

"The Beauty Shoppers" with Mae Busch and Doris Hill starts the week at the Ritz. It will be shown tonight. It is the story of a western family and the tribulations they run into when they came east. It will be a scream to see the young heroine go bluntering up to the Fifth avenue mansion of her cousin. But she later learns that it is not her cousin. Anyway, things work out well for a suitable finish.

Ken Maynard

Circuses aren't a thing of the past but the old fashioned wagon show is seldom heard of anymore. Ken Maynard in "The Wagon Show" at the Ritz on Saturday brings back the days of the old shows in the thrilling stunts he pulls under the big top. George Davis a famous clown also has a part in the show.

"Man Crazy"

'Dorable Dorothy is what they call her on the filming deck and her real name is Dorothy Mackaill. She with Jack Mulhall, the star of "The Poor Nut" are at the Ritz on Sunday and Monday in "Man Crazy." Even a truck driver can get his woman when she happens to be man crazy. In this case he cured her of her craziness though and proved to the world that all women aren't always man crazy.

Pioneering

A story of the great outdoors—herds of buffalo—mining camps—army posts—settler's cabins—covered wagons—plainsmen—everything picturesque . . . That's "Men of Daring" all the way through. It is at the Ritz on Tuesday.

"Blarney"

Who doesn't like some blarney some of the time. In the picture at the Ritz on Wednesday it is liked throughout. Why? Because Renee Adoree has the lead. And much of the credit for the success of the picture goes to Ralph Graves, too.

The old days in New York are recalled as the bare knuckled fighters pound each other to a standstill. Here we have James Carabine the champion of Ireland in America. And the love story of the picture makes it a world's champion.

Like Football?

Here's a chance to see a real college football story. "The Drop Kick," shown at the Rivoli on Thursday and Friday is just that and a lot more with a set of people that can carry the parts of real collegians. Richard Barthelmess, Barbara Kent, Dorothy Revier and Alberta Vaughn are the leading stars.

Ten national college football stars have parts in the picture.

When everything seems to go wrong with the coach, the team and the college it only takes a drop kick from a difficult angle to make things right. And to further complications what is to be done when the best player is found to be paying attention to the coaches' wife?

Two Dog Pictures

"The Silent Avenger" on Saturday at the Rivoli is supported by Thunder, the wonder dog. And the favorite of all dogs is probably Rin-Tin-Tin who comes to the silver sheet on Sunday and Monday at the Rivoli in "Tracked by the Police."

This is a story of the great northwest, a lovely girl, mounted police and the dog favorite of the screen. The sense of the dogs used in this picture is what might be called more than unusual. They are the next thing to human and carry the parts through in a manner that is very surprising.

"Nevada"

Zane Grey's famous novel "Nevada" is at the Rivoli on Tuesday and Wednesday. It is a story of the west when a man's best friend was his horse and his gun, when women were heroines when cattle rustlers were famous in the bad lands and the scenic beauty of the west is made outstanding. Nevada, a two-gun man changes from bad to better and turns his shooting ability on the forces that are destroying the law and in return wins the respect of men and the love of the girl, who by the way is Thelma Todd. The gun man is Gary Cooper.

OBITUARY

MRS. FLORA M. LOFFER

Mrs. Loffer died last Thursday night at her home, 179 N. Park Ave., from a complication of diseases. She was 75 years of age, and is survived by a son, Oliver C.; four daughters, Mrs Alice Watkins, Mrs W. H. Muth, Mrs. H. H. Fuller and Miss Mary Loffer, and a sister. Funeral services were held Saturday morning from the late residence. Burial was made in Fairview cemetery, Quincy, Ohio, in charge of Glenn L. Myers. She was a member of the Nazarene church.

MRS. MARY JOSEPHINE LESLIE

Mrs. Leslie, 70, wife of Isaiah Leslie, 2339 W. Broad St., died from heart disease at her home Sunday. Six daughters, three sons, three brothers and two sisters survive. Funeral services were held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at the residence. Burial was made at Galloway by C. J. Kohn.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to extend my thanks to all those who sent me flowers, cards and fruit during my illness. Also to those who called on me or called over phone.
Editha Smith.

HILLTOP BUILDING PERMITS FALL OFF

Building permits for last week took a decided drop as far as the Hilltop is concerned. Only four permits were issued for buildings in this section. This was partly due to the cold weather of last week.

The following permits have been issued:

G. D. Moore, 12 Whittethorne Ave., two-story frame dwelling at 236 Bixby Blvd., $6500.

Melvin Love, 1327 Sullivant Ave., frame dwelling at 328 Wrexham Ave., value, $6000.

E. F. Cline, 391 Midland Ave., two-story frame dwelling, 180 Nashoba Ave., value, $4000.

George H. Woda, 681 S. Warren Ave., two story frame dwelling, 75 Westmoor Ave., value $5000

School libraries are being installed more rapidly than librarians with the necessary educational and professional qualifications can be found to take charge of them, says the United States Bureau of Education. The number of graduates in 1926 from library schools in the United States was two hundred less than the number required to meet the need for graduate librarians.

LIBRARY PLANS STILL DELAYED

Two Committees Will Recommend Possible Sites for New West Side Branch Library.

A committee was appointed at the meeting of the Holmes Hilltop Library association on Tuesday afternoon to co-operate with a committee from the Hilltop Business Men's association in recommending to the City Library Board a suitable location for the West Side Branch library.

The library board committee is made up of Rev. A. C. Baughman and C. W. Michel. The committee from the Hilltop Business Men's association consists of M. W. Seiller, H. G. Butler and W. L. Millikin.

It was reported at the library board meeting that the city library board had been delayed in approving sites for the branch libraries due to vacancies on the board and several members being out of the city.

Average circulation for January and February at the Holmes library was 160 books per day.

The following are members of the Holmes Library board: L. A. Holmes, donor of the books, Rev. O. F. Barber, Rev. H. C. Hutchison, Mrs. H. E. Sharp, Mrs. Nangan, Mrs. Schults, R. O. Harrison, C. W. Michel and Mrs. L. Woodruff.

The following new books have been received:

Ginger Ella—Ethel Hueston.
The Dancing Silhouette—Natalie Lincoln.
Tappan's Burro—Zane Grey.
The Mad King—Edgar Rice Burroughs.
Little Mr. Thimblefinger—Joel Chandler Harris.
Trail's End—Beth B. Gilchrist.

"WE RUN THINGS"; MOTTO OF WOMEN PROVEN TRUE

"We run things."

These were the words of Mrs. W. H. Riley when she addressed the Sunday school of Hoge Memorial church on Sunday morning in connection with the annual "Women's Day" of the church.

"We" in this case has no reference to Lindbergh and the "Spirit of St. Louis" but instead has reference to the women of the church.

"We paid for the manse, and the only things around here that we don't have a majority in are the Boy Scouts and the Men's Bible class. And we run them," she stated.

There were 420 in attendance at Sunday school. This was an increase of five over last year.

Mrs. Isabel Burnside and Mrs. Lyman Huffman received prizes for having the most daughters present.

P.-T. A. TO HEAR DR. H. J. ARNOLD

Wittenberg Professor Will Talk Before West Broad P.-T. A. Friday Evening.

"What Price Parenthood" will be the subject of the address of Dr. H. J. Arnold, director of the extension department of Wittenberg College, before the meeting of the West Broad Street Parent-Teacher association on Friday evening, March 9, at 7:30 in the school auditorium.

A special effort has been made by the program committee of the P.-T. A. to bring Professor Arnold here. His speech will center about things of interest to every parent. A large attendance is expected.

In addition to the speaker the following will take part in a special program. The Hilltop Trio, composed of Miss Edith Louise Robbins, violin; Mr. Eugene Schneider, cello, and Miss Ethel Greiner, piano, will give several numbers. The West Side Quartet composed of H. G. Deems, Howard Young, Hadyn Jones and D. O. Jenkins will sing. Charles C. Mason will give a baritone solo.

Twenty-seven members of the Boys Glee club of West Broad Street school sang before the council meeting of the Franklin County Parent-Teachers on Thursday, March 1, at the Administration building.

The registration of West Broad School now stands at 1112. There are 110 in the kindergarten and a waiting list, Miss Judd, principal, announces.

Several parents furnished transportation for the children from West Broad who attended the concert of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra at Memorial hall on Monday afternoon. There were 60 from the school present.

W. C. T. U. MEETING

The Hilltop W. C. T. U. will hold an important meeting Friday afternoon, March 9, at the home of Mrs. Roy E. Spring, 2473 Indianola Ave.

Millions Spent for Streets and Sewers

A report from the city engineer, H. H. Simpson, shows that during the past year there were seventy-five paving jobs in the city making a total of 21.96 miles of improved streets. These projects cost $1,926,620.

In addition to the street program there were 23 miles of sewers laid, costing the city $654,165.

These improvements brings the total sewerage to 565.4 miles and the streets to 454 miles. The total investment on this part of the city improvements reaches $23,229,201. The average cost per mile of the city street is $53,298.

ACCIDENTS

Two Hilltop Residents Injured In Week-end Accidents.

Figuring in the Sunday accidents were three Hilltop people. A machine driven by Paul Mitchell, 15, of 646 Nashoba Ave., collided with another at Central avenue and Broad street. Mrs. Hettie Moerch, 48, of 1530 W. Broad St., received bruises while riding in the car of her son when it was hit by Mitchell's car.

Lois Roof, aged 3, of 218 Lechner Ave., was cut over the right eye when the car driven by her father struck another car at Sullivant and Central avenues. The other driver did not make his identity known.

Clarence Kidwell, 715 S. Terrace St., is in Mercy hospital, suffering from wounds received in a three-car accident on the Chillicothe pike north of Shadeville.

L. Seney, Mrs. H. W. Boyd, Mrs. F. O. Moore, Mrs. C. B. Bowers. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Statler and Mrs. Boyd.

CREAM BOTTLE HALTS HOLDUP

Escaped Inmate Caught After Receiving Volley of Milk Bottles Early Sunday.

Howard Sharp, colored, escaped inmate of the bureau of juvenile research, had the cream of the party he attended early Sunday morning. But now he is back in a place that is more suitable for him than are the wide open spaces.

Sharp's party took place in the entrance to the Hilltop Bowling alleys. He waited to greet his guests with something similar to a black jack. But his first caller, A. C. Webb, an employe of the Hamilton Milk Co., did not prove to be a very pleasant [illegible].

As Webb entered the building to deliver milk to the apartments in the building he was greeted with "Stick 'em up" from Sharp. He did stick 'em up but he took a milk bottle with them and suddenly let it fall on the head of the would be hold up man.

It is reported that Sharp ran out of the building and Webb followed with a volley of milk bottles. The last projectile from the milk wagon force was a bottle of cream which evidently reached its mark and halted the flight of Sharp.

Police believe that he is the same maurader that traversed the Hilltop Saturday night.

On Saturday night while on her way to a grocery store Miss Elizabeth Johnson, 41 N. Terrace St., was grabbed and choked by a youth described as wearing the clothes of a hospital inmate. She hit him with her basket and he fled.

Earlier in the same evening a man entered the home of Mrs. C. Leslie, 53 N. Oakley Ave., and demanded that she give him some money. He carried a long piece of wood at the time. She gave him her purse containing about $1 and he left.

Pre-Easter Program At Glenwood Sunday

"The Dawning," by Lyman Bayard will open the pre-Easter program of Glenwood M. E. church next Sunday evening at 7:30. There will be 65 people in the cast of the program.

It will set forth the thoughts and experiences of the disciples and the children of Rome and Jerusalem.

C. J. Randall has one of the leading parts as the Centurion of Calvary. The pageant is given under the direction of Miss Margaret Huffman and her assistants: Miss Annis Turner, Miss Mildred Phalor, Mrs. T. S. Fox, Mrs. J. T. Evans, Mrs. Mary Riddile Walton and Mr. E. E. Kline.

NEW CABLE

Line With 528 Wires Connects New York and St. Louis.

Wonder may have prompted one to ask "Where is the new telephone line going?"

Workmen of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. have been working on the line on the Hilltop for the past week or ten days and will probably finish their job by the last of the week.

The big "wire" is a cable connecting New York with St. Louis. The work has been in progress for the past eight months. It is completed in fifty mile sections. The section including Dayton and Columbus is the last to be completed. Work on this cable has been going on in Columbus for the past month.

The cable contains 528 wires.

First Psalm Song

Chosen from the First Psalm are the words for a vocal solo composed by Mr. Henry Schults of Columbus.

The solo will be given its debute at the Sunday evening services of St. Pauls United Evangelical church by Miss Evelyn Poulson, soprano.

Mr. Schults is studying composition under Mr. Grant Connell and Mr. Cedric Lemont.

DINNER PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Growdon, 321 N. Burgess Ave., entertained with a dinner party on Sunday, March 4, honoring Mrs. Oma Wears of Charleston, W. Va.

Covers were laid for the following: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Growdon, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Growdon and daughter Miss Margery, Mr. and Mrs. Davis Vale, Mrs. Oma Wears and the host and hostess.

After dinner, Miss Margery Growdon entertained with readings. Mrs. Davis Vale, 200 N. Chase Ave., entertained with a luncheon for Mrs. Oma Wears on Wednesday of last week.

Miss Lulu Reaner of 2021 W. Broad St., who has been ill the past eight weeks with influenza is much improved.

NO MODERN O'LEARYS BUT WATTS THE COST OF CITY LIGHTS?

If Columbus was back in the early days of the old oil and gas lights with its present size and O'Leary, the lamp lighter had charge of the street lights it would probably take him nearly a week to make his rounds to the lights.

But today Columbus stands out in harmony with all the scientific improvements of the times and the modern streets are lighted by a modern method. Instead of figuring the cost of the street lighting on the basis of the lamplighters salary and the cost of the oil or gas, the figures runs to watts and kilowatt hours of electricity.

And for the past year the city of Columbus has used 12,117,752 kilowatt hours at a cost of $123,294. The actual operating cost of the city light plant was $307,000 but the difference was saved to the city on the street lighting through the sale of the current to the homes and industrial firms of the city.

The average rate for the current sold was 2.18 cents per kilowatt hour and the profit to the city was .53 cents.

New Gas Station

A new gas station owned by Love and Heath was opened on Saturday on the south-east corner of Sullivant and Hague avenues. The station will handle Perma-vis motor oils.

Jenkins-Jones Co. New Hilltop Firm

Will Handle Building Materials With Yards and Offices on Howard Avenue.

The Jenkins-Jones Co. is the style of a new Hilltop firm dealing in building materials—sand, gravel, cement, plaster, lime, lath, etc., with offices and yards at Howard avenue and the Big Four railroad.

W. Hadyn Jones, 3014 Olive St., and J. O. Jenkins, 2648 Glenmawr Ave., are the men interested in this new Hilltop company.

Mr. Jones was for six years manager of the building materials department of the West Side Lumber Co., and Mr. Jenkins was for five years with the Doddington Co. as manager of a like department for this company.

The new company started business last Thursday and will soon have a spur track installed leading from the Big Four railroad to their property.

ENTERTAIN ROOM MOTHERS

Mrs. R. L. Underwood entertained the Room Mothers of West Broad Parent-Teachers association and their assistants to a tea Wednesday, March 7, at her home, 50 N. Burgess Ave. She was assisted by Mrs. Hubbert Jones, Mrs. R. H. Hecker, Mrs. E. C. Williams, Mrs. M. H. Harrison, Mrs. Ray Hauntz, Mrs. H. T. Mider, Mrs. F. C. Stewart, Mrs. E. W. The U-Go-I-Go Bridge club will meet at the home of Mrs. Clara Borland, 50 S. Burgess Ave., tonight (Thursday). The club was entertained at the home of Mrs. Ralph Bieber, 116 Eldon Ave., on February 28. Invited guests were Mrs. Elsie Van Meter and Mrs. Florence Bunn.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Baker (Alice Fisher) announce the birth of a ten pound son John Fredrick, born March 4, at White Cross hospital.

BUSINESS MEN SHOW PROGRESS

Retail Manager Tells Merchants Stores Must Change to Keep in Step.

"Conditions are changing and the business man must keep up with the changes," said F. D. Sickles, manager of the Retail Merchants association, in his address before the Hilltop Business Men's association on Tuesday evening at the Matsouka.

He pointed out that there were 60,000 changes of residents in Columbus each year and that the merchant must keep his store in an inviting condition in order to draw their trade.

Another point brought out in his address was the fact that merchants lost much money through bad accounts and that a credit bureau service would save a great per cent of such losses. "Bad accounts drive business away," he said. "But there are five per cent of the people who never intend to pay their bills."

Rev. H. C. Hutchison in a short talk said "To be a success in business one must not forget the religious side." He stressed the idea that people should buy from Hilltop merchants and go to Hilltop churches.

"One mustn't neglect the boys and girls in the churches," he said, "and the same applies to the business man."

A new traffic light will be placed at Park and Broad street, within the next few weeks, according to a report from the civic committee given by F. L. Sulsberger.

Councilman Floyd Green will be present at the next meeting of the association and will discuss a proposed parking plan for several Hilltop streets.

Conservation Circle

The Child's Conservation Circle will hold their regular meeting this Thursday evening, 7:30 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Lilian Ward, 233 N. Warren Ave.

The subject will be "Sins Against Childhood" with Mrs. D. L. McCready, leader.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Waugh, 48 S. Terrace St., entertained at dinner Sunday March 4, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Martin, 826 Sullivant Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Neuman of Greenfield, Ohio.

New Confectionery

The Green Domino is the name of the new confectionery to be opened at 2804 Sullivant Ave., Saturday, March 10.

Several features are planned for the opening to be held between 8 o'clock and 10:30. The new shoppe will carry a full line of confections, ice cream and sandwiches.

Mrs. H. L. Waugh and Miss Myrtle McWilliams, 48 S. Terrace St., entertained on Wednesday, Feb. 29, to a six o'clock dinner the following guests: Misses Katie and Lucile Farmer, 1406 Neil Ave., and Misses Mary and Nellie Simpson, 595 Kelton Ave.

HOW I MAKE

By Readers of the Hilltop Record

Editors Note—We are convinced that our readers will be interested in obtaining the favorite recipes of their friends and neighbors and will also be willing to share their favorite recipes. Send all recipes to the Women's Page, Hilltop Record. All contributions must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender. Recipes will be published without the name of the contributor if so requested.

Fondant

2 cups sugar,
½ cup water,
2 tablespoons of corn syrup.

Stir until sugar is dissolved. Do not stir after starts to boil. Remove crystals from the side of the kettle with a small piece of damp cloth wrapped around a fork. Remove from fire when it forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Allow to cool and when lukewarm or temperature of 110 degrees add flavoring, vanilla, almond or any flavoring desired, beat until unable to beat and then put on a smooth surface such as a marble slab and knead with the hands until creamy.

Meringue

3 egg whites,
1 cup sugar.

Beat egg whites until stiff gradually add sugar and continue beating until unable to beat more. Drop from spoon onto a baking sheet. Bake for an hour in a slow oven. Crush top when ready to serve and fill with fruit topped with whipped cream or fill with ice cream.

See Seiller's ad on last page.

WEST SIDE STUDENT MAKES HIGHEST GRADE AT "Y" SCHOOL

Miss Esther Gilbert

Achievement of the highest grade made in the Y. M. C. A. downtown school of commerce during the first semester is the result of a natural "head for figures" and an interest in accounting that dates back to the first time she ever heard the word, says Miss Esther Gilbert, 263 W. Park Ave., who averaged 95 per cent for a full schedule of work during the first semester at this downtown commerce school.

Mayson Hayhurst, 111 N. Huron Ave., and Ralph Woolever, 226 Belvidere Ave., seniors in the commerce school were also cited for merit work during the past semester.

KAMEKATHIAN CLUB

The annual luncheon and guest day of the Kamekathian Literary club was held at the Southern hotel, Tuesday, March 6. The literary program was furnished by Mrs. Lynn C. Baker and Mrs. F. G. Mirick. Mrs. Edward S. Harrington, soprano, and Mrs. John Martin Hiss, sang, accompanied by Mrs. George Ruine.

CLUB LUNCHEON

Bayview Literary club had a luncheon meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles Shriver, 2556 Fair Ave., Bexley. The members answered to the roll call by giving selections from the writings of Amy Lowell.

CARD PARTY

Miss Inez Hitchcock, 28 S. Burgess Ave., entertained with a card party, Saturday evening, Feb. 25. Those present were Miss Lucille Wade, Miss Kathryn Spence, Miss Edna Wade, Mr. Raymond Jackson, Mr. Ivan Wade, Mr. Alva Taylor, Mr. W. Miser and the hostess.

ENTERTAINS LIONS

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Trautman entertained the Hilltop Lions' club Saturday, Feb. 25, at their home, 497 Hilltonia Ave. Euchre and old-time dancing supplied the entertainment for the evening. The string music for dancing was furnished by two old-timers from Briggsdale. Prizes for euchre were awarded to Mrs. Jack Trautman and Mr. William Bogardus. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Vance Jakeway, Mr. and Mrs. William Bogardus, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Weaney, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Griffith, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Trautman, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Shade, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Trautman, Mr. and Mrs. John Amnah, Mr. O. Miller, Mr. Paul Fraser, Mr. Charles Cowan, Mr. William Ritter, Mrs. William Chittum and the host and hostess.

"Someone may have hired you to guard me, but it was not my father; and when the authorities of the law hear of this, you will find yourself in jail, unless you release me," the girl said, indignantly. "I won't stay here. Although it was only yesterday when I was brought here, it seems like an eternity. I am not accustomed to living this way. No carpets on the floor, those dirty walls, that musty odor. It is enough to make a person seriously ill. Can't you see that you have been imposed upon. The meanest man on earth certainly wouldn't place his daughter in a place like this."

"No use ter talk," the woman replied. "I've taken th' money, and I expect to earn it, Miss Gordon.

The eyes of the girl opened wide with astonishment, and she hastily said:

"Why, I am not Miss Gordon."

The tone of her voice, being so sincere, had its affect on two people standing on the other side of a closed door leading into the room. The door was hastily opened and a young woman, whose face showed signs of dissipation, followed by a man who appeared to be several years older than his companion, walked quickly to the girl who was their prisoner.

He ordered the old woman to leave the room, and after making certain that she was out of earshot, he locked the door, and turned to his young prisoner.

"Aren't you Audrey Gordon, the old sweetheart of James Clinton?" the woman asked.

"I do not know James Clinton, personally, and, furthemore, I do not care to know him."

"You evidently have heard of him."

"Oh, yes. Nothing good, either," the girl replied.

"If you aren't Audrey Gordon, who are you?"

"My name's Bertha Brown. I'm Audrey's maid," the girl replied.

The woman turned toward her companion.

"Bring Sampson in," she commanded. "If a mistake has been made, he is responsible. He brought her here."

The man referred to as Sampson soon entered the room.

"Sampson, why did you bring this girl here, when you were told to bring Audrey Gordon?"

"Why, what do you mean? Ain't this Miss Gordon?

"Evidently not," the woman said, angrily. "She says she is a maid to Miss Gordon."

"Audrey Gordon is young ain't she?" Sampson asked.

"Yes, about the same age as this one, I think."

"Well, I snooped around Fred Poston's cabin for days, and only saw two young women. One of 'em did all the work, from scrubbing floors to cooking meals. I figured Audrey Gordon wouldn't do that for anybody, so, as this kid, here, was always idle, I naturally supposed she was Miss Gordon. She must be. Maybe she is lying to us," he added suspiciously.

The three left the room for a private conference, again summoning the old woman, whom they called Mrs. Brady, to watch the girl during their absence from the room.

"There is only one way to learn the truth of this matter," the woman said to Sampson. "I want you to go to the cabin where you found this girl, and learn the name of the girl who is missing from their group. It will be easy, as her name will be on their tongues all day. Run along, now, and see how much speed you can get out of the car you stole the other night."

Late that evening, Sampson returned from his errand. He, at once, found the woman who was evidently the ring leader of the gang.

"This dame's name is Bernswick," he announced. "Esther Bernswick."

The woman reflected a few moments.

"Ah!" she exclaimed at length. "The principal owner of the Harrisburg Steel Mills. No wonder the kid lied to us. I see some easy money from that source. Don your tramp outfit tomorrow morning, and pay her dad a visit. You know the trick."

HIGHLAND HAS 9 IN CONCERT

All Junior High Orchestra to Present Concert at Memorial Hall, March 21.

Nine students from Highland Junior High school are in the All Junior High Orchestra which will hold its annual concert at Memorial hall, Wednesday evening, March 21.

Those in the orchestra from Highland are:

Violins, Grace Pinsenchaum, Helen Blair, Mary Price, Louise Byerly, Carl Boss, Judson Ruhlen. Drums, Charles Welsh and Donald Johnson. Baritone Norman Broadway.

Norman Broadway is the only baritone player in the orchestra. This is the sixth annual concert of this orchestra. Proceeds from the concert will be used to buy instruments to be loaned to the students.

In the orchestra there are seventy-two violins, ten cellos, five string basses, four flutes, nine clarinets, five saxophones, one tympani, ten cornets, three horns, four trombones, one tuba, one baritone, four drums, and seven accompanists.

Dr. W. S. Guller of Miami university has been aiding the teaching staff at Highland in finding the weaknesses of the individual students during the past few weeks. He is doing like work in other city schools. His material provides for teaching of spelling, punctuation, capitalization, sentence structure and usage of good English.

The meeting adjourned after which a social hour followed.

Every Member Canvass

The annual every member canvass of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church will be conducted next Sunday, when some thirty teams of workers will canvass for the financial budget for the coming year.

The fiscal year of the church ends March 25.

A Gentle Reminder

BOY SCOUT'S HEROISM BECOMES KNOWN —IS DESERVING OF NATIONAL HONOR

It is probably the ambition of every boy to do something big, to be a real hero. These opportunities are rare and it is not every boy who is fortunate enough to have an opportunity to actually save a life. A real hero was recently discovered in Troop 21, Boy Scouts, meeting at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church. Not only was the act or deed performed by this scout, one of courage, but the fact that he has kept it in the background, for more than six months, and not made it a part of boastful talk, makes this scout deserving of even more praise than might otherwise be given him.

Last July, while teaching three young ladies to dive in Deshler lake near Thornport, Joseph Erlenwein, 388 Lechner Ave., noticed two of the girls struggling in the water, and while many others looked on and although neither of the victims were able to call for help, Joe's knowledge of the water, the depth of that particular place, the frantic actions of the two persons, caused him to sense that they were in need of assistance. They were two grown girls, both as large or larger than he was, but he did not take the time to weigh the possibilities of what might happen. His duty as a scout and a swimmer, stood plainly before him and he immediately swam to their assistance.

The two young ladies referred to are Mrs. Clifford Lewis, 782½ Rank St., (at that time, Miss Mildred Murray) and her cousin, Miss Gladys Anderson, 32 Reeb Ave.

In Mrs. Lewis' account of the accident, she states that she was endeavoring to teach her cousin to swim, and at a place where they both knew the water was very deep, the younger girl became frightened, and panic stricken, and grabbed Mrs. Lewis, pulling her into the water, much over her head. When she came to the surface again, Mrs. Lewis said she tried to scream, but was unable to make a sound. Then in her struggle with the other girl, she was taken under the water the second time and again, this time when she came out of the water, her efforts to call for help were cut short by the water in her mouth and throat and through exhaustion. She said that she went down a third time, and thinking a drowning person only goes under the water three times, she decided that it was her last. She became unconscious and says she did not know anything further until she was safely out of the water. As she went down the third time Erlenwein had reached her, and by the aplication of some "towing holds" taught in scouting, he was able to bring both victims to safety.

In young Erlenwein's statement, he said he only did his duty as he saw it, and did not think that it was necessary to talk about it. He asked, "What was I to do—let them drown?" He also said that Miss Anderson gave him quite a battle, and came near getting the best of him by securing a back strangle hold, but he managed to break the hold and secured her in such a way, that she could not hinder him further.

Mrs. Lewis, who suffered most from the effects of the water, was ill for several days, but today she insists that if it had not been for this scout she would have drowned.

Joseph Erlenwein joined Troop 21, in the Spring of 1922, and at that time had a natural fear of the water. The scout leaders of this troop tried hard, and apparently in vain to teach him to swim, and finally after three years trying he was able to pass his first class swimming test, which requires swimming fifty yards. Since then he has passed requirements for the swimming merit badge.

Although he is duly proud of the fact that he was able to do his part toward the saving of these two lives he was too modest to boast of his work, which he considered was only another duty. It was not until members of the two families involved met at the cabin of Troop 21 recently, on an outing that the story of the rescue was told to Scoutmaster R. C. Kadel. Mrs. Lewis is a sister of Mrs. C. W. Ruffing 132 S. Ogden Ave., whose son is also a member of this same troop. Local scout authorities have taken steps toward giving Scout Erlenwein National Scout recognition for his act.

Erecting New State Buildings

New Section Will Provide Relief for Crowded Hospital at State Institution.

Work on the new buildings at the Columbus State hospital was started last week. An appropriation of $120,000 has been made by the state legislature to carry out this building program, William H. Pritchard, superintendant announced.

Construction on the new buildings will begin as soon as the foundation work is completed.

The appropriation will provide a new section to the main building which will allow additional space for patients.

At present there are 2300 patients at the hospital. Dr. Pritchard explains that the present condition was very crowded.

Mrs. L. E. Luce of North Roys avenue, entertained her embroidery club Thursday afternoon, March 8. The following members were present: Mrs. W. H. Jones, Mrs. Robert Gilliam, Mrs. Englehard, Mrs. Rex Benefield and Mrs. Henry Jones.

First Aid Week March 18-25th

90,000 Accidental Deaths Each Year May Be Reduced Through First Aid.

March 18 to 25 is National First Aid Week all over the United States.

The week was inaugurated to awaken the people to the necessity of being prepared for sickness and accident in the home, office and factory. It has been figured that of the 90,000 accidental deaths each year a large portion are preventable through first aid measures, after the accident.

The National Safety Council estimates that the total yearly number of fatalities from home accidents at 20,000 to 25,000. One large accident insurance company estimates the number of non-fatal accidents in the home during 1926 to be over 4,000,000.

The purpose of the National First Aid week is to make people realize the importance of having a first aid kit handy and a well stocked medicine cabinet in case of home accident.

Campfire Meets

The Shiwesi Campfire met last week and awarded several honors to members of the group. WHAT PRICE? ARNOLD ASKS

Parents Must Have a Substitute for Child's Desires P.-T. A. Members Are Told.

"The social and commercial world are detracting from the home," Dr. W. J. Arnold, director of the extension department of Wittenberg College told members of the West Broad Parent-Teacher Association at their meeting in the auditorium of West Broad Street school last Friday evening.

"There is no greater business than education," said Dr. Arnold. "In this respect the dads should study with the mother about the child. The P.-T. A. needs the co-operation of the home, school, church and community to deal with youth."

He pointed out that parents must afford a substitute for the things denied their children. By this he meant that it was not satisfactory to just tell a child he cannot have a thing or cannot do a thing. The parent must go further and provide a substitute for the desires of the child. His subject was "What Price Parenthood."

The next meeting of the association will be at the school on the afternoon of April 12.

The Parent-Teacher Association is bringing a picture show to the school on March 23. They will show Jackie Coogan in "The Kid Brother." The money will be used to carry out the work of the group in co-operation with the school.

Welcome Visitor Due to Arrive Here Wednesday with Smiles and Sunshine

Extensive preparations are being made to welcome the most looked forward to visitor of the year. She is due to arrive on the Hilltop next Wednesday.

Spring is due to make her annual visit here on March 21. This will be the official day of welcome although some may have seen her around before. She is due to bring sunshine and warm weather with her from the sunny south. All the Hilltop is busy preparing for her arrival.

The boys and girls have all their outdoor playthings in readiness and some have even ventured so far as to think of barefoot days and the old swimming pool.

Hilltop housewives have started house cleaning and wall papering and the home owners are ready to start the spring painting and repairing. Garden time is here too, the plowman is busy making the rounds of their back yard farms.

And "in the spring a young man's fancy"—. Yes the young men are turning their thoughts to love. But for that matter they have had much practice over the winter months.

Easter draws near too, with the arrival of the first day of spring and all the feminine minds turn to thoughts of new spring clothes. Winter coats are being stored away and lighter clothes and brighter colors take their places. Poor papa digs down to provide the new coat and bonnet for mother and daughters so they may be able to appear in the Easter parade. And after the parade is over papa may be able to buy his annual straw hat.

And after spring comes the familiar call of the ice man. But at present we welcome a wonderful guest. Enter Springtime!

Shamrocks and Green to Predominate in Gala Celebration of St. Patrick's Day

Wearing o' the green? Saturday, March 17, is St. Patricks Day.

One of the first reminders of the arrival of spring will be present on that day in the green of the shamrocks and decorations used in the gala celebration.

And who was this man that every Irishman knows about and wears the green for on every 17th of March?

St. Patrick, the apostle of Ireland was born in the British province of Valentia about 373. When grown his zeal prompted him to cross the channel for the conversion of the pagan Irish.

He was successful in his endeavors and established a number of schools and monasteries there. Many miracles are attributed to him but probably the greatest was the expulsion of all the snakes of Ireland.

St. Patricks Day has been celebrated down through the ages and to the Irish it is not a day to be overlooked.

A procession headed by a platoon of police and the American Legion Band will march from 50 West Gay street to St. Patrick's church at Grant avenue and Naughten street Saturday morning. Services will be held at the usual hour of 9 o'clock.

A banquet will be held at the Chittenden hotel at 6 o'clock by the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick and an entertainment will be given at Memorial hall by the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

The program will consist of a movie picture show and views of Ireland and local talent.

THE EMERALD ISLE

In keeping with St. Patrick's Day which comes on Saturday it is fitting that a tribute be paid to the Irish and in paying this tribute it could hardly fail in its purpose if it is centered about the Emerald Isle.

The Irish are a mighty race. That have labored and have been rewarded. They have their faults and their good qualities. There has not yet been a battlefield that has not drank of Irish blood and been glorified by Irish courage. Not yet a free country that has not been strengthened by Irish brains and whose wealth has not been increased by Irish brawn.

Were the talents of an artist ours we would make the canvas eloquent with the deeds of the bravest people who have lived, whose proud spirit no power can conquer, and whose loyalty and devotion to the home of free government, no tyrant can crush. Under the picture would be the one word "Ireland."

Let us weave the shamrock and the rose into garlands of glory for the Emerald Isle, the land of martyrs and memories, the cradle of heroes, the nursery of liberty.

SPRING AGAIN

Next Wednesday, March 21, marks the first official day of Spring.

After four months of winter with its cold and coal bills this time of all times is here again. It brings a feeling of renewed hope and courage to execute the plans that have been accumulating over the winter months. Now that spring is here what next?

Now it's house cleaning time for the housee wife and clean up time in general about the home. Community pride should be at its height at this time.

Another big phase of the spring activities is the spring buying. New things are needed for the whole family. The house may need painting or repairing or extra building may be started. The call of the road may lead you to buy that new car you have wanted and planned for all winter. Regardless of what it may be that is wanted it is well to remember that it can be bought on the Hilltop.

Spring is here and it remains to be seen what the individual will do in the way of general betterment.

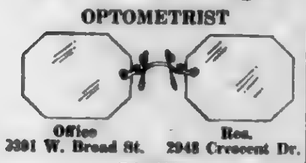
Vogue For the Ensemble Invades the Juvenile Realm

Well, "look who's here!"—little daughter dressed up in an ensemble which is about as "ritzy" as one could hope on see on cunning Miss Seven-to-Ten or thereabout. The ensemble vogue is, this season, very important in the juvenile realm. And why shouldn't it be? If it is practical for mother and big sister—and it is, very—why should not the rule work both ways, for old and young? And it does.

The atractive ensemble in this picture is a gray cashmere (gray is fashionable for everybody this season) suspender dress with blouse and coat lining, also alternate plaits in the skirt of red, blue and white print silk. The trimming on the perky little hat is of the identical silk as enters into the compose of the frock.

It is really amusing how little folks are following in the lead of the grown-up mode. There's this idea of the matching hat, for instance. Advance showings place special stress on hats which are either made of or trimmed with the identical silk print of the blouse, hat or scarf as the case may be.

There is no doubt but what the ensemble mode is very practical for children. Wee folks are so notional, for them it is first too warm, then too cold or the reverse. That is why a little coat to match the dress will prove not only a joy but a source of protection and comfort to whimsical little girls who will be taking keen delight in whisking their matching wraps "off again, on again" in a jiffy.



Mothers, too, will find the ensemble idea much to their liking when it comes to making clothes for the little folks. A remnant of this kind of material and a remnant of that, combined will develop into a smart ensemble.

Donald's Inheritance

Sampson nodded understandingly.

Before noon of the following day, everyone left the premises with the exception of the old lady who was left to prevent Esther from escaping. For weeks, Esther managed to endure the life she was compelled to lead. The monotony of it almost erased the fear of her future welfare from her mind. Nothing to do but to watch the stream of sunlight which shone on the bare, dirty floor of the room where she was being held prisoner, as it slowly decreased in size, and was no longer visible. Then she knew it was noon, and time for stale rolls, weak coffee, and canned food of one kind or another.

Day after day, she saw the same things, heard the same sounds, felt the same feeling of loneliness and despair. Would Fred try to find her, she wondered if her father had engaged someone to aid in the search for her, but being by no means dull in mind, she guessed the reason why she was being held in confinement. Her real identity had been learned, and her captors were trying to exhort money from her father.

One afternoon, Esther, having grown so extremely tired of the monotony of her present life, was filled with a sudden desire to explore the old mansion. Anything, she decided, would be preferable to being held a prisoner in this one dingy room. Knowing that no one was now in the house but Mrs. Brady, who sat in the corner of the room, her eyes ever watching the movements of her young charge.

Esther soon began to yawn and rub her eyes sleepily. Then she would walk about the room, as though endeavoring to keep awake. Again she sat down, and apparently gave way to her sleepy feeling. Mrs. Brady, thinking the girl sound asleep, presently began to nod her head, and before many minutes, her snores became very audible. Esther finally ventured to open one eye. Seeing that the woman was sound asleep, she crept slowly across the room toward a door leading into the other part of the mansion. As she opened it with slightly nervous hands, it squeaked loudly, but the sleeping woman was not aroused. Closing it carefully, Esther, with mingled feelings of fear and joy—fear, because of the extreme loneliness and desolation; and joy, because she had been able to steal a few moments of freedom.

"If I should get lost!" she thought "But I won't. I never did lose my head regarding directions, with the excepting of one time—the day Fred and I went rambling through the woods. Dear old Fred! I wish he would find me."

She wandered on and on—through a countless number of chambers and halls. Then an idea occurred to her. She had not intended to escape from her captors when she managed to steal away from the room where she had been held as a prisoner. Her only thought, then, had been to explore the old mansion. Now, with a different purpose in mind, she quickened her steps, and walked through more rooms and corridors, in an effort to find a way of escape. While descending a staircase, leading to the first floor, she saw an object on one of the steps, which she picked up. It was a very small key, probably the key to a cupboard or a desk. Esther wondered why it was so bright, why it looked like a new key. It evidently had been lost recently.

On she went, through the large house. As she entered a certain room, when nearing a side entrance to the mansion, a certain feature of the room attracted her attention. So far, in all the rooms she had passed through, she had not seen a single picture on the walls. In one corner of this room, there was a picture about eighteen inches square. Being more anxious to find a means of discovery than to investigate the mysteries of the old dwelling, she entered another room, and found herself at the side entrance. But disappointment awaited her. All doors and windows were barred. A survey of the adjoining rooms revealed the same condition. Nothing else being left for her to do, she returned to the room where she had noticed the picture in the corner. She, now, curiously, pulled it aside, wondering if it had been placed there to conceal something. Her conjecture was right. A door in the wall, smaller than the picture, was thus concealed. Hastily inserting the key, which she had found on the stairs, into the lock, she discovered that it fitted perfectly. She opened the door, which revealed a small compartment, containing a narrow drawer. Opening the drawer, her eyes fell on a document, which she proceeded to examine. The words:

"Last Will and Testament of Samuel Clinton" startled her.

"What does this mean?" she wondered. "Is it possible that this is a more recent will than the one which required Donald to marry Audrey Gordon, or forfeit his share of the estate left by his father? It doesn't really matter, now. He probably will marry Audrey anyway, but if this were in his possession, he would be relieved to know that Mr. Clinton repented of his unjust demands."

Esther decided to return the document to its hiding place, as she did not wish to risk the possibility of its being found on her person by those who were holding her captive. As they key was small, she retained possession of it, and began her return trip to the room where Mrs. Brady was probably just now waking from her sleep, wondering where the girl had gone.

When Esther reached the top of the stairs, she heard voices in a nearby room, at the end of a long hall, and knew that she would soon be discovered. Esther took a good look at the hall, to make certain that she would not make a mis-step. Then she closed her eyes, and acted the part of a somnambulist very well for an amateur.

"What th'—!" exclaimed one of the men, who, with Miss Snyder, had gone in search of Esther.

"Why, the kid's walking in her sleep. Ha! Ha! All your worry for nothing, Stella."

"I'm not sure of that. She may be pretending."

The figure of the "sleep walker" continued its mechanical stroll about the room. In an effort to waken the girl, Sampson, who was one of the party, gave her arm a rough shaking. She instantly opened her eyes, and affected a surprised, startled expression, which removed all traces of suspicion from the men and Stella Snyder, who, being accustomed to the arrangement of the house, led her to her room by a shorter way than she had taken when she started on her search.

"Why, I can go from here to the place where that will is hidden in five minutes, if I ever have occasion to," she thought.

Mrs. Brady eyed the girl with suspicion at first, but after hearing that she was merely walking in her sleep, she felt a little easier in mind.

"Watch her more carefully after this," was Miss Snyder's parting injunction to Mrs. Brady. "You aren't being paid for sleeping."

CHAPTER XIV

At the cabin owned by Fred Peston, where he was attempting to entertain his friends, a general air of discontent prevailed, which was the result of the misunderstanding that had arisen the evening before, because Donald Clinton had witnessed a little scene which aroused his jealousy.

At the breakfast table, the usually gay chatter and animated conversation was missing. Only Miss Alma Gordon, and the woman whom Fred had coaxed to impersonate his cousin, were inclined toward conversation. Even they, noticing that they younger people did not hear a word that was being said, answering questions only with monosyllables, finally lapsed into silence, also.

As Donald had promised to be at the Greene farmhouse at nine o'clock he hastily examined his gun, to see that it was properly loaded, as the presence of wild beasts in that locality made it necessary for anyone roaming through the woods to be well armed. As soon as Donald started down the road that led to the farmhouse, Fred re-entered the house, and announced his intention of accompanying his chum.

"Do you girls think you can take care of yourselves?" he said, lightly. Miss Alma Gordon smiled at the word "girls", as Audrey was the only person out of the three who could be classed under that term.

"Run along, Fred," Audrey said, in an undertone. "Perhaps you can coax Donald in a more cheeerful state of mind."

"Yes, go ahead," Phyliss Parsons said urgently. "I can handle anybody that tries to act fresh. Wish I'd been awake the night they carried Esther away. Somebody would be in a hospital by this time, or some place worse."

Convinced that her statement was not exaggerated to a great extent, Fred, well armed, opened the door of his sedan, and was soon following the road Donald had taken a few minutes before. It was not long until he overtook his chum, who was occupying the seat beside Fred, rather reluctantly, perhaps.

"Don, I want to have a frank talk with you. Something has occurred recently which has upset you very much. I am your friend, and I would like to share your trouble. If you really care for Esther, I will give you a fair chance to win her. But why this sudden change? I thought you were interested in someone else."

He looked at his friend intently, trying to learn the reason for the boy's altered views.

"I—did," Donald replied. "But that is all over now."

"Has she refused you, if I may ask?"

"No, er—well, that is, I haven't asked her."

"Then you have changed your mind?"

"Probably I have." Fred should never know from his lips that he had witnessed the scene the previous evening which was the cause of his present attitude toward the situation.

"It is our duty now to forget personal interests, and concentrate our thoughts on the best way to learn of Esther's whereabouts. Where do we begin?" Fred said, in an attempt to change the subject.

"The first thing necessary is to locate that dear brother of mine," was Donald's reply.

"James, after all, may not be to blame for Esther's disappearance," Fred remarked.

"If he isn't, who is?"

"I don't know, exactly," Fred replied cautiously, as he did not care to disclose the identity of the real Audrey Gordon, at this time, which he would be compelled to do in order to tell Donald of his suspicions that the kidnapper whoever he was, had taken the wrong girl.

"All we can do, however, is to find James Clinton," he went on. "But if we are successful in locating him today, you must let me do the talking. He knows you too well. You couldn't pump him like I can."

"Have it your own way," Don said indifferently.

"In order to find the missing James, we will have to learn his reason for leaving the cabin where Esther and I found him. He may have gone back to the city, or possibly, deeper into the forest. By examining the interior of the deserted hut, and with the aid of that hound of Farmer Greene's, we may be able to locate him," Fred said.

"Here we are now," Donald said, as Fred applied the brakes and stopped in front of the farmhouse. The farmer was waiting for them, and finally decided to run the risk of riding in an automobile.

"It is nice t' ride in one 'casionally," he admitted, when they began the three mile ride to the hut formerly occupied by James Clinton and his companions. "But blamed if I see how y' drive the thing. Now, when I wants stop, I just say 'whoa, Fanny,' and give a little pull on the lines; but I never would know how t' stop this crazy contraption. My feet would jest naturally get paralyzed."

They soon reached the log hut. Donald remained in the car, as Fred did not wish to have it stolen by anyone lurking behind a bush within sight of the cabin. Then the farmer and Fred, followed by the dog, went to the entrance of the hut. After a little difficulty, they succeeded in opening the door. All of the shabby furniture had been moved away. Nothing had been left. After an inspection of the hut, Fred opened a door which connected with a clothespress, hoping to find some personal belongings of one of the men who had lived there; but nothing was to be found. He had just closed the door, when he heard a strange voice outside the hut.

"What yer doin' in my cabin?" someone said. "Come out o' thar."

Fred and the farmer, the dog following, went to see who the stranger was.

"Is this your cabin?" Fred asked, courteously. "Sorry if we were trespassing, but I am sure you will find no harm done."

"That's all right; that's all right," the man said. "Thought at first that you was one o' them rascals who I ordered to vacate this place t'other day. But seein' your a gentleman, just go ahead. Don't mind me."

"You own this place, then?"

"Yes, but I ain't been livin' in these parts lately. Been with my daughter in California. The old place certainly has run down in the twenty years I been away."

You Can't Hide From Facts When Buying Lumber

Buying poor lumber and covering it over is like an ostrich trying to hide itself by burying its head in the sand. Sooner or later you will discover, to your sorrow, that the poor lumber shows. You can buy only good Lumber from us.

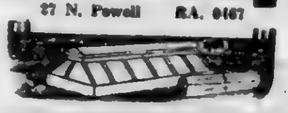
LUCY SHOPS ON HILLTOP

Winter is still with us, as I write this, the ground is white with snow. The question arises what to do while the weather is so cold and nasty. Of course the house needs new accessories as well as the wardrobe and the automobile so what about the new Bind-Art packages on sale in the drygoods and department stores? They look rather smart to me. The binding and directions for making are included in the package. Which makes me think why would it not be pretty on draperies for the sun-parlor, living room or bedroom? I believe that it would. I hope someone tries it.

Have you watched people wearing glasses coming in a warm room from the cold how they fumble and stumble around, just because their glasses are steamy? That is no longer necessary for a preparation is now on the market which cleans the glass and keeps them from steaming. Sulzberger has it. Have you seen those pretty vanities in Sulzberger's window? They're nifty.



I told you about the loud underwear and pajamas the men are going to and are wearing, well I stopped too soon, you should see the loud suits that are the latest for the well dressed man. They come in wide and narrow awning stripes. Yes, you have the idea, when the suit is worn out just fit it over the awning frame and all the neighbors

Men's nifty new Spring Suits, $19.50 to $35.00. Seliler's.

Hillcrest Combined Choirs Will Render "The Rose Maiden"

Under the direction of W. E. Knox, the combined choirs of Hillcrest Baptist church will render "The Rose Maiden" by Cowan, next Tuesday evening, March 20, at the church. The program is as follows:

Introduction (Instrumental).
Chorus—"Green Vale and Vine-Clad Mountain."
Recit—"And Through Earth's Bridal Chamber," H. L. Zerbe.
Duett—"The Rose of Love," Mrs. M. Howard, George Richardson.
Recit—"He Spake the Spring," Mr. Zerbe.
Chorus—"A Maid More Beautiful Than May."
Solo—"Bloom on, My Roses," Mrs. Charles W. Humphreys.
Chorus—"Mid the Waving Rose-Trees."
Recit—"God Greet Thee," Mrs. J. H Kirkpatrick.
Solo—"Ask of Yon Ruined Castle," Mrs. A. Lunthorne.
Recit—"Alas! the Hand Is Thine," Mr. Zerbe.
Chorus—"Oh! Earth-Born Sorrow."
Trio—"Hast Thou Wandered?" Mrs. Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Greer, Mr. Evans.
Air—"The Sleep of Even," E. Ray Evans.
Recit—"Hark! Beneath Her Window," D. Hayden Evans.
Duett—"I Know a Rosebud Shining," Mrs. Lon Grinstead, Harry Holroyd.
Chorus—"'Tis Thy Wedding Morning."
Solo—"Where Gloomy Pine-tree Rustle," D. Hayden Evans.
Recit—"Far from the Summer Blossom," Lewis H. Gay.
Chorus—"What Sounds There So Softly."
Chorus—"Farewell, Sleep Thou Lightly."
Finale—Chorus—"Yea E'en as Die the Roses," Mr. Guy.

The Instrumentalists—
Mrs. J. H. Hughes, organ; Miss Ethel Greiser, piano; Miss Edith Robbins, violin; Miss Lilda Uhl, violin, and Mr. Eugene Schneider, cello.

The casting vocalists—
Lewis H. Gay, tenor; D. Hayden Evans, baritone, and George Richardson, baritone.

MUSIC NOTES

Music for the luncheon meeting of the Robert Morris Social club at the Southern hotel Monday, March 5, was furnished by the Hilltop School of Music. Miss Edith Robbins, violinist, and Miss Ethel Greiser, pianist.

The music for the program of the West Broad Street Parent-Teacher association Friday was furnished by Miss Edith Robbins, violinist; Mr. Eugene Schneider, cellist; Miss Ethel Greiser, pianist, and the West Side Lumber Company quartet composed of: Messrs. Herbert Deems, Haydn Jones, Howard Young and D. O. Jenkins, and Charles Mason, baritone.

will rave about your new awnings. The new spring top coats are just as loud and oh, how long. They look like the skirts grandma used to wear. Shank says that the men are wearing louder clothes than women ever wore so when in doubt when buying for "him" get something loud.

Did you ever go down to McDaniel's and smell hot bread? I bought a berry pie, they did not have any but since I wanted two they baked them for me. That's what I like about the people on the Hilltop, they are so nice and so accomodating.

Some day I am going to write "Why I Like the People on the Hilltop."

Get best results—use our "DoddCo" White Ash. The West Side Lumber Co., RA. 2163.

There must be a Silver Lining

Here you have the always-welcome combination of a fox-trot and a waltz on the same record. Snappy vocal refrains tell you what they're all about. The music itself has that smoothness, spiced with tricky rhythms, that has made these two dance-organizations become national favorites. There are four other very interesting records on this week's release. Come in and hear them all—soon!

YES THEY ATE THEM MANY YEARS AGO

So this is Lent

For almost two thousand years people have observed this season of the year by fasting and by sacrificing that which they like best.

Thousands of years ago in pre-historic Egypt, sacrifices were made to the gods. This custom was passed down to the Greeks, with this sacrificial custom came the different kinds of sacrificial breads. Of these the bread called the "boun" by the Greeks became the favorite bread offered for sacrifice.

This "boun" which we now know as the hot cross bun is the favorite bread during the Lenten period.

The Egyptian hot cross bun crossed horns on the top instead of the cross as we now put on all hot cross buns. The Greeks changed the crossed horns to the cross when they adopted it as one of their sacrificial breads.

The hot cross bun became so popular in England that most people believe that the hot cross bun originated in England. The people of old England always had hot cross buns on Good Friday. There is an old superstition in England that by hanging a hot cross bun which had been baked on Good Friday in the chimney corner, the housewife would be assured of good luck with her baking throughout the year.

Centuries ago these hot cross buns were offered to the favorite moon goddesses of the Ancient Egyptians. Later the Greeks offered them to their gods changing the crossed horns used by the Egyptians to the cross signifying the four quarters of the moon. The Saxons adopted the bun with the cross in honor of Eostre their Goddess of Light.

The bun which formerly was offered to the gods is now the favorite Lenten bread of the civilized world.

Branch Library to Be Established on Hilltop

Will Possibly Be in Second Story Room Near Broad Street and Hague Avenue.

BOOKS BEING COMPILED

One of the branch libraries made possible by the appropriation of $30,000 by the city council will be located on the Hilltop according to the announcement made last week.

The Hilltop Branch Library will be located near West Broad and Hague avenue. This will make it more centrally located as the city grows westward. The exact site has not been selected but it is thought that the room will be a second story room due to the fact that there are no ground floor rooms available. It is expected that the room will be selected within the next few weeks.

There has been no action taken as yet that will affect the present Holmes Hilltop Library.

John J. Pugh, city librarian, has been compiling lists of books to be placed in the branch libraries. Reference books will be supplied by the city library and will be moved around as demands are made for them at the branches.

One of the libraries will go to Linden, one to the north side and one to the south side. There has been much difficulty in selecting the site for the north side branch due to wide range of population and the fact that the library of the Ohio State university is available to people in that community.

Hearty co-operation on the part of Linden and the South Side has been given and a number of proposed sites have been submitted to the board of trustees for their selection.

Some of the buildings being considered have shelves in them that may be remodeled and used as book shelves, thus reducing the original cost.

Council's allotment of $30,000 was for but one year and no assurance has been given that they will consider the branches next year, but it is generally supposed that the civic pride of the various communities will be shown in their response and co-operation with the new branches to the extent that council will see the need of continuing the branches as in other cities.

With the opening of the new West High school the Hilltop branch library will be suitably located for the use of the students.

Hurt In Fall

Ray N. Hartman, 102 N. Harris Ave., brakeman on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad suffered a broken left leg Thursday when he fell from a car load of coal in the Union station yards. He was taken to Grant hospital.

School Clean-Up Contest to Start

Neighbors Should Co-operate in School Beautification and Improvement Work.

Work toward the beautification of Columbus public school grounds is being started as spring approaches. The annual inspection will be held near the close of school.

West Broad Street school has for the past few years been one of the winners of the beautification and maintenance contests. John Burroughs has been one of the leading schools in this drive also.

Students at West Broad school help in the clean-up as part of their nature study. There is also a clean-up squad composed of 25 boys who have as their duties the care and protection of the school lawns. They have a chairman and hold meetings every week. They will begin setting out shrubbery and plant flowers as soon as the weather will permit.

The various schools are graded according to personnel, utilization of opportunities, general maintenance and general effect. Under these heads comes the part the faculty has in the direction of the work, pupil participation, janitorial efficiency, community co-operation. Under the head of general maintenance comes trash collections, play apparatus, neatness, cultivation, care of lawns, freedom of weeds, mowing, absence of lawn trash and general character.

Miss Harriett Judd, principal at West Broad Street school, states that it is necessary that the schools have co-operation from the communities. A school ground cannot be kept clean when neighbors feel free to dump their garbage on the lot or to throw paper behind the partables or on the walks and lawns. Everyone may also cooperate by not walking on the lawns.

SEASON ENDS

Winter Activities at Glenwood Shelter House Closes Apr. 1

The winter activities at Glenwood shelter house will come to a close on April 1 after a most successful season of handcraft work, gymnasium classes, athletics and junior classes.

On Thursday evening, March 29, at 8 o'clock members of the various basket ball teams and patrons of the shelter house will come together for a picnic supper at the shelter house.

Perhaps one of the most interesting features of the season has been the games of the girls' basket ball league, which have attracted quite a great deal of attention.

The final series of the games was played last Thursday evening when the Hilltop Six team outplayed Glenwood M. E., thereby winning the championship of the league. The final score was 15 to 13, which indicates the closeness of the game.

As champions of the Glenwood Basket Ball Recreation League the Hilltop Six team will play the winning team of the north and south division game for the city championship. The Hilltop Six team will play Friday evening, March 23, at the West Side Market hall. Town and Gift streets. The game is scheduled to begin at 7:30 o'clock.

WILL DO PERSONAL WORK DURING EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS

MISS VELMA A. SCHNELLER

The Westgate Park Evangelical church, 2836 W. Broad St., between Powell and Chase avenues, is planning for a great evangelistic campaign to begin next Sunday, March 25, and continue to April 8, Easter Day.

Rev. R. A. Sain, former pastor of the Miller Ave. and Como Ave. Evangelical churches and now engaged as the financial secretary of the Ohio Conference, will be the evangelist.

Miss Velma A. Schneller of Aurora, Ill., a worker in personal evangelism, will have charge of the personal work, conduct children's meetings and also act as pianist for the campaign.

Rev. C. Dwight Osborn, the pastor, will be the song leader.

Services will be held each night at 7:30 p. m.

West Dist. P.-T. A. Meeting March 27

Combined Meeting of P. T. A.'s to Be Held at Central High School Next Tuesday.

West District Parent-Teacher association meeting will be held at Central High school on Tuesday, March 27.

This is a special annual meeting for all the parent-teacher associations in the west district. The following groups will take part in the program: Highland, West Broad, John Burroughs, Starling, Flieser, Franklinton, Dana, Chicago, Avondale and Bellows. Parents of senior high school students are also invited to attend.

"Parental Education and Child Problems" will be the lecture topic at the evening meeting which will be followed by a discussion led by Mrs. Dr. Garry Myers of the Western Reserve University at Cleveland. Plans for physical education in Ohio will also be discussed.

Children will be entertained by educational movies and a talk by Dr. Lippert of the State Department.

Music will be furnished by the Starling Boys' Glee club and the Highland Junior high orchestra under the direction of Miss Ola Trump.

This meeting has been heartily endorsed by the principals of all the schools. Children must be accompanied by their parents.

Students Notice

Not all will be work for students in Columbus public schools. A play period is in view.

Three days of vacation are being awarded by the school board for the Easter period to begin Thursday, April 5, and through Monday, April 9. This makes a total of five days counting Saturday and Sunday.

Boy Scout Show Set for Mch. 30

Hilltop Scouts Will Take Part in Seventh Annual Show at Coliseum.

The seventh annual Boy Scout show will be held at the Coliseum at the state fair grounds on Friday, March 30. It was decided at the meeting of the board of deputy commissioners of Columbus Boy Scout Council last week.

District four which is made up of Troops 9, 18, 21 and 45 are preparing to enter several events in the show. These are all Hilltop troops.

The following events will be offered: semaphore signalling, Morse (or wig-wag) signalling, barrel tilting, fire by friction, use of the Indian bow and firebrand, wall scaling, equipment race, city wide scoutcraft inspection and chariot racing.

In the contest last year Troop 45 at Highland school won second place in the barrel tilting event, first place in the fire by friction, and fifth place in the final total number of points.

There will be about 2500 Columbus Boy Scouts in the grand entry this year. This is one of the most extensive pieces of pageantry ever held in this section of the state. Two hundred and fifty scout leaders and boys representing 26 troops, the Boy Scout drum and bugle corps, and the Wilmington Boy Scout band of 35 pieces will participate in this event.

The wall scaling contest is entered by teams of eight boys racing against time in scaling a wall 9 feet 6 inches high. The chariot races are probably next in interest. In this event the 50-pound decorated chariots built after the fashion of the ancient Roman chariots are ridden over a 300-yard course of barriers and traps. Four boys pull a chariot which has one driver.

About 6000 attended the show last year.

Car Wrecked

The machine of S. S. Patrick, 445 S. Eureka Ave., was wrecked Sunday morning, when it struck a tree in West Broad street, near Belvidere avenue. He escaped uninjured.

DOES YOUR HOUSE STAND ON YOUR NEIGHBOR'S LOT?

It is moving day at 1488 W. Broad St.

The whole house is moving. The work started Tuesday morning.

It was this way: A lot at 1492 W. Broad St. was bought by J. E. Swain for his daughter. She intended to build a double house on the lot. But she discovered that the double next door was partly on her lot. Three and one-half inches of the corner hung over on her land and 16½ inches of the sidewalk was on her ground.

What to do was the next question. She offered the 18 inches of land to the owner of the other property for the sum of $150. He laughed. She went to a real estate agent and he laughed saying they often built whole houses on other peoples lots. The property next door changed hands and when the new owner understood the circumstances he laughed too.

The case was taken to court. One of the lawyers died, it changed hands a couple of times and finally after two years a decision was reached. Meantime the double was built and the young lady refused to sell the 18 inches for $1600. Today they are moving the house that was built on another's property.

Somebody laughs and says, "Yes whole houses are often built on other people's lots."

Lutheran Church to Give Lenten Musical

Hilltop Building Figures Climb as Spring Arrives

Hilltonia and Valleyview Lead In Hilltop Home Race; $60,500 In Permits.

NEW STORE ROOMS READY

Figures from other sections of the city and from various real estate firms indicate that Hilltop building is running a good race for first place in city building. Permits for buildings on the Hilltop to the amount of $60,500 were issued last week. This includes permits for twelve frame buildings.

Work has already started on 58 new homes in Hilltonia addition. Thirty-one of these houses are being built by Throckmorton Construction Co. in Larcomb and Townsend Aves. The houses are valued at $6500 each.

Eight new homes are being built by Whitaker and Beard in Larcomb and Townsend Aves., one at 611 S. Terrace St., 13 in S. Richardson Ave., two in Vida Pl. off S. Warren Ave.

L. J. McCreary is also building three homes in Larcomb Ave. A four family apartment house is also being erected in S. Richardson Ave. by Whitaker and Beard.

Work was started early in the week on a new building at 2880-92 Sullivant Ave. by Donley Bros. It is a one-story building to house two store rooms. The rooms will probably be completed in 60 days.

A new apartment and store building is also being constructed by the Barnett Realty Co. at 1889-91 Sullivant Ave. It will contain two store rooms and four apartments.

An eight-family brick apartment on the southeast corner of Woodbury and Sullivant Aves is near completion. It is being built by the C. and J. Realty and & Construction Co. Each of the units is four rooms with five room service. Steam heat, electric refrigeration, range, dining room furniture, is provided in each apartment. A five-car garage is under construction in rear of the building. The architecture of the building is of colonial design.

The following homes are being constructed in Valleyview subdivision: On Dibblee Ave. Floyd Gilles, Joseph J. Miller, Lewis D. Markin, Charles C. Evans, Joseph N. Taylor, Arnet N. Markin and Arthur C. Ruhe. The following have started homes on Valleyview Drive: Charles Landon, Edward Kelemen and Reno Ferguson.

Installation of gas lines will be started about April 1 according to a report from the Columbus Gas and Fuel Co.

The following permits to build on the Hilltop were issued last week:

J. Conrad, 100 Westgate Ave., two-story frame dwelling, 105 Westgate Ave., lot 90, $7000.

Are Celebrating 2nd Anniversary

Hilltop Furniture Co. Shows Steady Growth Since Its Beginning.

Concluding two years of successful business dealing with the Hilltop public the Hilltop Furniture Co., in this issue, pages 4 and 5, announces the celebration of their second anniversary with some special prices on quality furniture.

This business was organized in 1926 by C. E. Helmbrecht and Rex C. Beuefield. Mr. Helmbrecht retired from the business last September, selling his interest to Mr. DeWitt Hicks of Fostoria.

Since its inception the business has shown a steady growth, until it now occupies the entire building at 2365 West Broad street, giving the Hilltop a store equal to, if not better than any community furniture store in the city.

Mr. Benefield has been a resident of the Hilltop for the past 11 years, and while Mr. Hicks' home is still in Fostoria, he will move to the Hilltop in the very near future.

As a special feature of the anniversary celebration the firm has brought to their showing a splendid line of genuine Oriental rugs, which range in size from the smallest, the Anatolian mats and prayer rugs, to the largest, the Lilahan Dozars. The colorings of these rugs are gorgeous and would add much toward beautifying any home.

These rugs have been on display in their show windows for the past few days.

Sells Business

C. J. Downs confectionery at Whitethorne Ave. and Broad St. changed hands last Friday. It is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hampton, formerly of 904 N. Fourth St.

DEMOCRATS

Eleventh Ward Democratic Club Hears Cyrus Locher.

Cyrus Locher, state director of commerce, addressed the members of the Eleventh Ward Democratic club at their meeting at Hillcrest Baptist church on Monday evening.

Mr. Locher explained the various departments of the state government. He pointed out the effects of insurance, banking and building and loan companies on industry, agriculture, etc.

In speaking of the building and loan companies of the state he said that there had not been a dollar lost to a customer in any of the building and loan companies of the state since they had been started.

Several entertaining numbers followed the pot-luck supper.

Preaching By Pastor J. H. Hughes

Announce Special

Pre-Easter Services

March 25 to April 8

Pastor J. H. Hughes will preach every evening, except Saturday, at 7:30. Our Vested Choirs of almost 100 will be in charge of Rev. John E. Turner of Missouri, and our own Superb Leader, W. E. Knox. Our schedule for the first day, March 25th, is as follows:

Singing Led By Rev. John E. Turner

9:30 Morning Worship & Bible School in Joint Meeting 9:30

Sermon topic: "Why Do Women Weep"

6:30 P. M. YOUNG PEOPLE'S ORGANIZATIONS IN SESSION. THESE ARE SUPERVISED BY MRS. MARY SULLIVAN, MRS. R. J. MILLER, MR. AND MRS. W. J. THOMPSON, MR. ROBERT FAIRCHILD AND DR. R. J. MILLER.

AT SEVEN-THIRTY P. M.

The Pastor Will Preach On the Subject:

"HOW A CITY OFFICIAL WON AND LOST"

These are momentous days in which we are living. How did this City Official win, what did he win in the winning; how did he lose, and what did he lose in the losing? Our seating is limited to 1000. A capacity audience will hear this sermon. Come early for a good seat. At the close of this service, tickets will be given to our "Booster Band," which is the largest Children's Choir in Franklin County, for the next banquet. Children desiring to attend our next banquet, please take notice.

HOW I MAKE

By Readers of the Hilltop Record

Editors Note—We are convinced that our readers will be interested in obtaining the favorite recipes of their friends and neighbors and will also be willing to share their favorite recipes. Send all recipes to the Woman's Page, Hilltop Record. All contributions must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender. Recipes will be published without the name of the contributor if so requested.

Strawberry Fluff

1 cup crushed berries and juice (fresh or canned berries).

½ cup sugar for canned berries or 1 cup sugar for fresh berries.

Juice of one lemon.

1 tablespoon gelatine.

½ cup cold water.

Soak gelatine in cold water for five minutes and dissolve by placing cup over boiling water. Add to mixture of berries, sugar and lemon. When very cold whip with dover egg beater until the consistency of whipped cream. Whip one pint of cream and fold into fluff lightly. Chill thoroughly and serve with lady fingers.

GINGER CAKES

1 pint of Orleans molasses.

1 cup sugar.

1 cup butter.

2 eggs.

1 tablespoon ginger.

1 tablespoon soda dissolved in 2 tablespoons of warm water.

Flour enough so that dough can be rolled out. Cut in desired shape and bake in quick oven.

IRISH STEW

1 lb. round steak cut in squares of about 1½ inch.

3 medium sized potatoes pared and cut in quarters.

2 carrots pared and diced.

Put meat in hot water (enough to cover) and cook for ½ an hour, add potatoes and carrots, salt to taste and cook until vegetables are tender, add water if necessary. When vegetables are done make dumplings (1½ cups flour, a pinch of salt, 2 heaping tea spoons of baking powder, enough water to make a dough thin enough to drop from the spoon. Drop in stew and cover. Continue cooking until the dumplings are done which will be about 10 minutes.

This makes a nice one dish supper.

Hint for Charles

"Charley, dear," exclaimed young Mrs. Torkins, "I am convinced that Solomon's reputation for extraordinary wisdom was deserved."

"Why?"

"Although you read of his spending money recklessly you don't see any suggestion that he ever placed a bet on a race horse."

Women's new Spring Silk Dresses. Both plain and prints, $9.85. Seiller's.

Black-and-White Is Again Highlighted By the Mode

In assembling the spring wardrobe women "who know" are finding it expedient to include a three-piece crepe silk as well as the inevitable ensemble of sweater and tweed.

Not only does the silken costume fill the immediate need of a dressy afternoon outfit, but when warm weather comes then will the wisdom of acquiring a silk ensemble prove a matter of self-congratulation.

Many an afternoon ensemble for spring features the ever favorite compose of black and white. Among the most fetching types are those styled of black crepe for the jacket or coat or cape as the case may be, using striking black and white print for the scarf collar and coat lining. Usually the skirt is all-around plaited. The picture shows the effectiveness of such a model.

As will be seen, the neckline, always such a problem, is solved very happily for the ensemble pictured—by means of a throw or scarf collar made of the same patterned silk as that which lines the short jacket, and which reveals itself in the flare of the bell sleeve.

This idea of incorporating a vivid scarf in the actual making of the ensemble rather than adding it as a separate item, is very new and very smart for this season. Frequently the silk-print scarf is drawn through slots cut in a standing collar of the material of the coat. What with gay scarfs everywhere flaunting their colors in connection with the new modes, there is much of spring gayety in promise for the coming weeks.

For ensembles, navy blue with white is much exploited by French stylists. A navy crepe or jersey made up similar to the model in the picture would be most charming, especially if the print-silk be in polka dots, for dots of every size and color are the latest fad not only for fabrics but any and everywhere in fashion's realm.

Comfort Ends there too with Many Men

The makers of The Doctor Shoe claim it will properly fit more feet, and thereby prevent, relieve and cure more foot troubles than any other so-called "orthopedic" or corrective shoe on the market.

We are authorized to sell this shoe under a written and signed guaranteed as follows:

GUARANTEE OF SHOE SATISFACTION — THE DOCTOR SHOE

This sale is made with the understanding that if FOR ANY REASON you are not fully satisfied, we want you to return these shoes for adjustment, or for full refund of purchase price if desired. YOU are to determine the VALUE of the shoes to YOU, and final settlement will be made on that basis without argument or embarrassment.

Regardless of what your "shoe experience" has been; regardless of the STYLE, or the MAKE, or the PRICE of the shoes you have been wearing—why not drop in some day and try on a pair of Doctor Shoes or Oxfords? There will be no obligation on your part and no "high pressure" sales effort on our part—just a friendly, cheerful showing of a shoe that is worthy of your consideration. The price is reasonable too.

DINING ROOMS IN WHICH YOU WILL BE PROUD TO ENTERTAIN YOUR FRIENDS

If you hesitate to issue invitations for those dinners that you owe your friends and that you know must be given sometime, there must be a reason back of it. Is it because the appearance of your dining room cannot compare with theirs? It is impossible for a hostess to receive her guests with any peace of mind if she knows her home is hopelessly behind times. But you can be confident that dinners will be a success if your dining room is one you are proud of. See the new suites that are bearing our celebration reductions.

Donald's Inheritance

By MRS. E. O. CARLSTON | Auther of "Double Deception" and "For Freedom."

"Well, I be hornswoggled!" said Farmer Greene in his countrified vernacular. "If it ain't old Hank Thompson. Guess the years has changed us Hank. I'd never 'a knowed you. So you've come back?"

Their hands met in a hearty hand shake.

"Yes, I'm back. Got homesick t' see the old place agin. No place like it. I don't care what anybody says," he added, looking half defiantly at Donald and Fred, whom he knew did not share his opinions.

"No doubt of it, Mr. Thompson," Fred said.

"Call me 'Hank' sonny. Everybody else does. I don't like this 'Mister' stuff.

"All right, Hank," Fred said. "I wonder if you could tell us where the men whom you asked to vacate this house have gone to. We are trying to locate them. Important business."

"I couldn't say, exactly, but they started off that way," he said, indicating the direction with his arm.

"I wonder if we could follow them in the car," Donald said.

"I think so. This is dry weather, and it won't be muddy. That road is awful when it rains."

Thanking him for the advice, and extending an invitation to him to visit both the Greene farmhouse and the cabin owned by Fred, they again resumed their search. They had not driven far when they came to a large clearing in the forest, where there had evidently been a forest fire. It was easy to see a long distance, and Donald, being more far sighted than the others, was the first to notice a structure that resembled a rural dwelling, which was a mile or more from the spot where the machine stood.

"If you two will stay here, and guard the car, I shall take the dog and pay a call to James Clinton and Company, Breakers of the Law, Somewhere in the Land of Nowhere," Fred said in a nonsensical tone, which was intended to help Donald regain his usual good humor.

Advancing cautiously toward the hut he was approaching, Fred hastily made his decision as to the proper and advisable way to approach James Clinton. Of course, he was not certain that he had located Donald's foster-brother, but he had the foresight to be prepared for an interview with the rascally young man, if this should be his present place of abode.

After a loud knock at the door, Fred waited for a few seconds, listening intently for a response to his signal for admission. Then he rapped again. This time, his knock was heard, and when the door opened, Fred found himself face to face with James Clinton.

"Well, what do you want?" James questioned impatiently, for Fred had not been in a hurry to state the object of his call, but was looking around him for traces of the girl who had been missing from the group occupying his cabin near the foot of Echo mountain, for several days. Finally, he spoke.

"I am looking for Audrey Gordon," he said. "She has been missing from our group for several days, and you are the only person who is likely to be responsible for her disappearance." Fred, having formed the theory that Esther was mistaken for Audrey by the person who had carried her away, had decided to use Audrey's name instead of Esther's. Another reason for his deviation from the truth was that he suspected under the surface of James Clinton's meanness and trickery was an affection for Audrey, which love was probably as deep as James was capable of possessing. Fred's reasoning had been correct. If he had told James the true state of affairs, it is doubtful whether the man would have felt concerned; but his face, hardened perceptibly, by the life he was following, in the company of men who had fall even lower than himself, now turned pale with fear, as he grasped the thought of all that Fred's statement could mean.

"I tell you, honestly, Mr. Poston," James said, in the tone that he used when his better self was speaking "I know nothing of her whereabouts, and I am sorry to learn of this occurrence."

Fred was certain that James was speaking the truth; as he had suspected that possibly someone other than James Clinton was to blame for the abduction of the missing girl. Bidding the young man in the doorway a rather abrupt goodbye, Fred, followed by the dog, started toward the spot where he had left the others, then, dodging behind bushes and tree stumps, crawling through a weed grown field, he finally attained a desired position where he could watch the movements of anyone who left the hut. Fred rightly concluded that if James had any clue to the disappearance of the girl, which he had been led to believe was Audrey Gordon, it would be likely to make immediate investigations.

The first object Fred noticed from his present view point was a roadster, which had been backed out of a rude structure used for a garage. Someone must be attempting to learn the whereabouts of the missing girl. With a sudden feeling of daring, Fred hastily scribbled a note to Donald, and placing the paper between the dog's teeth, said:

"Go to your master."

Then he cautiously crept toward the car. He hastily climbed into the luggage compartment in the rear of the roadster, and holding his gun in position, prepared for instant use in case of emergency, he waited in his cramped position for the driver to make his appearance, leaving the cover of the compartment open just a fraction of an inch to admit fresh air. He had not long to wait. The front door of the hut opened, and he heard James' parting instructions to the man who was preparing to go away.

"Find her and bring her here to me. She must be at the old mansion, where that gang of counterfeiters has its headquarters. This sounds like Stell's work. She was terribly jealous of my interest in Audrey. Glad you and I cut loose from that gang when we did. I hear that the Secret Service men are making investigations, now, which may expose them."

Fred, who overheard every word, smiled at the statement James made.

"You're doggone right; we are," he murmured under his breath.

Without examining his car, the man hastily started the engine and was soon speeding over the road leading to the nearest village.

CHAPTER XV

Daylight was fading away, and darkness approaching, when Esther Bernswick, still living under confinement, spoke to Mrs. Brady for the first time during that day.

"Isn't it about time for us to eat? I'm hungry as a bear."

"I'll run downstairs and cook a bite for us," the old woman promised, as she arose from her chair. "It will only be a bite, too. I wish they'd bring us more food."

She opened the dor leading into the hall, and was immediately confronted by a man, whose clothes were dusty, evidently from travel. He unceremoniously shoved her back into the room, and taking the key which she had inserted in the lock on the outside of the door, he stepped into the room, which had been a jail for Esther for more than a week, locking the door on the inside, and pocketing the key.

"Looks here, you old Jezebel, I just heard you complain about being hungry. If I give you enough cash to buy three meals a day for six months, will you release your prisoner?"

The offer was a tempting one to Mrs. Brady, who enjoyed nothing better than three square meals a day.

"I don't know. I could use the money, but this girl's dad and sister would be awful mad if I should let her go," she said doubtfully, still being under the impression that the statement made to her by Stella Snyder regarding the girl's relation to her, was true.

"You haven't told me who you are," Esther said, as she had never seen the man before.

"I am a detective, also a friend of Fred Poston's," he said. "He sent me to find you and release you, if you were being held against your wishes, which he, of course, supposed was the truth of the situation."

"What are you going to do, Mrs. Brady? I can't stay here all night."

"I don't know. If I'd double cross that Snyder gang, I might get in bad," she said. "If you try to take her away, I'll have to give them a signal. They are downstairs now."

This was a situation entirely unexpected by the man who was attempting to rescue Esther, as no one, apparently, was about when he entered the old mansion. With a quick determination, he caught the woman, and holding her tight, placed his hand over her mouth to prevent her from screaming. Then, with the skill of an expert at such things, he tore a long strip of muslin from the sheet of the bed which Esther had been occupying. With this, he soon bound and gagged the woman, and seizing the girl's hand, he led her to the door opposite the one by which he had entered, which had been Esther's means of escape upon another occasion.

"We can't escape this way," Esther said. "I tried it, and found all the doors and windows securely barred."

"Don't worry. I can break through any bars ever made," he said, more with the air of an outlaw than of a detective whom Fred Poston would be likely to choose as a friend. But Esther, intent only on making her escape from the old house, did not notice. While passing through a long corridor, they saw a light in an adjoining room. Esther was alarmed at first, but after a second glance into the room, she knew that those in the room did not suspect that they were being watched, as they had more important business at hand.

Several members of the gang, whose leader was evidently a woman, were gathered around a table on which was placed a pile of what appeared to be paper money. One of the men who was examining one of the bills by holding it between himself and a light, uttered an angry exclamation.

"These will never pass," he said. "You haven't used the right kind of paper. An inexperienced eye would never detect the difference, but these bills will not get very far."

"Aw, you're always findin' fault," another said, impatiently.

The remainder of the conversation was not heard by Esther nor her companion, as they were eager to leave the building. When they reached the side entrance, Esther's companion began to work diligently, in an effort to open the door, which was bolted securely on the outside. Unsuccessful at that place, he tried to remove the bars of the windows. Esther seeing that he was intent on his work, decided to go to the room adjoining the hall they were now in, to secure the document, which she felt was of great importance to Donald Clinton, else it would not have been so carefully concealed.

"I have lost my handkerchief," she said. "I think I dropped it in this room over here. You know we mustn't leave any clews."

"All right, but be careful," he said. "We can't afford to be caught now."

Esther soon found the small door in the wall, and, as she had been able to retain possession of the small key that she had found, she now unlocked the door, and quickly concealed the will on her person, as she did not want anyone to know that it was now in her possession. But her companion was not so easily deceived.

"Funny place to lose a handkerchief—under lock and key, behind an old picture," he said, in a tone that was meant to be of a jesting nature. Esther trembled a little at his words, as she could sense a tone of cunning under his light remark.

"Can't fool me, kid," he went on. "When you told me the little tale about the lost 'hanky', I knew you were up to something, so I kept an eye on you. Knew the exact location of the door in the wall, didn't you? Well, you didn't fool me. I know this house like a book."

"The home of your ancestors, I suppose," Esther said, innocently.

The man glared at her, but made no reply.

"There!" he said finally. "Now, climb through this window in a hurry. My car is parked down the road a piece.. I'll have you with your friends before midnight, unless something goes wrong with the old boat."

"30 Pieces of Silver"

A vivid reproduction of the story, "Thirty Pieces of Silver," by Ralph Kirkland, will be presented at Glenwood Sunday night. This the modern story of a lecturer who doubts Christ in all darkness. He is awakened to the wrong he is doing through a vision of the betrayal of Christ by Judas for thirty pieces of silver.

As the story is read by Miss Annis Turner, the most impressive scenes will be portrayed by living characters. Mr. E. E. Yantis will take the part of Carnavon the lecturer. The salvation army veteran is portrayed by Reverend D. W. Drumm. The other characters are as follows: Judas, Elbron Lewis; High priest, Dr. L. B. Turner; Disciples, Mr. H. C. Weller and Mr. W. C. Eshler; Women of Sepulchre, Miss Edith Williams and Miss Mildred Phillips; Soldier, Stanley Hamilton.

"When He Came to His Senses" will be the sermon to be given by Dr. Barber after the presentation.

Bring back the VIGOR of Youth

BATTLE CREEK DIET SYSTEM HEALTH FOODS

Eat the proper foods and years will fall away from you. Make your intestinal tract clean with proper roughage and anti-toxic food and you rid your system of the poisons of constipation. Then Nature has a chance to supply rich, red, pure blood so vital to radiant health and beauty.

Or if it is overweight or underweight that bothers you, let us suggest the proper Battle Creek Health Foods prepared especially for you. Those with anemia, diabetes, should by all means adopt the Battle Creek Diet System.

During this week, we are making a special exhibit of the famous Battle Creek Health Foods used so successfully at the great Battle Creek Sanitarium. Come in and learn how easy it is to eat for health and really enjoy it. These foods are delicious and easy to prepare. We have a copy of "Healthful Living" diet book and a 40 page recipe booklet to give you.

so Women in thousands are turning to ESSEX

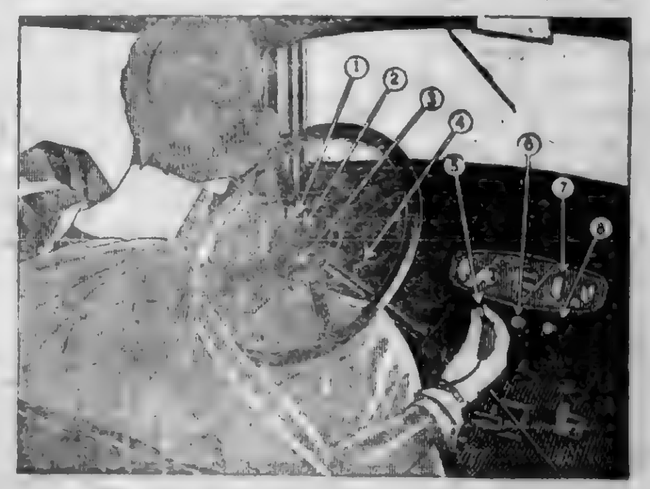
In the way women by thousands are turning to Essex is a story of the great and dynamic "man's Super-Six" made beautiful for women.

The stunning exterior grace and finish which bears closest examination with the honors of true beauty and workmanship, is carried on and heightened by the interior details of comfort, convenience and appearance.



You sit upon high-back, form-fitting seats upholstered in material that is intelligent of quality to sight and to the touch. The winged radiator figure leads the eye out over a shining rhythm of cowl, hood, polished saddle type lamps and graceful arching fenders to the smoothly flying highroad.

You have before you every control in their most natural and handy place (see illustration). And all about you, the paneling, the weather-stripped doors, the silenced body construction, the floor-matting and the hardware in graceful silvery patterns speak quietly and certainly of quality.

The Essex Super-Six high-compression motor is patented and exclusive, and is so far as we know the most powerful of its size in the world.

The four-wheel brakes used on Essex are the same type used on costly cars and assure the maximum brake safety as well as the softness of control that you associate only with high-priced cars.

In this and such things as the black rubber, steel-core, finger-scalloped steering wheel, the worm and tooth disc steering mechanism and the vertical radiator shutters, Essex visibly duplicates costly car practice, as it does also in the hidden things you never see.

Simple, Compact and Convenient

1. Light Control - 2. Horn button - 3. Throttle
4. Radiator shutter control - 5. Starter - 6. Electro-lock
7. Gasoline gauge - 8. Choke

The beautiful Essex instrument board is of ebony finish, grouping under radium light, mileometer, gasoline gauge, oil gauge, speedometer and ammeter. Restful seating position with convenience, and operation ease of all controls, returns content during you ever know.

Children's Shoes

Warm Spring days will soon be here to stay. And spring time is play time.

Children are harder on their shoes in the Spring than at any other time.

And they should be good shoes for the wear and tear of Spring playing.

Our stock is complete with late Spring styles for the Children.

Our expert fitting service assures you of satisfaction.

REPUBLICANS HEAR HOOVER, WILLIS MEN

Politics of Hoover Are Doubtful, Cooper Tells Group at Meeting.

Herbert Hoover's politics are doubtful, John Cooper, attorney told members of the Eleventh Ward Republican club at their meeting in the Hillcrest church on Monday night. He bases his belief on the fact that Hoover received 136 votes in the Democratic convention in 1920. Hoover later admitted that he hadn't paid much attention to politics, according to Cooper's statement.

Willis has always been known as a Republican, Cooper stated. He is also dry and is a backer of churches and prohibition.

Myron B. Geesman, from the office of the county prosecutor, explained the organization of the party in wards, county and state. He stated that a strong organization was necessary because of the small number of people voting.

C. C. Crabbe representing the Hoover headquarters defended Hoover's candidacy.

Mrs. Clark, Steubenville, also defended Hoover, saying that his politics should not be questioned. His record during the war was outstanding and he has always been a reliable man in government office.

There were about 200 present at the meeting. Music was furnished by the Hilltop School of Music.

First Snake

"Had any snake stories yet?"

This was the inquiry over the telephone early in the week. And having no snake stories yet this spring, we were supplied with one by Mrs. Frank Wilkins, 216 N. Park Ave.

She "just cut a garter snake in two with my butcher knife," she exclaimed.

So we have a little more concrete evidence that spring has come.

Association Asks for Sewer Relief

Object to Pumping Sewerage Into Sullivant Avenue Sewer.

Members of the Hilltop Association for Permanent Sewer Relief took another step in their march for sewer relief for the Hilltop Monday night when they presented a petition signed by over 100 property owners to the city council.

Plans were approved on January 23, by O. Bonney, engineers in charge, E. Simpson, chief engineer and W. H. Duffy, director of public service, for the construction of sanitary sewers from Dartmoore Road to Eakin Road and specified a pumping station to be erected in the alley east of South Park avenue at the intersection of Dartmoore Road.

Sullivant avenue residents claim that the purpose of the pumping station is to connect the proposed sanitary sewers to the pumping station and pump the sewage into the main Sullivant avenue sewer line. They object to such action on the grounds that the main sewer of Sullivant avenue is at present overloaded and that they have been bothered with flooded basements due to the backing up of raw sewerage. This is detrimental to both property and health.

The signed petition was referred to the service committee for further action.

Another meeting of the sewer relief association will be held at the K. of P. hall, Burgess avenue and West Broad street, on Friday night at 8 o'clock. All those interested are invited to attend.

New officers of Hoge Memorial Sunday school were elected in Sunday school on Sunday morning.

The following officers were named: Superintendent, H. G. Deems; Asst. Supt., T. C. Weir; Secretary, Charles Shanely; Librarian, Marion Trabue. Treasurer, Mrs. O. E. Spencer.

Hilltop Six Wins City Championship

Defeat Champions of Washington Park League by Close Score.

The Hilltop Six, champion basket ball team in the Glenwood Girls' league, on Monday evening won city championship by defeating the Favorites, champion of the Washington Park league, in an exciting contest, by the score of 26-23.

In a remarkable comeback in the second half, with the score 13-5 against them, the Hilltop girls played a hard and speedy game and came off victorious, thus gaining the cup which is awarded for this honor.

Girls who played on the Hilltop team Monday evening were Elsie Taylor, Florence Matthews, and Mildred Smothers as forwards, Lucille Schumacker as jump center and Ruth Morris as running center, Gladys Lensenmayer and Martha Lane as guards. In the second half the lineup was changed, in order to overcome the height of the Favorites in the center, and Taylor played jump and Schumacker side.

Museum Director to Address B. M.

H. C. Shetrone and Councilman Green to Speak at Meeting Tuesday.

Henry C. Shetrone, director of the Ohio State Museum, will address the members of the Hilltop Business Men's association at their meeting on next Tuesday night, April 3, at the Matsonia Barbecue.

Mr. Shetrone was recently named director of the museum to take the place of the late Dr. William C. Mills. He has been connected with the museum work for 14 years. His outstanding work has been the exploration of the Indian caves and mounds of the state. He is a resident of the Hilltop.

Councilman Floyd Green will also be present at the meeting and will address the group. Mr. Green will probably explain several matters pertaining to the Hilltop that have been brought before the council.

The committee in charge of the meeting is made up of R. D. Hastings, chairman, K. A. Phipps and C. Herbert.

CONSERVATION CIRCLE

The Hilltop Child Conservation Circle entertained its guests to a silver tea at the home of Mrs. W. H. Holmes, 247 Midland Ave., Thursday, March 22. Mrs. Meer of the Juvenile Research bureau gave the address. The next meeting will be a regular study meeting at the home of Mrs. Earl V. Murray, 156 Binns Blvd., Thursday, April 12.

FOUR HILLTOPPERS TO SERVE ON JURY

Four Hilltop people will serve on the April term jury duty for Franklin County which opens April 9.

They are Mrs. Alice M. Lombard, 115 Midland Ave.; John T. Miller, 89 S. Terrace St.; Fred Raether, 141 S. Ogden Ave., and Mrs. Kathryn Willbarger, 179 N. Burgess Ave.

ACCIDENTS

Three Injured by Autos During the Past Week.

Paul Addis, 20, of 73 N. Oakley Ave., received cuts about the head Saturday night when the car in which he was riding with Cornelius Hudson skidded from the road and turned over near Chillicothe. He was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital.

Frank Dietz, 3232 Sullivant Ave., knocked down a telephone pole at Sullivant and Central avenues Friday when he turned his car out of the street to avoid hitting another machine.

George Rand, 3, colored, 330 Highland Ave., received cuts about the head, a sprained ankle and bruises when he walked out from between two cars into the path of another car near his home Friday.

The Degree staff of Westwood Pythian Sisters will have a jitney supper and social in the K. of P. hall at Broad and Burgess, on April 13th.

St. John' Lutheran church choir will render the Easter cantata "He Is Risen" by Richard Worthing at Obets Junction, Palm Sunday evening, 7:30 p. m. in Zion Lutheran church. Rev. Redelfs, pastor. Miss Elizabeth Raether, organist; L. O. Pearch, director.

Easter Cantata

"Olivet to Calvary" is the name of the Easter cantata to be given by the choir of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church on Easter Sunday at 7:30 p. m. The music was written by J. H. Maunder.

W. Hadyn Jones is directing the choir. Miss Margaret Andrix is accompanist.

Attend Conference

Fourteen young people from Glenwood attended the Young People's Conference at King Ave. Methodist church on last Sunday afternoon and Monday. It was perhaps the best conference this group ever held. The theme of the conference was "A Christian Quest."

The members of the Glenwood Happy Hour Embroidery club were entertained Thursday, March 22, at the home of Mrs. Austin Simmons, 243 S. Warren Ave. Those present were: Mrs. C. N. Winker, Mrs. E. C. Williams, Mrs. Charles Finn, Mrs. J. P. Mehring, Mrs. F. O. Page, Mrs. G. A. Baker and the hostess.

The Past Chief's club of Westwood Pythian Sisters will meet at the home of Mrs. William Mayer, 89 N. Chase Ave., Friday, March 30.

Mrs. L. M. Cooke, Mishawaka, Ind., will return home Friday after visiting her daughter, Mrs. A. B. Franco, 104 S. Burgess Ave.

HILLTOP MAN IS HOLDUP VICTIM

Homer Jackson, 460 S. Oakley Ave., attendant at the Bryant Co. filling station at 1117 Cleveland Ave. was robbed of $89.15 on Saturday night when two well dressed bandits walked into the station and rifled the cash register while he was locked in the station lavatory.

Jackson was released from the locked room by a Westerville garage man who noticed the station attendant's absence when he drove in. The men entered on foot and escaped by the rear of the station.

Receives Burns

James Hondashelt, 40, of 201 S. Warren Ave., is recovering in White Cross hospital after being burned about the body and face when an ammonia pipe broke and caught on fire last Wednesday in the Ward Baking Co. basement, 119 Goodale St.

Hondashelt, a stationery engineer, was cleaning a condenser of the refrigerating plant when the accident occurred. Three other men were present but escaped uninjured.

West Broad Gazette Weekly Newspaper Published by Class

Students of the five A grade at West Broad Street school are getting practical experience in their English work by publishing a newspaper of their own. The name of the paper is West Broad Gazette.

The paper is written by hand and made up in magazine style folder. The last issue contained 16 pages. It appears every week. Students in class have charge of it and do all the writing. The editor and assistants are appointed each week.

The paper contains news from about town and otherwise, school news, sports, health notes, jokes and ads.

The following editorial written by Howard Schubert was probably the outstanding article in last week's issue.

"Why do we go to school? We do this to learn and to be more useful and able to take care of ourselves when we grow up to be men and women.

"We study History that we may learn from the experience and hardships of the early settlers and thus learn how to be good citizens.

"We study Geography to learn about the earth and the different parts or countries.

"English is necessary to any person wanting to amount to anything. It is used daily and must be correct.

"So all our studies are to help us in some way."

P.-T. A. Groups Hear Mrs. Myers

Dr. J. W. Wilce Also Speaks at West District Parent-Teacher Meet.

"Are Our Children What We Make Them?" was the subject of Mrs. Cary C. Myers of Cleveland Heights when she spoke before the West District Parent-Teacher Association on Tuesday night at the Central High school auditorium. Mrs. Myers is chairman of the committee that is co-operating with the Cleveland College of the Western university in courses in parents' education offered by the department of parental education.

Dr. J. W. Wilce, football coach at Ohio State university, spoke on "The Physical in Education." Dr. Wilce pointed out the need of the athletic and physical education departments in the present day schools.

Music was furnished by the glee clubs of Starling Junior high school under the direction of Mrs. Richards and by the Highland Junior high orchestra under the direction of Miss Ola Trump.

Mrs. Myers' speech was followed by an open discussion.

An educational picture was shown for all children attending. Dr. C. M. Lippert of the state board of health addressed the children.

Mrs. Paul Benton, 191 N. Wheatland Ave., was general chairman of the meeting.

CANDY KITCHEN OPENS SATURDAY

John J. Roumeliote, manager of the Hilltop Candy Kitchen at 3429 W. Broad St., announces that he will have his store open for business Saturday at 2 o'clock. He will carry a complete line of home-made candies and ice cream.

Mr. Roumeliote has been in the candy business for thirty years. He comes here from Indiana. He makes his own candy and ice cream.

NEW STORE

Griffin Opens Grocery Store on West Broad St.

P. G. Griffin, local Hilltop grocer and operator of the Handy store at 2647 Steele Ave., will open a new grocery store at 3060 W. Broad St., today. The store will be known as the Red and White store.

Mr. Griffin states that the store is not a chain store but is owned and operated by himself. He will, however, co-operate with a group of merchants in the city known as the Red and White stores. He will handle all nationally advertised products. No accounts will be handled at the new store.

Mr. Griffin has been in the grocery business for the past eight years and has been a resident of the Hilltop for nine years.

Mayer and Son, grocers at 2385 Sullivant Ave., are also members of the Red and White stores. They will have an opening on Saturday.

New Ad Station

Want ads and social items for the Hilltop Record will be received each week at Byerly's Confectionery, 1893 Sullivant Ave.

Boy Injured in Evening Traffic

Brokaw Child Received Broken Leg When Struck by Auto.

Paul Richard Brokaw, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Brokaw, 189 Eldon Ave., received a broken leg and other injuries on Tuesday evening at 5:30, when he was struck by a car driven by C. A. Norris at West Broad street and North Eureka avenue.

Witnesses say the child was running across the street behind another child when he was struck by the car. Norris attempted to turn his car aside to prevent the accident but did not miss the boy. The Dodge coupe driven by Norris struck a Ford truck of the West Side Lumber Co. and tore a rear wheel from it.

Witnesses to the accident stated that the child was excited in the traffic and ran from behind one car into the path of the car driven by Norris.

He was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital.

Class Supper

The Young Married People's Bible class of Hillcrest Baptist church will have a pot-luck supper Tuesday night, April 3, in the basement of the church at 6 p. m. A short business meeting will be held then and at 7:30 o'clock all will attend the services in the auditorium being conducted by Rev. J. H. Hughes.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Lauer announce the birth of a baby girl on Sunday, March 25.

Bible Class in Contest

Hillcrest Y. M. People's Organization Endeavoring to Boost Class Attendance.

The Young Married People's Bible class of the Hillcrest Baptist church have launched a campaign for the purpose of getting delinquent members out on Sunday morning and to increase attendance by the addition of new members.

The membership has been devided into two sides, namely, Red and Blue. Contest opened March 18 and closes April 22. Points are awarded for Sunday school attendance, church attendance, bringing in an inactive member and the securing of new members.

This class is one of the fine organizations of the church and rapidly increasing. Above everything else this is a religious body striving to teach the ideals of the Christian church. An age limit of 35 years is in force so the young married folks will surely feel at home here. An invitation is extended to meet with the class at 9:30 a. m. for church services or at 10:30 o'clock for Sunday school if you do not attend elsewhere.

Dr. Raymond J. Miller is instructor, Mr. Harry Holroyd assistant instructor and Mr. Ivan R. Amrine, president of the class.

Miss Margaret Colburn entertained the members of the J. U. G. club and their guests Monday evening, March 19, with a St. Patrick's party. Members present were: Betty Washburn, Elizabeth Boring, Dorothy Williams (secretary and treasurer), Erma Lauer (chaperone), Vivian Ingler (president) and the hostess. Prizes were won by Miss Washburn and Miss Williams. The next, an Easter meeting, will be held at the home of Elizabeth Boring, April 2.

Mrs. Jane Lesley of Berkley Hills, Calif., arrived Saturday for an extended visit with her sister Mrs. W. E. Mortensen, 194 S. Eureka Ave.

WILL OBSERVE PASSION WEEK IN CHURCHES

Services to Start Monday and Continue Through Easter Sunday.

Special Passion Week services are planned for the week of April 1 through Easter at many of the Hilltop churches. Preaching services will be held at different times during the week with special programs for Easter Sunday. Easter programs will be announced next week.

Burgess Ave. U. B.

A special "Illuminated Cross Service" on next Sunday evening will open a week's evangelistic campaign at the Burgess Ave. United Brethren church. Services will begin at 7:30. Rev. C. E. Miller, pastor will preach at these services and Prof. J. E. Newell will be in charge of the song services.

The theme of the Passion Week services will be "What Shall I Do With Jesus." A special Good Friday service will be held from twelve to three on Friday afternoon in charge of the Women's Missionary Association of the church. A cantata by the choir on Sunday evening will close the special meetings.

Hillcrest Baptist

The series of meetings which started at the Hillcrest Baptist church last Sunday night will be continued this next week and through Easter. Rev. J. H. Hughes, pastor, is leading the services and John E. (Happy) Turner is leading the singing. Rev. Hughes' subject for Sunday morning is "Life's Supreme Offering." The evening sermon topic will be "A Young Woman's Most Embarrassing Moment."

Hilltop Church of Christ

Prayer services will be held at 2 p. m. each day at the Hilltop Church of Christ beginning Monday and closing with a sunrise prayer service at 6:30 Easter morning. The theme to be carried out during the week will be "We Would See Jesus."

Monday—Jesus in His Dependence Upon Prayer. Mrs. Jesse Miller, leader.

Tuesday—Jesus Thru His Great Love. Mrs. T. C. Mitchell, leader.

Wednesday—Jesus As a Beloved Leader. Mrs. Fred Fellows, leader.

HERE AND THERE
By C. C. H.

An old fad revived so they say in the welding of bracelets on the arms of the sweet young ladies of today. It may be a novelty indeed but what is one to do in case the bracelets gets caught on some hook during a fire? And they aren't so easily given back after a lover's quarrel has been encountered.

* * * *

This seems to be a time of recall since we hear so much lately of souvenirs and old guitars and sweet refrains. But it probably is only spring working.

* * * *

Spring.
It's here.
Birds sing.
Lovers sigh.
Children play.
Sunshines brighter.
Your neighbor smiles.
The flivver hums more.
Thoughts of golf and picnics.

Follow the crowd to Seiller's pre-Easter sale, bargains galore.

Everyone's happy with renewed hope. This old world isn't such a bad place after all.

Yes, spring is come. And now we look about us to see our neighbors doing all the things they said they were going to when spring came. For the past four months the world has looked forward to this grandest time of the year. Now all the progress of the year seems to have been piled up waiting for the first warm days and the knowledge of the fact that the following months would be agreeable. So now the time is here for a general opening up. Spring has come.

Lots of people run fast in the race but they don't start soon enough.

The best objection to the new veils being worn by the fair sex is that they are always in the way. We mean the veils.

A local professor says that the fact that this is a presidential year will not cause business to slump but instead he predicts an increase. At the same time another professor says that everyone should make politics their business. If this is so we look for a big business rush. At least much progress is being made already.

BIRTHDAY REFLECTIONS

Hale, hearty and optimistic of the future is the pleasant experience of J. W. Dinsmore, South Burgess Ave., who on March 7, celebrated his 70th birthday anniversary at his winter home in Winter Haven, Fla.

Mr. Dinsmore, who has been prominent in business activties of the Hilltop, and also the author of several books, has written a poem which is full of optimism and good cheer and contains much of the gracious philosophy that should characterize those who have tasted life's experiences and found existence worth while.

The poem is as follows:

There came a voice in Nineteen Hundred Eight,
(Its solemn tones were like the voice of Fate),
Hearing such news as scarce could be believed,
That half a Century of Life had been achieved.

A score of years have swiftly fled since then,
Bringing the span to three score years and ten.
Scarce can I believe such is my age,
So swiftly moves Old Time upon Life's stage.

The Poet says: "Grow old along with me,"
Nor fear the end, "The best is yet to be
The last for which the first was made," ah, here
We gain new strength, we bravely ban ish Fear.

Longfellow, with poetic fervor rife,
Gives list of noted men of lengthened life
As thus: "Cato learned Greek at eighty, Sophocles
Wrote his grand CEdipus, and Simonides,

Bore off the prize of verse from his rivalpowers
When each had numbered more than four-score years.
And Theophrastus, at fourscore and ten,
Had but begun his Characters of Men."

And others woo renown, each in his sphere
Outlived the Psalmist's time by many a year.
Behold our Edison, still on the stage
And working hard, past eighty years of age.

And Chauncey M. Depew, some ninety
Whose fame for vigor still soars far skyward
And many others could we likewise name,
Despite their years, grow strong in work and fame.

'Tis not in east, that men the common age outlast,
But worthwhile work when youth has long since passed
And so I look on three score years and ten
As opportunity no less than when

In earlier years I strove to do my part
In the world's much needed work of hand or heart;
With other worthy souls, who labored hard,
Many of whom have gone to their reward.

Life has not lost its priceless charm to me;
There still is something I can do or be,
Some word of cheer to weary, toil-worn soul,
Or acts of kindness as the seasons roll

Friends are as dear today as in the past;
True friendship may o'er life itself out-last.
Then why regret the passing years of time?
There is a fairer and a better clime,

Awaits the trusting Soul, and joy shall arise,
And rich reward for every sacrifice.
Then calmly wait the summons from on High.
To meet the Lord of Life is not to die.
John Wirt Dinsmore.

BETTER STORES IN A BETTER NEIGHBORHOOD

The best stores are found in the best neighborhoods and the best neighborhoods are said to be the best, partly because they have the best stores.

The better stores of the community are able to give the best service and goods because they have had the faith and patronage of the people of that community in the past.

To make the Hilltop a better community it will be necessary for the home-owned stores to have the patronage of the Hilltop people. In return they are willing to have the suggestions and ideas of anyone who may wish to point out how their business may be improved or what new services may be offered that would be appreciated by the consumers.

NEW IDEAS

Sherman Perry once stated that the biggest coward in the world was the man who was afraid of a new idea. And since this is a day of progress his words are only too true. The man who believes that he should follow the old timers methods because the old time was successful will in most cases be wrong in this day because of the change in times. Progress calls for new ideas and ideas must have force behind them before they are useful to men.

WHAT'S THE NEWS?

Just what is the news of a community paper? Anything that is of interest to people living in the community, should answer the question. This being true all the happenings of the week should be mentioned in the paper.

This is your community paper and we hope to have the co-operation of the Hilltop people in making it better. One way to do this is have items of interest sent into the office. Or if you know something that you feel should be printed call the office.

PICTURE SHOW LESSONS

Since people are demanding the best of everything it follows that the play houses and picture shows are presenting those things that the people like.

Some people believe that all picture shows are demoralizing and that it is sinful to attend them. But on the other hand the picture show has been one of the best means of distributing knowledge. Much has been learned through watching the silver sheet and much more is to be gained by following the better shows.

Comedies, tragedies and love lyrics are portrayed on the screen today and those who watch them for what is to be learned may go away with many useful lessons.

One of the best of these picture show lessons may be cited in the recent picture, "Seventh Heaven." A man and a girl were discouraged with life during the world war but through their faith in each other they enjoyed life again and taught each other to "Never look down—look up." There is more in the blue of the sky than there is in the black of the dirty street.

What will people have to base their complaints of bad business on now that Henry Ford is producing again? Some no doubt will turn and say instead of not enough being sold there are too many being sold.

What's the use of complaining when things don't go just right. There's lots more to be gained through smiling away the blues than there is in the humming.

The sales of the master farmers of this state reached several thousand dollars for the past year and in one case the sales were $100,000. This shows that for the master of the trade conditions are not so bad as are generally supposed.

What a wonderful Easter you can give her if you stop in and select one of these beautiful rings for her Easter gift. They are all priced in accord with your wishes.

Donald's Inheritance

They had only taken a few steps, when they noticed a light coming from a small search light. Esther's companion hastily grabbed her hand, and they quickly concealed themselves behind a clump of bushes. Their first inclination was that Esther's absence had been discovered, and that a party was searching for her, but they now noticed that the ray of light was thrown straight ahead, instead of being flashed from side to side, as would have been the case, had they been searching for someone.

As the party passed on the other side of these bushes, Esther heard part of their conversation. Someone had evidently been trespassing on the territory surrounding the old mansion. The evening being very dark, it was impossible to distinguish any member of the party, and part of the conversation was inaudible.

"Don't try to bluff us," she heard one of them say. "We saw you giving this house the once-over, and we can't afford to take chances."

When all was quiet again, Esther and her companion moved cautiously over the ground surrounding the old mansion, and were soon on the road in front of the house. They reached the roadster parked at the side of the lonely road, and were soon many miles from the old mansion. When they came to the first town, Esther requested her companion to try to locate a sheriff, as she was anxious to expose the people who had held her, to the authorities of the law. To her surprise, the man stubbornly refused to comply with her request.

"No stops until we reach our destination," he said. "That gang is probably after us already, and we've got to keep ahead of them."

During the remainder of the ride, Esther did not utter a word, as she did not find the man beside her an interesting sort of person. After they had ridden some distance, Esther noticed the growing denseness of the country.

"We must be nearing Fred's cabin," she thought. "How glad I shall be to see Audrey and the others again!" She wondered why her companion did not wish to talk about Fred Poston, and why he acted so mysterious. The girl was becoming more and more suspicious of the man beside her. She tried to think that her feeling of fear was the result of her imprisonment at the old mansion, but did not entirely succeed in thus convincing herself. Presently, they came to a clearing in the forest, and the car was stopped in front of a small hut. Esther knew then that her fears had not been groundless. The door opened, and Esther saw the face of James Clinton grinning triumphantly in the door-way.

"All right, my beauty," the driver said. "Here is your old friend. I helped you out of one scrape, and let you into a worse one, eh, James?"

"Bring her in," James commanded. As yet, he had not been able to see the girl's features distinctly, as the night was very dark. When Esther was forced, by the man who had brought her there, to enter the hut, James gave an angry exclamation.

"What! You fool! You've brought the wrong girl. This is not Audrey Gordon."

"Then Stell's gang made the mistake. I found this girl locked in a room at their hangout, and supposed she was the one you wanted."

"Why didn't you ask her what her name was?"

"Didn't think it necessary."

"You never think at all," James said, furiously. "Get out of here. Since you've brought this one, I want her to myself."

Clarke, as the man was usually referred to, was quick to obey orders, and Esther was left to the mercy of James Clinton. During the struggle that ensued, the document which Esther had brought with her concealed on her person, fell to the floor. James saw it and grabbed it.

"Well, of all things!" he exclaimed. "What's this? Something I never saw before. Where did you find it?"

Esther did not reply.

"Where did you find it?" James repeated.

The girl glanced toward a door connecting with another room of the hut.

"Hello, there!" she called, as though speaking to someone in the doorway. This served to distract James' attention from her, and while he was off his guard, Esther, being on the alert, snatched the document from his hand, and ran toward the outside door. But James was not taken by chances. The door was locked, and the key gone.

"Now, you are in for it, young lady. No one can trick me, and get by with it. Give me that piece of paper."

"I will not."

"Then I shall take it from you."

He sprang toward her, but she leaped away.

Again he attempted to catch her, but she eluded him.

"How much longer can I keep this up?" she wondered.

For a second, she felt discouraged, but chancing to glance toward a window of the hut, she saw the face of Donald Clinton watching the movements of the two within the cabin. She did not allow her expression to change, as she knew that James was not aware of his foster-brother's presence. Running to a corner of the room, opposite the window, which move was made for a double purpose—to prevent James from glancing toward the window, and to get possession of a metal candle holder, which was placed on a stand in that corner of the room, and which was not then in use, as a coal oil lamp was used for a light.

Being quick on her feet, while James was slow and awkward, Esther again ran past him with comparative ease. She sprang toward the window, struck one of the small panes a sharp blow with the candle holder. Through the broken pane of glass, she dropped the document into the hands of its owner, who now made no further effort to conceal his presence. He requested Esther to unfasten the window, which she did. Then, as she turned from the window, she saw James Clinton's hands reaching for a revolver, which lay on a narrow shelf near the window.

Esther snatched the weapon, before James knew that his move had been noticed.

"All right, Jim. I've got you just where I want you," Donald said. "Or, rather, we have," he added with an admiring look at Esther. "Now I want to see the man who brought Esther here."

Donald was anxious about Fred, as it was evident that he had not returned in the car driven by Clark. James realizing that Donald had the upper hand, called Clark into the room.

"Did anyone follow you when after this girl today?" Donald asked.

"Not that I now of," Clark replied.

The surprised tone of his voice assured Donald that Clark knew nothing of Fred.

My chum is missing," he explained. "I think he intended to follow you, to learn where this girl was being held a prisoner."

"Why, Donald," Esther said, a sudden thought occuring to her, "I think I know where Fred is, and we must do something to help him." Then she described the scene she had witnessed when she and Clark were compelled to hide for their own safety on the ground surrounding the old mansion.

"Then Fred must be at the old mansion," Donald said. "I see you have a 'phone," he said to James, who nodded sullenly. "What is the nearest town to this rendezvous of theirs?"

James did not reply.

"Be careful. Tell me the truth, or I'll let the law take its course with you, without being the least bit lenient myself."

"Barton," James replied. "Quite a good sized town."

"Two blocks north," was the reply, "on the northeast corner."

As soon as Clark had walked away, leaving his machine parked in its present place, Fred looked around carefully, to be sure that he would not be noticed, then he crawled from his hiding place, and hastened to find a telegraph office, which was not difficult to locate in this small town. He entered the office, and, going to the desk, hastily scribbled an important message, which he handed to the operator.

This accomplished, Fred purchased a supply of sandwiches and other things at the lunch counter in the front section of the room where the telegraph station was located. Then, he returned to his hiding place in the baggage compartment of Clark's machine, not a moment too soon, as he had not long to wait before the driver returned and resumed the journey. Eating his lunch as the car sped onward, Fred's brain worked fast.

"I'll let them catch me as a person spying. That will detain them until the proper time comes. This bird acting as my chauffeur, unknown to himself, doesn't know their habits as well as I do. He thinks they will not be about when he arrives to release their prisoner. They have recently changed the dates of their monthly meeting, and, although he isn't aware of the fact, tonight is the time for this month's meeting. Poor Esther! It's too bad I was compelled to allow her to remain there this long, just because I wanted to work until this particular night, so that I could catch the whole bunch."

This was the substance of his thoughts as he continued his uncomfortable ride. When they arrived at the old mansion, Fred left his place of concealment, as soon as he thought the act advisable; then attempted to find Esther first, as Fred was unexpectedly detained by a person who had been left outside as a guard. The guard called others to his assistance, who questioned Fred closely. Thus it was that Clark escaped with Esther before Fred entered the mansion.

By skillful acting, Fred was able to prolong the interview between himself and the leaders of the gang of counterfeiters and blackmailers, who made no effort to conceal the nature of their business from him, as it was not their custom to allow anyone caught spying upon them to have an opportunity of reporting the matter to the proper authorities of the law. Only one thing that he observed during that evening surprised Fred. He noticed a certain man present who was quite a leader among the business people of Waterford. This person was none other than Thomas T. Burton, who had been the attorney of the deceased Samuel T. Clinton.

"With such a man to influence James, no wonder the boy went wrong, the older Mr. Clinton and Donald certainly were imposed upon."

At length, the feminine voice of Stella Snyder said to Fred:

"Mr. Poston, it is now my duty to acquaint you with one of the customs of our organization. Anyone caught spying is never allowed to live longer than three hours, after he has been discovered. Is that clear to you?"

THE STORM PARTY

"Come on, Sir Freeze-the-Ponds," said King Snow. "Come on, Mr. Wind," he added.

"We're waiting for you, too, Lovely Snowflake children," he called.

"And we hope you'll not be late," he shouted to the Jeweler Brothers known as the Diamond-Snow Jewelers.

"I want to have a storm party," King Snow said, "and I'd like to have you all come.

"Of course the jewelers don't have to come right away. But I hope they'll come soon after the party and won't be late in taking their places in the great winter reunion.

"You all know that a reunion means a gathering together once more so we all want to gather together to show that Old Man Winter is here."

"I'm here," Old Man Winter shouted.

And Mr. Wind blew through his long fingers a great cold breath of air and whistled as he said:

Try Hasan's Grocery & Meat Markets.

'He's here all right. Old Man Winter is here."

"Oh, it's so nice to have a reunion," said King Snow.

"Would you like me to come, too, Your Majesty?" said an icy voice and there was Prince Storm dressed in lovely jewels of icicles and a crown of little snow peaks which had been frozen into shape by Prince Sleet's friend, Mr. Freezing-in-Fun.

"We want you, of course we want you," said King Snow.

So Prince Storm joined the party.

"And we want Mr. Freezing-in-Fun, too," King Snow added. "He is always such a nice one to have at a party. Some creatures go to a party and never say a word and don't make the slightest effort to help have a good time.

"For those who don't get into the fun of things don't enjoy themselves either. That is only fair, of course. But it so much nicer when they do enter into the fun of a party and enjoy it themselves and help others have a good time.

"Mr. Freezing-in-Fun is a splendid creature at a party.

"And we must ask Prince Sleet. Prince Sleet would help a great deal."

"I'm here," said Mr. Freezing-in-Fun, for Mr. Wind had offered him a free ride to the party and Mr. Freezing-in-Fun had accepted with great eagerness and pleasure.

"Well, well, well, this is nice to see the old friends again.

"How do you do, Snowflake children?

"Why, hello, Old Man Winter. I might have known I would have seen you here. This is nice, ha, ha, ha, this is nice.

"And I'm powerfully pleased to see you, Mr Freeze-the-Ponds. I'm such an admirer of yours."

So Mr. Freezing-in-Fun went around greeting all his friends and they were all glad to see him, too.

Then along came Prince Sleet.

"I met some one on the way who wants to come to the party," said Prince Sleet.

"Tell me who wants to come," said King Snow.

"It's the whole Blizzard family. Old Boy Blizzard wanted to know if he could come and bring the others. "He said it was the nurse's day out and there was no one with whom to leave the children if all the older ones went off, too.

"As a matter of fact I think they sent that word as an excuse to bring the whole family, but they don't mind if you know how very anxious they are to come—so long as you will let them come."

"Oh, yes, said King Snow, "have them come."

"I'll tell them they're invited," said Mr. Wind.

"Thank you kindly, thank you kindly," said King Snow.

And soon, oh so soon, the Blizzard family came and such a snow-storm and blizzard and wild time as there was at the big reunion of King Snow and of Old Man Winter and their friends!

THE GAME OF SEA SHELLS

This game is a great favorite with Korean children. Any number of players may take part in it, but it may be played just as well with two.

An equal number of shells picked up from the seashore are used by each player. If more than two are playing, they pair off in twos for the game. To decide which of the two shall play first a shell is dropped to the ground. The one whose shell drops hollow side down has the right to begin play. The player throws a shell at it, trying to break it. If he succeeds in doing this, the other must put down still another shell. Sometimes the thrower fails to hit the mark, or his own shell gets broken; when this happens he loses his turn and must put down one of his shells for the foe to throw at, and so on.

The one who keeps an unbroken shell the longest is counted the winner.

The World Will Roll Along

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

The good, old world will roll along, don't worry over that!
And you can follow with a song, or stay where you are at.
The good, old world is on its way, is rolling to the dawn,
And you can come or you can stay—
the world is rolling on!

Sit down with trouble, if you like, and make your trouble last;
The good, old world is on (*o hike,
and hiking pretty fast;
And, if you think to weep and moan
will help your heart and mind,
The world will leave you quite alone
—but leave you 'way behind.

But, if you're done with things of old and looking straight ahead,
Are looking where the sun is gold, not where the stars are dead.
The merry world will welcome you,
and fill you full of song,
For right ahead the skies are blue—
Come on and come along!

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

KILLING AN IDEA

The hardest thing in the world to kill is an idea.

You can destroy the man who has it; you can reduce his brain to dust and his body to ashes, but his idea, if it is a right idea, will live on and thrive despite your efforts.

The crucifixion did not kill the idea of Christianity.

The burning of Joan of Arc did not wipe out the truths she stood for.

John Brown's idea did not die with him on the scaffold.

The imprisonment of Bunyan did not kill his idea; it rather helped to strengthen it, for in his cell he wrote his great "Pilgrim's Progress."

The threats of the greatest powers in the world, while they made Galileo deny with his voice the truth of his theory that the earth revolved around the sun, did not change or kill his idea, for under his breath he whispered "E pur si muove" ("It does move though").

On the other hand a wrong idea is sure to die.

Nothing is eternal except the truth.

The false promise destroys both argument and conclusion. The false idea eventually kills itself. All error is self-destructive.

There is a right and a wrong way to kill a bad idea. The wrong way is to kill the possessor. The right way is to prove the idea itself is wrong and then it dies of itself.

Witchcraft was not obliterated by the burnings of Salem. It was wiped out by the proving of the truth that there is no such thing as witchcraft.

The decadence of monarchies has not resulted from the beheading of kings nor the imprisonment of princes. It is the result of proving to the people that there is a better, more just and more useful kind of government and the rule of a sovereign.

The greatest support that wrong ideas have ever had was violence.

The human soul somehow or other leans to the aid of the abused, even if it be in the wrong.

Normally, man wants to see everything and everybody have a fair chance, a square deal, an opportunity. The surest way to give a wrong idea added support is to treat it unfairly.

Give the right half a chance and it will annihilate wrong and wipe error out of existence. It is stronger than iron bars. It is more potent than the scaffold. It is the only thing with which to fight and win.

Sheer Washable Voiles Are Lovely for Tots' Party Frocks

They say "seeing is believing." Well, maybe it is, but have you strolled through any of the washgoods displays and fashion shows staged by your "nearest dealers"? Here the seeing believing rule fails completely, for with the materials spread before one's very eyes it is hard to believe that the sheer celanese voile is not really and truly a superfine silk georgette and that the flowered rayon is not a sure-enough first quality silk print. No wonder that mothers who are considering these materials for their little folks' dresses perdist in asking, "Do they wash?"

There is, per example, the exquisite seafoam green celanese voile, which was used for the making of the cunning party frock which the darling youngster is wearing in the picture. Yes, it tubs perfectly as a linenhandkerchief, although it must be admitted the superior "looks" of this material baffles in that, to all appearances, it belies its laundering qualities.

A dress like the one in the picture can be made very readily even by the inexperienced seamstress. One can easily secure a similar pattern at almost any department store. It is a particularly charming style owing to its fashionable circular skirt, and the scalloped beading adds greatly to its attractiveness. It adds to the poetry of the coloring of this little frock that tiny rosebuds are embroidered here and there.

Considering their inexpensiveness and their prettiness, several celanese voile dresses in various pastel tints should be included in every little girl's spring and summer wardrobe. Now is the time to make them ere fair weather, flowers and sunshine lure even the best-intentioned mothers out into the open where sewing machines and tape measures are an unknown quantity.

QUICK WAY TO DRY CURTAINS

Curtains will hang beautifully soft and even if they are dried after washing, on the windows themselves. Curtains made of voile, scrim, or other cotton in which a big hem is made at the bottom may be dried in this way. A heavy though thin curtain rod slipped through the hem acts as a weight and a stretcher, quickly drying the curtains, leaving them in soft loose folds already hung in their place.

They should not be too dry before they are hung in this manner, that is the wringing should not be too thorough, otherwise all the fine wrinkles will not be stretched away before the curtain is dried. Wringing with the hands once is sufficient, leaving them wet enough for the purpose. Wringer drying makes them too dry.

This process does away with both ironing and drying, and in case of lace curtains with hems, with stretching.

POTATOES AU GRATIN

Put a layer of diced cold boiled potatoes in a baking dish. Sprinkle with grated cheese and diced pimento. Cover with white sauce. Repeat until dish is full. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake until well browned.

WHITE SAUCE

1 cup milk.
2 tablespoons butter.
2 tablespoons flour.
Salt and pepper.

Melt butter in pan, add flour and mix thoroughly. Remove pan from fire and very gradually add milk, stirring constantly to avoid formation of lumps. After these are mixed return to fire and boil the sauce thoroughly. Add salt and pepper.

OMELET

1 egg.
½ teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon butter.
1 Tablespoon water.
Pepper.

Separate white and yolk of egg. Beat yolk until thick, add pepper, salt and water, mix well. Beat white until stiff but not dry. Fold the white carefully into the yolk. Melt the butter in an omelet pan, add the egg and cook at a low temperature. Place in a hot oven to dry the top. Fold and turn into a hot platter. For large portions increase the amount of ingredients in proportion to the number of eggs used.

MUFFINS

2 cups flour.
1 egg.
½ teaspoon salt.
2 tablespoons sugar.
1 cup milk.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
2 tablespoons melted butter.

Sift dry ingredients, stir into milk, and add melted butter and beaten egg. Beat the mixture thoroughly and pour into greased pans. Bake in quick oven.

MUSIC NOTES

Professor Frank P. Fuis, 105 Binn Blvd., is organizing an orchestra which will play at the Hillcrest Baptist church services. Professor Fuits is associated with the Hilltop School of Music.

Miss Elizabeth Cannon, 123 Highland Ave., a student of Professor Walter L. King, broadcasted a piano recital Saturday evening, March 24, over WCAH. Miss Cannon was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Edith Scott Cannon, by a few vocal selections.

The Music Box club will hold their next meeting at the home of Cecelia Murnane, 2586 W. Broad St., on Friday evening, March 30. The following program will be given: piano solo by Cecelia Murnane, biography by Chelma Scribner, reading by Agnes Jezold, dance by Martha Millikin, a duet by Elizabeth Curly and Corinne Lowell, piano solo by Frances Faudree and a reading by Mary Puscar.

Seiller's pre Easter Sale now on.

BIRTHS

Mr. and Mrs. Mason Arrowsmith, 320 S. Huron Ave., announce the birth of a daughter at 4:40 a. m. Tuesday in White Cross hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Busick (Lucile Hall), 62 S. Eureka Ave., announce the birth of a daughter, Barbara Jeanne, in White Cross hospital Thursday evening, March 22.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moss, 146 N. Ogden Ave., announces the birth of a daughter in St. Ann's hospital Friday morning, March 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Heyl, 249 S. Harris Ave., announce the birth of a son on March 18, at White Cross hospital. He has been named James Arthur.

LUCY SHOPS ON HILLTOP

Have you seen the old Spanish ivory breakfast set in Burnside's window? Or the new picture hats that everyone will soon be wearing?

Dropped into Seiller's and everybody was busy so I nosed around and saw some nifty dresses which were on sale. There was one that I liked in particular. It was a two-piece affair, the blouse was of printed crepé with a navy blue skirt, pleated in front. There was another one of tweed that was rather nifty in the tailored mode. The new spring coats have just arrived and they are worth looking at, to say the least.

Have you tasted the new cheese that has recently appeared on the market? It is made in Canada and comes in neat little boxes. It does not get hard after being allowed to set around for a day or two but is just as moist as the day the package was first opened. You can get it at all grocery stores on the Hill.

Have you seen the newest suspenders? Shank has them. They are in pastel shades of blue, green or what will you have. They come in extra long for the tall men as well as in the medium lengths. With them the well dressed man of whom we have heard so much, wears garters of the same shade. Oh yes, the garters are padded with pigskin to prevent pulling out around the fastener, and the suspenders, or lifts as they are called in the East, have pigskin tips for longer wear and are the same price as the old style ones with silk tips. This is going to be a grand and glorious summer with a riot of colors being displayed by the heretofore conservative sex. If colors have anything to do with it we are going to have a gay summer.

Have you seen the new Oriental rugs in the window of the Hilltop Furniture store? The rugs range in size from the smallest, the Anatolian mats and prayer rugs, to the largest, the Lilahan Dosars. The georgeous colors in these rugs would add just that splash of color that so many homes need. The small mats and prayer rugs make lovely covers for the small occasional or end table and add a richness to the room that is hard to obtain even by costlier and more elaborate articles.

WILL OBSERVE PASSION WEEK

Glenwood M. E.

Palm Sunday will be the outstanding day of the week at Glenwood M. E. The sermon of the morning will be preached by Rev. G. F. Barber, pastor. The church choir under the direction of Mrs. Mary Riddle Watton, will sing "The Palms." The Junior church services will have special features with "The First Palm Sunday" as the sermonette topic.

At the evening services a candle light procession led by the Junior High chorus will be led in the singing by Miss Bernois Woodyard. A Lenten number will be sung by the Young Men's Quartet composed of Albert Esex, Robert Currier, Bob Weller and John Wagatta, accompanied by Kenneth Kidd on the marimbas. Miss Margaret Huffman will read "The Guilty Party," by O'Henry, as a prelude. The pastor's sermon topic will be " And He Would Not Go In.

St. Paul's United Evangelical

Services will be held every evening with the exception of Saturday evening. The following will deliver the messages:

Monday evening, Miss Helen Snider, topic "In the Garden."

Tuesday evening, Rev. Broadway—"The Betrayal."

Wednesday evening, Mr. D. Baker—"Christ Before Pilate."

Thursday evening, Rev. Broadway—"Words of the Cross."

Friday evening, Rev. H. Shultz—"The Crucifixion."

Special music will be rendered at each service. Services to commence at 7:30.

Lutheran Mission

Special services have been planned for St. James' Lutheran Mission for Good Friday at 7:45 p. m.

Hilltop Lutheran

Holy week services will be observed on the following nights:

Holy Thursday, 7:30 p. m. "In the Eternal Arms." Holy communion services.

Good Friday. "The Centurions Testimony," 7:30 p. m.

Highland Avenue Friends

Evangelistic services began Sunday at Highland Avenue Friends church. Rev. Charles H. Stalker, Friends Evangelist, is conducting these meetings. Rev. Stalker's home is in Columbus but he has been engaged in Evangelistic work for many years. He has been around the world twice in Evangelistic tours preaching the Gospel to many lands. These meetings begin at 7:30 o'clock each evening and will continue over Sunday, April 1.

EASTER MUSIC IN CHURCHES

Holy Week Services to Be Followed by Cantatas on Easter Sunday.

Music will reign supreme on Easter.

Hilltop churches are planning to present their best talent in their respective cantatas scheduled for Sunday morning and evening. With possibly two exceptions every church on the Hilltop will have a special Easter cantata or song service for that day.

Special Holy week services have been in progress at most of the Hilltop churches this week. They will continue through Friday. Afternoon services for Good Friday afternoon will be held in a number of the churches in remembrance of the three hours that Christ was on the cross. They will begin at 1 o'clock.

Holy communion services are planned for this evening, Friday and Sunday in commemoration of the last Lord's Supper.

Baptismal services began last Sunday, and will be held in other churches this Sunday morning.

The cantatas and song services are nearly all scheduled for Sunday evening. Some will be held at the morning worship hours, however. Easter pageants are planned by the Sunday schools of several of the churches.

All the Hilltop churches have issued special invitations to those not attending church to attend the services this week. A record attendance is expected at the Sunday schools.

A complete list of Easter programs is given on Page 4.

Not Civilized Says Shetrone

Savagry Is Just Below the Present Surface, Museum Director Tells Business Men.

"We are far from being civilized," said Henry C. Shetrone, director of the Ohio State Museum, when he spoke before the meeting of the Hilltop Business Men's Association at the Matsonia Tuesday night.

When we consider that savagry represents childhood and civilization, adulthood, it is easy to lightly scratch the surface and see the savage and barbarian stage, he pointed out.

Mr. Shetrone who recently succeeded the late William C. Mills as director of the museum explained a part of the work being done by the department. He has been active in excavating the Indian mounds of Ohio and building the history of the first Ohioians.

He explained that formerly the exploration work was carried on by the director aided by college students.

"But we have found that the college student as a laborer is a liability rather than an asset," he said.

"The Phantom Mound Builders," a poem written by Mr. Shetrone and inspired by an anecdote of Professor Mills, concluded his talk. Dr. Greenman, formerly of the University of Michigan, new curator of the Archaeological and historical society was also introduced.

C. Carlton Hartley, 2731 Steele Ave. was elected paid secretary of the association and will assume his duties immediately.

The proposed skip-stop and speed-up car service for the West Side was endorsed by the association with the understanding that quicker service is to be given.

Honoring Miss Winifred Poulson, 169 N. Terrace St., the fiancee of Mr. William B. Killian of 281 N. Warren Ave., Miss Hazel Brown entertained with a miscellaneous shower at the Nookery last Thursday evening, March 29. Those present were the following: Hazel Brown, Mrs. Broadway, Margaret Petry, Mrs. Ruegg, Louise Ruegg, Mrs. Blanche Buell, Mrs. P. A. Smith, Mabel Thomas, Mrs. Dixon, Marie Dixon, Mrs. Grace Beatty, Anne Jeffers, Mrs. Ruth Knight, Mrs. B. F. Baker, Mrs. D. F. Baker, Mrs. Norris, Dorothy Norris, Mrs. Flora Link, Mrs. McKinley, Mrs. McMurray, Louise McMurray, Mrs. McCune, Mrs. Anna Koehler, Mrs. John Houdashelt, Selma Houdashelt, Mrs. Cecil Dixon, Mrs. Plant, Mrs. Mason, Viola Beggty, Mrs. F. W. Killian, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Ethel Bishop, Mrs. Redding, Mrs. Gardner, Leah and Mae Rush, Mrs. Fleming, Pauline Allen, Thelma Duncan, Bertha Hicks, Mrs. Byerly, Helen Snider, Alice Snider Mrs. Raab, Mrs. Manpin, Mrs. Davidson, Mary Bel Bradshaw, Mrs. Minnie Poulson, Annabel Poulson, Melvin Raab, Maxine Heiser, Doris Jean Bishop, Esther Plant and Winifred Poulson. The marriage will take place on Easter Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Kinnie, 11 Whitethorne Ave., announce the birth Monday, April 2, of a son at Mt Carmel hospital.

Special Services at Hoge Memorial

The theme of tonight's service at Hoge Memorial church will be "Procrastination." This will be the fourth and last of a series of sermons by Rev. J. Chester White of Westerville. Good Friday afternoon from one to three o'clock there will be a devotional service at which time the pastor will speak briefly on "The Seven Last Sayings from the Cross." The service will be divided into seven parts and each will be preceded by special music. Any who wish may enter or leave at the close of each part. Candle Light Communion service will be held at 7:30 Good Friday evening. Easter Sunrise Praise Service 6:30 to 7:30 Easter morning in charge of the Christian Endeavor societies. An Easter pageant at 9:15. Morning worship and reception of members at 10:30. The Easter cantata "Olivet to Calvary" by Maunder will be rendered by the choir under the direction of W. Hadyn Jones and Miss Margaret Andrix, organist.

Troops 9 and 45 Win Scout Events

Semaphore Signaling and Barrel Tilting Contest Won by Hilltop Boys.

When the 81 troops of Columbus Boy Scouts met in contest at the annual Boy Scout show held at the Coliseum last Friday night the Hilltop was well represented by troops of the fourth district made up of troops 9, 18, 21 and 45.

Troop 9, meeting at St. Aloysius church, won the semaphore signaling contest and troop 45 of Highland Ave. school won the barrel tilting contest. In this last contest Earl Betts of troop 8 had unbalanced his rival, James Matheny of Troop 45, but Matheny came back with two upsets and took the match.

Troop 45 was also second in the chariot races. Troops 70 and 31 tied for first place in this event. Troop 45 came in as second place holders in the wall scaling contest.

Troops 70 and 31, meeting at Indianola Junior High school and St. Paul's Episcopal church, respectively, tied for first place in the total number of points for the show.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Heyl, of 294 S. Harris Ave., accompanied by Mrs. Aletha Shannon, Mrs. L. Overshiner and Miss Elizabeth Heyl of 585 S. Burgess Ave., motored to Bellfontaine last Sunday to attend the funeral of Dr. C. F. Heffner of that city.

The W. M. A. of Burgess Avenue U. B. church will meet in the church parlor Tuesday at 2 p. m. with Mrs. John Eckart at hostess. Final arrangements will be completed for the Southeast Ohio Missionary convention to be held at the local church April 25 to 27.

Highland Baseball to Start April 19

Highland Junior High school will begin the 1928 baseball season on April 19 when they meet Barrett. Highland is in the south division with Barrett, Franklin, Roosevelt, Starling and Mound.

The winner of the south division will play the winner of the north division for the city championship. Each team in the division will play each other team once. Following is the schedule for Highland:

April 19—Barrett vs. Highland.
April 27—Franklin vs. Highland.
May 4—Mound vs. Highland.
May 11—Starling vs. Highland.
May 18—Roosevelt vs. Highland.

Celebrate Holy Week

In keeping with the celebrating of Holy Week, there will be services Thursday and Friday evening of this week at 7:30 p. m. at St. Paul's United Evangelical church on South Warren avenue.

Will Be Candidate For County Office

George C. Trabue, 50, farmer near Camp Chase, announced Saturday that he would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for county commissioner.

He was a candidate in 1922 but lost the nomination by 47 votes. He is a member of the Franklin County Democratic club and active in grange work and the I. O. O. F.

He believes that the tax rate in the county can be reduced.

The Justice Realty Co. has opened a branch office at 2527 Sullivant Ave. with Mr. Kelley and Mr. Miller in charge.

$1400 Fire

Fire in the greenhouse of the Ohio institute for Feeble Minded Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock resulted in damages estimated at $1400. The blaze is thought to have started from cigaret stubs dropped on the floor.

Scene in West High School Play

Courtesy Columbus Citizen

"Shenandoah" is the name of the production, a drama of Civil War days, to be presented by West High school seniors, April 10 and 11. In the photo are, left to right, Helen Hall, Ronald Howard, Mary Krejci and Lawrence Tracy, four of the principals.

To Elect Officers

The annual congregational supper and meeting of the Hoge Memorial church will be held at the church on Wednesday evening, April 11. Following the supper the annual business meeting of the church will be held. Deacons, elders and trustees for the year will be elected.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Frederick, 62 S. Harris Ave., entertained the 500 Club at their home Wednesday evening, March 28. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Newhouse, Mr. and Mrs. Mirchawer, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lybarger, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Newhouse, Mr. Paul Frederick, the host and hostess. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Fred Newhouse and Mr. Byron Newhouse.

No New Plans for Hilltop Library

New Books at Holmes Library; Average for March Was 154 Per Day.

No word of the new Hilltop branch library had been received by any member of the Holmes Hilltop Library board at their meeting Tuesday afternoon. It is not known where the branch will be located.

Until action is taken by the city library there can be no plans made for the present Holmes Hilltop library.

There will be no more story hours at the library until next fall.

The average number of books taken from the Holmes library during March was 154 per day.

The following new books have been received at the Holmes library:

Sorrell and Son—Deeping.
Pluck—King.
The Golden Bubble—Cooper.
Peggy by Request—Dell.
Pleasant Jim—Brand.
The Uncle Wiggily Book—Garis.

Gives Dalton Plan Talk to Teachers

Plan Discussed by Miss L. H. Thompson Before Teachers of West Broad School.

"The Dalton Plan" was the topic of Miss Lou H. Thompson, principal of Fairwood school when she addressed the meeting of the West Broad Street school teachers at the school on Monday afternoon. Miss Thompson has the Dalton Plan of teaching in her school at present. Dana Avenue and Felton Avenue schools have also had it since the second semester of this year.

The Dalton Plan was outlineed by Miss Helen Parkhurst in the Dalton school in New York. Special courses are offered in the summer at Ohio State university in the College of Education by Miss Parkhurst.

The plan provides that the children will be allowed to progress as rapidly as they are able. They are given monthly assignment sheets and may study their work as they see fit. The students are also given special conferences with regard to their work.

Dr. Carlton D. Washburne of Winnetka, Ill., will lecture at Central High school April 20 on a similar plan of schooling proposed by himself.

"Shenandoah" Is Civil War Story

Will Be Presented at Central High by West High Seniors April 10 and 11.

"Shenandoah," a Civil War story will be presented by the senior class of West High school on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 10 and 11 at Central High school.

Members of the G. A. R. will be the honored guests of the class at the first presentation of the play on Tuesday evening.

The play opens with a grand military ball in which the entire cast, gorgeously costumed in hoop skirts and war attire, waltzes. After Fort Sumter is fired upon by the rebels the northern hero (Ronald Howard) and his southern sweetheart (Helen Hall) become enemies.

The greatest dramatic scene in the play is the death of Colonel Haverill's (John Wolfe) son (Ralph Hill) who has fought gallantly and died in order to retrieve his honor.

Marye Krejci, Lawrence Tracy, Frances Lehnert and Dave Ballard furnish added romance to the play. Others in the cast are Lucile Truman, the charming Mrs. Haverill; Dwight Frasure, a northern spy; Olive Munro, a young widow; Dorothy Ingles, an Irish cook; Jack Hackbarth, a gruff but lovable old major; Opie Reid, a talkative old soldier; Charles Davis, a Lieutenant of the Signal Corps; Elmer Smith, a corporal, and Elsie Little, a French maid.

Beautiful numbers will be sung by Margaret Combs, Dave Ballard, Lucille Raether, Ruth Dell and Herbert Suver.

"Shenandoah" will be the largest production West has ever produced, requiring a larger cast and more lavish costumes than ever before.

Gas Companies Plan New Paying System

A plan to expedite payment of gas bills was announced Monday by the Columbus Gas & Fuel Co. and the Federal Gas & Fuel Co.

Columbus is to be divided into 21 sections, with a separate series of days for readings of meters, mailing of bills and making payments for each section. The last discount date for making payment will be printed on each monthly gas bill.

The Embroidery club was entertained at the home of Mrs. H. C. Englehard, Wednesday afternoon at a one o'clock luncheon.

NEW HOME FOR HILLTOP BANK

Will Start Building Soon On Corner of N. Park Ave. and Broad St.

Construction work on the new Hilltop branch of the Citizen's Trust and Savings Bank to be erected on the northeast corner of West Broad street and North Park avenue is expected to start in the next few weeks. It will probably be completed and ready for occupancy by August or September according to R. O. Harrison, manager of the Hilltop branch.

The building will be of stone and brick construction. It will contain all the latest features of an up-to-date bank building. There will be a large room in the basement with entrance from the lobby to be used as a customers reading and consultation room.

The interior finish will include Swedish iron fixtures. The building will be about twice as wide and one and a half times as long as the present room occupied by the bank on South Park avenue.

All the modern conveniences of the present day banking institutions will be present in the new bank. A safe deposit department will be established also. In addition to Mr. Harrison there will be seven others employed in the [illegible] Wilcox is assistant manager.

West High Senior in Auto Accident

Dorothy Williams in Serious Condition at White Cross Hospital.

Miss Dorothy Williams, 17, of 42 S. Hague Ave., is reported as being in a serious condition at White Cross hospital where she was taken after an auto collision early Sunday morning. It is thought that her skull was fractured in the accident.

Miss Williams, a senior at West High school, and Frank Henderson, 19, of 2860 Adams Ave., were returning from a dance when the accident occurred. Henderson's car collided with another car at First and Dennison avenues.

Henderson received a cut over his eye but was discharged from the hospital Sunday afternoon. Carl Ulanker, 98 Warren St., a passenger in the other car, suffered a fractured collar bone. Ulanker told police that he and his two companions had been drinking prior to the accident.

Both cars were badly damaged.

Hold Banquet

About 50 girls attended the last session of the winter season at the Shelter house last Thursday night. Following the banquet the Hilltop Six and the Glenwood M. E. team presented Miss Moler and Miss Dieter with a token of their appreciation of their work during the season.

Representatives from the eight basket ball teams, the junior classes and the adult handiwork classes were present.

Donald's Inheritance

Fred, glancing toward a door which was one of the entrances to the large room, saw that it was being stealthily opened. Thus encouraged, he replied: "Very clear. I suppose my time to die will come soon."

Stella looked at her watch.

"One more hour," she said. Then in a more active tone, she added, turning to the others present; "Come on, boys, put this money where it belongs, and let's show Mr. Poston—"

She broke off shortly, as several doors leading into the room were opened at the same time, and from all directions came men in uniform, greatly outnumbering the lawbreakers they had come to conquer, who, cowards that they were in a crisis like this, hastily threw up their hands.

Before a half hour's time had elapsed, the entire house was searched thoroughly, and, at last, the gang was subdued, although they cast frequent malicious glances toward Fred, who they now rightly guessed was responsible for their fate.

Soon the members of the gang, including John T. Burton, shyster lawyer, were sent to the state penetentiary pending time for their trial. Fred, as soon as he was free to do so, began the return trip, which he made by rail, to his cabin in the mountains.

Although he was clever when solving questions pertaining to criminals and law-breakers, his knowledge of love was rather limited, as he admitted to himself, when his mind returned to Donald Clinton's mysterious behavior, which began the night when he returned from Farmer Greene's home. Arriving at the town of Starkville, Fred hastily set off on foot down the road which led to the end of his journey for that day.

When asked to give an account of his adventures, he briefly described the capture of the gang of counterfeiters. Esther, accompanied by Donald, had arrived the night before, and everyone was heartily glad to learn that Fred had returned safely, although a general air of constraint was present. Fred, watching his chum intently, was more puzzled than ever, as Esther's return to their group evidently had not affected him as Fred supposed it would. At the earliest opportunity, he sought an interview with Esther and was extremely careful to see that it was strictly private.

"I want you to tell me something, Es," he said. "Do you love me or do you love Donald Clinton"

Esther replied: "I do not love Donald Clinton, although I must confess that I like him a little."

"No one who knows him could help that," Fred admitted. "But I must say that he has acted queer of late."

"Do you want me to tell you why?" Esther asked.

"Is it possible that you know?"

"Certainly. He evidently suspects you of being in love with Audrey. Didn't you have your arm around her one night, about the time he returned from a call on Farmer Greene?"

"Good Heavens! Maybe you are right, Es. I must be slow witted."

"You had better go to him right now and explain things, in order to relieve his mind," Esther suggested.

"Not until you answer the question I asked you a moment ago," Fred replied, looking deep into her eyes.

"What question?"

"Oh, you like to hear me say it? All right. I asked you if you loved me or Donald Clinton. You answered the last part, but not the first."

"Is it necessary for me to answer the first, Fred? she asked.

"Yes, it is. I am like you. I know what you really think about it, but I want to hear you say it."

"That's fair, I suppose," she replied.

"Tell me," he urged, holding her close.

"I do," she replied.

"You'll be saying 'I do' over and over again in a short time from now," Fred said, happily.

After what seemed to them a short time, they joined the others, and Fred saw a changed expression on the face of Donald Clinton, when he quietly announced that Esther was to become Mrs. Fred Poston, in the near future.

When his small audience had calmed down after hearing this announcement, Fred prepared to give one of them another surprise. Taking the hand of the girl who had recently become quite proficient in the domestic art, he led her to Donald, and said in a tone that was effectively formal.

"Mr. Clinton, this is my cousin, Miss Audrey Gordon. Are you now willing to comply with the request made in your father's will? Come on, folks, let's not make the room crowded," he added suggestively, after which, everyone, with the exception of Audrey and Fred, found some particular thing to do that must not be postponed.

"Not so fond of crowds yourself, are you?" Donald called after Fred, who replied frankly:

"No indeed."

But neither Audrey nor Donald heard his answer.

"I feel like spanking that cousin of yours for keeping me worried all for nothing. Tried to make me think that other person's name was Audrey Gordon. Possibly his plan was best. You must know how much I cared for you before I learned that marriage with you would mean that I should receive my inheritance. And, now that a new will has been found, you will probably know that I want you only because I love you."

"It isn't necessary to prove that, Don," she said.

Several months later, a double wedding ceremony was solemnized in the large drawing room of the Gordon home, where Audrey Gordon and Fred Poston had spent the early days of their childhood. One of the spectators of the ceremony, who presence was unknown to any of the members of the bridal party, was James Clinton, who turned away, unable to witness the close of the ceremony.

As Donald had brought no charges against him, James was a free man. His knowledge of the rendezvous of the counterfeiters was very limited, and no charges were brought against him from that source. But, even so, his punishment was great. The girl whom he loved, and whom he had once had a fair chance of winning, was now the wife of his foster-brother.

Several weeks after their wedding, Donald received a letter from a distant city. It was from James, begging Donald's forgiveness for the wrongs of the past.

"Be good to Audrey," was the last words contained in the letter, which was signed, "Your brother, Jim."

HERE AND THERE
By C. C. H.

The wild west seems to be a little closer than we think for a report comes from Little Rock, Ark., that a wolf pack has been terrorizing the school children within four miles of the state capital. We don't have the wild animals of the wild west but we claim that the bad man idea can hold sway here as well as in the west. There's just a few of them everywhere. The Ohio pen has its share.

• • • •

Again Henry Ford is cited as a genius in maintaining good will among his employees and issuing a higher wage than the average producer. This time it is with his coal mines. The senate soft coal investigating committee has called upon him to aid the coal situation by telling how he can pay $8 per eight hour day at his mines while others are paying as low at $2.85. And again Henry Ford exemplifies the statement "IT CAN BE DONE."

• • • •

Sane or insane, killers take this as an age of revenge and get away with it. This seems to be a day of get-your-man tactics. The next step is to idle into the hands of the police without any attempt to escape or be rough. You immeditately begin to act queer and say you are crazy. After a few such capers the jury declares that you aren't in a condition to receive punishment and should instead be given a rest of a few months in a state hospital at the expense of the public. Then you are free and go happily on your way.

• • • •

We thought Cincinnati was somewhat corrupt when the papers carried the news of their bootleg king case of insanity but why go away from home to wonder when we have an exact case of such at home?

• • • •

The real insanity of the situation seems to rest with the examiners. A little examination of their own capabilities might not be out of order.

• • • •

A half billion dollars for flood relief in the Mississippi valley was passed on by the senate last week in a period of less than an hour and half. The money belongs to the people, will be used for the benefit of the people and the people will get it in return when they labor and are paid for construction.

Easter Novelties and Greeting Cards at Weber's.

Her Cause for Alarm

The dear old lady had never been to a football match before, and as she stood in the middle of a knot of spectators watching the feats of the team in which her grandson was playing, her delight knew no bounds.

But she was not a little alarmed by the way the players slipped about on the muddy field, and at last she could restrain herself no longer. Fixing her eyes on a fiery-headed youth, she cried loudly:

"Johnnie, lad! If tha fumbles mind as tha doesn't tumble back'ards. When I wor meadin' tha pants last week I forgot to tek t' needle out, an' it's theer yet!"

Joe and Josephine in Grasp of Spring As Quarter Begins

Well folks were back at the old stamping grounds again for another three months and all indications are that this isn't going to be all pie and ice cream although the warm days later on will make us feel like we need such to keep us awake in class.

The first days of the starting season are over and the more of them that pass in a hurry aren't going to be regretted unless they pass so quickly that final exams are shifted onto us before we are ready for them.

Ohio State University campus is all swelled up in its best this spring, folks, and you ought to pay it a visit. And by the way if you make your visit on Wednesday you will be in time to see the big parade of the R. O. T. C. That's our Ohio State army. The boys all look pretty keen when they do their marching act around the oval to the tune of our prize band but they aren't so proud of their guns and uniforms as you might think.

Say, we sure had a big strip of the spectacular here during the vacation. The smoke stack of the old power house was tumbled and 700 tons of brick came tumblin to the ground. And now all is quiet in the region of the Journalism building because of the handiness of bricks.

All's well in the field of professors this quarter and from that standpoint I'm very well satisfied. For once I have all professors and not a bunch of half-way-there assistants.

There haven't been any big hoot and shoe flings as yet but it can't be long because while there are a few of the cool nights left the boys are anxious to take advantage of them.

Josephine is sending her regards in a later installment but at present we are a little more rushed than usual and I'll cut this short.

—Joe.

THE BOBOLINKS

The other day the bobolinks had an afternoon tea.

The tea party was given for the meadow larks. The bobolinks are great friends of the meadow larks and they wanted to be the first this season to entertain them.

The Red-Breasted Grosbeak Family.

Besides, most of the bobolinks had new summer homes and their colony was near a beautiful stream.

You know the bobolinks always build their homes in the meadows—but they build very near a stream and their homes are always deep down in the long grass.

They had all come to live in Waving Grassland for the summer—that is, all the bobolinks who always moved about together in the summer and winter—and many of their friends, the meadow larks, had been on hand to greet them.

Many others had arrived before them, and still others came after they did.

But it is the tea party about which you must hear.

Now Waving Grassland was a very beautiful country. The meadows were very large and the grass was so beautiful and so long that is always waved in the soft breezes, so that the bobolinks named their new summer place Waving Grassland.

And so the bobolinks made all their preparations for the tea party.

The guests arrived dressed up in their best new summer plumage.

The meadow larks came first, as they were the guests of honor.

The red-breasted grosbeak family were all there looking too lovely for words.

And the bluejays, downy woodpeckers, the orioles, the thrush family, the chipping sparrows, the robins, the indigo birds—and even the shy vireos ventured forth.

Of course usually they hate parties, but they loved the stream nearby and the beautiful country the bobolinks were living in, and they thought at least once a year they ought to be a little bit sociable and friendly with their neighbors.

After they had all chatted together—to us it would have sounded more like chirping—the bobolinks began to serve tea.

They had spring water for their tea—the water from the cool stream which had a deep spring within it.

And this tea they served in little moss-covered stones. They gave it the most delicious flavor, and all the birds asked the bobolinks where they had found such good tea.

Bobolinks Began to Serve Tea.

You know in birdland they don't ask each other where anything is to be bought, but where it is to be found!

And the bobolinks told their secret.

But as they were drinking cup after cup—or stoneful after stoneful—of tea, who should arrive but all the fairies!

The birds greeted the fairies with their best songs—or their way of saying, "We're so glad to see you"—and the bobolinks trilled with joy because they had arranged this lovely surprise for their guests.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

PROPHECY OF MARRIAGE

If, in seating people at a table, an unmarried person is advertently placed between two married persons—husband and wife—the person so placed will be married before the year is out. This is more or less common superstition in the United States and is one of the many superstitions based upon what might be called the "contagion of marriage." It is, in fact, another example of sympathetic magic of the "contagious" variety. Those three great changes of man's existence—birth, marriage, and death—appear to have been invested by the ancients with peculiar magical influences. They were heavily charged with sympathetic magic.

Many are the superstitious practises among people living today in a primitive state by which it is sought to insure the fertility of the race and they are all based upon sympathetic magic. Among our current superstitions, also, there are a number of exactly the same nature. Superstitions regarding death and the dead into which sympathetic magic enters are universal and very numerous. As to the marriage contagion, though it has its magical literature, though it is apparently less voluminous than that of birth and death.

It will readily be seen then how a single person placed between a man and his wife at table is liable to become infected with the marriage bacillus by sympathetic magic. But it will be noted that this placing of the unmarried one must be done inadvertently in order to have the magic work. Fate must be given a free hand—no stacking the cards. All magical operations were, apparently, divided by the ancients into two general classes—one in which the magic was performed with the express intent of bringing about a result, and the other in which the magical operation, in order to be valid, must "just happen." The superstition in question belongs to the latter class.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

ON GETTING UP EARLY

I once roomed with a man who thought it was a virtue to get up early in the morning.

He did not get up early himself. But he thought he ought to.

Both of us had jobs that kept us at work late at night. The only opportunity for sleep we had was in the morning. I always made the most of that opportunity.

But my friend always felt guilty if he remained in bed after ten o'clock, no matter how late he had worked the night before.

He thought there was an intrinsic worth in getting out of bed at a certain hour.

Whether or not he utilized the time thus "saved" from his sleep to good advantage made no difference. On the rare occasions when he did leave his bed early he did not spend the extra hours in hard work.

As likely as not they would be frittered away in pointless inaction.

Getting up early, for instance, enables many people to acquire knowledge or culture that is useful to them. But the person who arises at the crack of dawn and then wastes his time gains nothing but loss of sleep.

* * * * * *

Some persons make a point of arriving at their offices earlier than they are required to. Then they adopt a reproachful attitude toward the other workers who merely arrive on time.

But unless the early bird spends his extra time catching the worm, what possible advantage can he have over the birds who arrive later?

The fact is that these reproachful ones would really like to do the things they profess to frown upon. They would like to lie in bed late in the morning and play hookey from church occasionally.

* * * * * *

They do not realize that merely arising before seven or being unwillingly present at Sunday worship constitutes no great virtue. Unless they get real benefit from these acts, as thousands do, why should they continue to perform them?

Unwilling rectitude is certainly hypocritical. But hypocrisy itself is regarded as a sin.

It must be conceded, however, that the reproachful ones have the bulge on many of us frank offenders. That holier-than-thou attitude which they usually acquire must give them a very gratifying sense of superiority to the rest of mankind.

CHURCHES ADD 293 MEMBERS

Glenwood M. E. Has Largest Membership in Columbus Methodist District.

Hilltop churches had a successful Easter season and added a total of 293 members to their rolls.

Glenwood Methodist Episcopal stands first in the number gained during the Easter period. One hundred thirty-six new members united with the church at the close of the Sunday morning services. This makes the total for Glenwood stand at 1865. This is the largest membership in Columbus district for 42 Methodist churches.

Sixty-five new members were added at Hillcrest Baptist. The special meetings conducted by Rev. J. H. Hughe closed on Sunday night.

Fifty-one united with Hoge Memorial on Easter Sunday. Hilltop Church of Christ added 34 and Burgess Avenue United Brethren seven. Other Hilltop churches were not heard from in regard to the number of new members.

Eleven will be confirmed next Sunday at St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church.

CLASS MEETING

The Married People's Bible Class of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church will be entertained at the church house on South Eureka avenue tonight at 7:30 by the following hostesses: Mrs. O. E. Spencer, Mrs. Herbert Deems, Mrs. D. F. Barnes, Mrs. Roy D. Hastings. A surprise program is being prepared by the committee.

Mr. Charles Mason, 150 Binns Blvd., is seriously ill in Grant hospital.

The regular meeting of the Westwood Pythian Sisters will be held this Thursday night.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hayden of Mt. Gilead were over Sunday guests at the home of Mrs. Olive Kaufman, 47 N. Harris Ave.

Mrs. Henry Jones will entertain her embroidery club at a one o'clock luncheon Friday afternoon in honor of her sister, Mrs. R. P. Rauch, Portsmouth, Ohio.

HILLTOP ARTIST GIVES RECITAL

Robert Currier, youthful violinist, accompanied by his sister, Miss Velma Currier, Tuesday night offered a varied and difficult program in recital at Heaton's hall.

Robert has been a pupil of Earl Hopkins for nine years, the whole period of his study. The performers are children of Mrs. H. S. Currier, 45 Eldon Ave.

Concerto No. 7, by L. Spohr, and Concerto in D, by Paganini, were the two most brilliant numbers played, and in both the young soloist displayed commendable grasp of the compositions and unusual technique.

The program included also Romance in G, by Beethoven; Melodie, by Gluck-Kreisler, and Perpetum Mobile, by Rinco, all well executed.

Glenwood Pastor to Visit England

Rev. and Mrs. G. F. Barber to Sail for Plymouth on April 27.

Rev. G. F. Barber and wife will sail for England on April 27. They will take an extended trip through England, Ireland and Scotland.

They will sail on the steamship Carmania of the Cunard Lines for Plymouth. From there they will go to London where they will spend three weeks. Rev. and Mrs. Barber will be there before the close of Parliament and at the time the most tourists are abroad.

They will visit Canterbury, Oxford York, Edinburgh and the lake country of Scotland and England. They will also travel to Ireland and will sail for home from Queenstown on the steamship Scythie.

Rev. Barber states that he will attempt to trace some of his family in Yorkshire. His great grandfather on his mother's side came from Yorkshire.

He will make a study of the economic and religious conditions abroad, and will investigate the matter of prohibition in England.

The pulpit of the Glenwood M. E. church will be supplied by Columbus churches while Rev. Barber is abroad.

Aged Resident Taken By Death

William M. Link, 81, Died Sunday; Lived on Hilltop for 32 Years.

William Martin Link, 81, carpenter, 50 N. Park Ave., died at his home on Sunday. Funeral services were held at the house on Tuesday afternoon and he was buried in Wesley Chapel cemetery.

Mr. Link was a life resident of Columbus and Franklin county. During all his life he had never lived more than five miles from the city. He had been a resident of the Hilltop for the past 32 years.

Mr. Link was known to his many friends and neighbors as "Bill" and would be known as nothing else. He was a great hunter and has a reputation of being the first to get his hunting license each year.

He was active until about six months ago. He was in bed but two weeks before he died.

He leaves five sons, William, Jacob, John Charles and Albert Link; five daughters, Mrs. Margaret Curran, Mrs. Anna Work, Mrs. Catharine Skipper, Mrs. Laura Roush, and Mrs. Nettie Rinehart; 20 grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

On April 4th Mrs. Homer Timms of 80 N. Park Ave., entertained the members of the Needle Art club to a delicious noon luncheon. After the business of the club was transacted the remainder of the afternoon was spent in sewing. Mrs. Merle Thomas and son Harry of Cleveland, Ohio, were guests of the club. Mrs. Thomas is the daughter of Mrs. Timms.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Foster Sweet, 136 N. Westmore Ave., announce the birth of a son Wednesday evening, April 4, in Grant hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cave (Jessie King), 2396 Olive St., announce the birth of a son Sunday at Grant hospital.

May Now Make Taxing Returns

Assessors Will Handle Papers Free of Charge to the Public.

Assessors for Franklin county began Monday accepting tax returns from individuals and corporations and will do so until the last day of April when it is hoped to have all returns in the hands of the county auditor.

For the convenience of the public assessors have been appointed living in different sections of the city. These assessors will take your return and acknowledge it without any cost to you. Following is the list of assessors for the Hilltop territory:

Tenth Ward—
Esther Gee, 544 Columbian Ave.
Clarence M. Smith, Sr., 120 Dakota.
Margaret Steinhauer, 1280 W. Broad.

Eleventh Ward—
C. A. Henderson, 2387 W. Broad St.
Walter Freshwater, 58 N. Burgess.
Sidney Hassenauer, 2801 Sullivant.
Ray Fizzy, 2582 Sullivant Ave.
Carl J. Barnes, 2383 W. Broad St.
Lottie Amrine, 180 Binns Blvd.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Rhoden and daughter Mary, 167 S. Ogden Ave., returned Monday from a trip to Toledo, Detroit and Chicago.

ST. PAUL'S CHOIR TO GIVE CANTATA

Pumping Station Is Authorized

To Pump Sewage Into Sullivant Ave. Sewer from Dartmoore-Eakin Road Territory.

Monday night city council passed the ordinance authorizing the installation of a pumping station in the alley east of South Park avenue, at the intersection of Dartmoore road to pump sewage into the Sullivant avenue sewer from a sanitary sewer to be constructed from Dartmoore road to Eakin road, plans for which were approved on January 23 by the engineer in charge and the director of public service. This ordinance had been protested by residents on Sullivant avenue on the grounds that the Sullivant avenue sewer is already overloaded. However, council, after a thorough investigation of conditions in the territory were convinced that this was the only way in which the residents of this newly developed section could be served with sewer facilities. It is reported that several cases of typhoid fever have developed in this section from the unsanitary conditions.

Members of council and City Engineer Simpson stated that this arrangement was only a temporary one.

NO SHRUBBERY SALE THIS YEAR

Recreation Director A. W. Raymond announced Monday that the recreation department will not hold its annual shrubbery sale this year. He states that there is no place available in the new city hall to hold the sale this year, and for that reason the department is compelled to miss this year's sale, the first time in several years.

By next year, arrangements will be completed for resuming the annual sale, he said.

Holiday

Another holiday is in store for the kiddies to morrow. School will be dismissed for the day due to the Ohio Educational Conference in session at Ohio State university.

COAL SOOT SERVES GOOD PURPOSE FOR DESIROUS WIFE.

All's fair in love and war, and as for the love part, it may even be applied after marriage.

So it happened that a Hilltop woman had desires of a refrigerator instead of the window refrigerator that she had been using during the winter. And here is where the tactics were used.

When hubby arose one morning last week and sat down to the usual breakfast he found coal soot in his cream. And then later during the day a furniture truck drove up to the door bringing the desired refrigerator.

Later the wife revealed that she had gained her end by sprinkling the soot by hand. Moral: Even a little dirt may serve a good purpose sometime.

Do They Pay?

Do Hilltop Record ads pay? Read this and judge for yourself.

A lady called the office Tuesday afternoon and inquired if she might be supplied with the telephone number of a business man here on the Hilltop. The name she supplied had been in a Record advertisement she said but was not in the issue at hand and she needed his services now.

The business man she had called for had not been in business for over a year. But the fact that she had remember seeing his ad in the Record goes to show that Hilltop people know where to look when they are in need of services or [illegible]

Chic Costumes Use Black Satin for Coat, Gay Print for Frock

What with the entry of silk prints into their making, it's a gay picture which ensembles are painting for the months to come. The newest fashion venture, and a very successful one it is too, is that of complementing the coat of cloth or satin with a lining of vivid print, the same to pose over a frock of the lively patterned silk.

Those who see into the future have no hesitation in selecting a costume such as the picture defines, realizing that a black satin coat of this character not only enhances and completes a perfect ensemble, but it also solves the problem of a suitable wrap thoughout the summer season. As to a silk print frock, it is as consistent a summer item as it is a spring one. So with the combination of satin coat and print dress, the two related because of the lining of the coat, one is not only providing for the immediate present, but for summertime to come.

There is a very noteworthy feature about the handsome satin employed in the making of the coat pictured, in that instead of being crepe-backed its reverse is a handsome faille weave. This new faille-lined satin is very well liked, for it forms its own self-trimming when made up using the two sides. If the young woman in the picture were to throw back the coat she is wearing, a blaze of color would greet the eye, for the lining thereof is of the same silk as that of which her charming one-piece frock is fashioned. The silk in this instance [illegible] pattern of carnel[illegible] shows a leaf black, [illegible]ish red contrasting a [illegible] background.

Some of the newer ensembles go in for prints to the extent that both dress and coat are made of print. These are usually of the short jacket or hip-length cape type, although some very clever versions exploit the three-quarter length coat. Which all goes to show the supreme importance of prints in the new modes.

NEIGHBORHOOD PARTY

The Powell Ave. neighborhood enjoyed another one of its famous parties Saturday night, March 31, when they motored to Galloway for a big dinner and general good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Postal were responsible for the use of the hall and the evening's entertainment which everyone so thoroughly enjoyed.

During the evening the following poem was read by Mrs. Postal and all felt it was the real sentiment of Powell Ave.

There are streets in every city,
That are beautiful, 'tis true;
But the best street in Columbus,
Why it's Powell avenue.

In the Springtime just take notice,
Long about the first of May,
How the trees show forth their colors,
Makes you want to come and stay.

There is just one more thing needed,
To make beautiful our nights,
And perhaps we yet may get them,
And they are the Standard Lights.

Here the folks all know each other,
And are not afraid to speak,
If they see another neighbor
Going up or down the street.

If there's sickness they are willing
To do everything they can;
In so doing proves the statement,
You can be a friend to man.

If some flowers would cheer you up
When you are sick and feeling blue,
You just bet that you will get them,
For your neighbors think of you.

Or it may be some dainty morsel,
You may wish for more and more;
Just be patient, someone will bring it,
And hand it in at your back door.

I have visited other places,
In Columbus, through and through;
But I've never found the friendship,
That exists on Powell avenue.

Here we have our social gatherings
In so doing have found a few
Men, who admitted to their wives,
That they liked the Irish Stew.

If perchance that you are looking,
For a place to settle down,
You couldn't find a better street,
If you'd look all over town.

Now we wish a Merry Welcome,
To everyone that is here,
But let us see that this is not,
The last meeting of the year.

LUCY SHOPS ON HILLTOP

If you are on a diet do not go past the Candy Kitchen for their candies would tempt even the strongest "willed" people, if they happened to have a sweet tooth.

Speaking of sweet teeth have you seen the waffle iron in Sito's Electric shop? What could be sweeter than nice crisp waffles with maple syrup?

Easter is past but probably you haven't bought your new shoes yet. Mechem's have a new line of the latest spring shoes in light shades and of course in black and tan, too. It will be worth your time to drop in and see what they have. I know you have always bought your shoes downtown but why not try uptown if you can get the same thing so near home?

The window of Todd's Drug store on West Broad street reminds one that it won't be long now until we are packing the family lunch basket and starting out to eat our supper a la ants or more commonly called picnicking. Well what made me think about lunch baskets and ants was the window full of those things variously called thermos bottles, icy cold and several other names but which are supposed to (and strangely they do) keep cold things cold and hot things hot.

I was going past Millikin's Hardware store on Sullivant avenue when my eyes were attracted by the lovely display of flowers in the window. You know it is rather surprising to see such attractive displays in a hardware store window, but these were really lovely. I was in a big hurry and didn't stop to find out the where and why of the flowers but I hope you saw them too.

Have you sown your grass seed yet? All the grocery and hardware stores on the Hill seem to have it in stock and so you had better not delay or the old enemy, the weed, will get the start of you and you will not be proud of the lawn this year.

A NIGHT CALL

W. N. U. SERVICE

Above the clatter of the wind, the night bell rang shrilly, and its jangling, a silence, and the jangling again were graphic of a frightened finger thrust anxiously upon that rounded button down beside the front door. Dr. Bertram Darand, as he aroused, pictured the finger slipping off the button and fumbling for it again, once more the finger rang the bell long and loudly.

Dr. Bertram Darand slid out of bed, wide awake and agreeably excited. The ringing of that bell at night was an event to him whose modest brass plate beside the door—B. Darand, M. D.—never before had attracted any such attention as this. Someone was outside now, in the storm, calling for his services, and the character of this call suggested desperation. The time, as he saw by his cheap watch with illuminated dial, was half-past two, and the thrilling thought came to young Dr. Bertram Darand, that if he had had to wait a year for his first imperative call, now a chance had come to him which might give him a real start on his career.

Groping in the darkness for the switch, he pressed it, but no light followed. There was no light in the street; all the electric lamps were out, extinguished by some accident of the storm, probably. So Bertram—he hated his Christian name, Bertram—crossed to the window and peered out, and in spite of the absence of the near-by electricity, he saw in that vague illumination which always hovers over a city, the shadowy figure of a girl standing on the steps below.

"You want a doctor?" he called down.

"Yes!" came a young voice, tinged with excitement. "Oh, hurry, please."

"For yourself? You're hurt?"

"No; no—it's for someone else. But I've come for you. Please hurry!"

"I'll be down at once."

"Surgical bag, doctor!" she called.

"All right."

As he turned hastily from the window and reached for his clothes, B. Darand, M. D., trembled slightly. The call seemed to be quite as imperative as he had hoped; and he felt the flattery of it more positively because only two doors away down the street was another surgeon, Doctor Durkee; much older and much better known from long residence in this locality.

He never thought, while he was fumbling in the dark that it was barely distinguishable as a doctor's sign, but that was all. B. Darand, M. D., was just twenty-seven years old, just a little better than two years out of medical school and a year beyond the finish of his internship at Cook County hospital. The past twelve months naturally had been thin ones; and B. Darand, M. D., had felt, indeed, that he had been even outdoing nature a bit in the thinness of personal re-

Tonight, at this moment, B. Darand, M. D., owed three weeks' board bill to the landlady upon whose house his brass plate stood; his bank balance was at the brink of overdraft; he owned that cheap watch, which told time in the dark, because he had pawned his good gold one, from the proceeds of which transaction remained precisely one dollar and forty-seven cents in silver and coppers.

Nothing is more conclusive of a man's estate than that he counts his copper pennies. Bertram had been brought up to be served by a valet. Habits from his valeted days clung to him; he never went to bed without first laying out his clothes properly for himself, a habit which made for haste for him now when he had to dress in the dark. When he was down stairs, and, surgical bag in hand, had opened the front door, the girl who had come for him complimented him—"You're quick, doctor."

"What's the case?" he asked.

"I'll tell you on the way over."

"Where do we go?" he asked.

"I'll drive you. My cars on the corner."

He peered at her who no longer was a mere shadow in the night but a fair eager, excited young girl who had come purposely for him. Why for him?

He asked: "Do I know you?"

"No. My name's Hewitt. Grame sent me. He tried to 'phone you; but the storm must've knocked out the 'phones and the lights. So Grame told me to go for you."

"I see," said Bertram, but comprehended nothing at all. Grame, he repeated to himself—Grame. Surely he knew no one by that name who might have sent for him.

"Accident case?" he asked this girl who called herself Hewitt.

He could feel that she was surprised at the question.

"Why, sure!" she said. "What'd you suppose?" And there was an odd, sharp note in that pleasant voice of hers.

The rain, which had poured earlier, had ceased; but the wind was strongly astir.

Ahead, two dim lights gleamed, and as they approached the corner Doctor Durand beheld the outlines of a roadster at the curb.

"Get in!" said Hewitt; "we've got to hurry." She seated herself behind the wheel and, as soon as he was beside her she started off to the south.

Bertram knew the city at first: she was driving down Wells street through the section of small stores, flat buildings, garages, warehouses and cheap hotels which lie just westward, and therefore inland from the lake, of the rich, luxurious district along the shore which in Chicago is called the "Gold Coast."

With the streets and avenues and "places" to the east Bertram was perfectly familiar—there he had been born and brought up; but he knew almost nothing of the streets to the west of Wells, except in general that there were an endless lot of them, confusedly alike and indiscriminate, where unnumbered hundreds of thousands of middle-class people lived.

Grame was of there, for the car swung suddenly off Wells street to the west, upon an avenue the name of which Bertram did not know. He wanted to ask Hewitt, but he did not for fear of betraying his ignorance of Grame, whom he ought to know. So he made talk of the storm.

Hewitt said in reply, "He got home, you see."

"Yes," said Bertram vaguely.

"I don't know how ever he did it," she continued, her voice trembling slightly.

She thrust forward with both legs suddenly, throwing out the clutch, clamping on the brake. Evidently here, up this strange street, was "home." Probably "he" was Grame; but Bertram could only guess.

"They near got him. Maybe they did! You've some work in front of you, Doctor. Baxter would just yell for help, Grame said. That's why they sent after you."

The car slipped with an easy skill to the curb before what appeared to be a three-story apartment building. All lights in this quarter of the city, too, were out; except for the wind there was silence. Nobody was about.

As Dr. B. Darand, surgical bag in hand, stepped down upon the wet sidewalk, he felt his pulses leaping with unprofessional excitement.

Hewitt said to him, as he hesitated: "You know this place, don't you? You've been here before. Well, don't wait for me. They want you in there. Go on in!"

He passed through the black vestibule, and tried the inner door. It was locked. Then he heard Hewitt behind him.

"Did you push the button?"

"No," he answered. Which button should he push?

He heard the click of a key and the turn of a bolt. Hewitt opened an inner door and a fait odor of stale cigarettes came from the oppressive darkness within. Then a further door to the left opened and a flickering yellow light cast a pattern on the opposite wall. Within it was the shadow of a man.

"That you, Kitty?" came the shadow's voice. It was a low, harsh voice, and Bertram saw the shadow's jaw move.

"I got him," answered Kitty.

"Hello, Doc!"

A short, heavy-set man in a dark sack suit appeared in the doorway, holding a candle.

"Hello," said Bertram steadily.

"In there! Take a look at him."

Doctor Darand entered quickly. It was a bedroom and he saw by the flickering candle-light the body of a young man lying beneath a sheet upon the bed. Doctor Darand moved forward. The young man lying there was appealingly handsome. His black hair curled against the white pillows, his face was pale as death and his eyes were closed. Doctor Darand's first glance was professional; it told him that this young man was not dead. Then, as he continued to gaze, Bertram was startled by the familiarity of the features on the pillow. He had seen that face before—somewhere. But even as he sought to recall the circumstances, and while he was thinking that, after all, no mistake had been made and he rightly had been summoned to this case, a rough hand suddenly seized his shoulder.

"Say—who the h—l are you?"

"I'm Doctor Darand," Bertram answered with a desperate attempt at coolness.

"Doctor Darand?" Grame's heavy jaw thrust forward threateningly. "What was the matter with him? You're helping him, are you?"

"No!" Bertram replied. "I'm a surgeon on my own."

"I got him," Kitty interfered. "If anything's wrong—"

"Wrong—h—l! He ain't the man!"

Grame withdrew his muscular grip from Bertram's shoulder and faced her.

"Well," she was saying to Grame, trying to be easy and confident, "I brought a doctor, anyway." And crossing to the bedside, she bent over the motionless figure beneath the sheet. One of her slender hands reached forth and touched the pale cheek caressingly.

"Good G—d," she said, in a gasp of entreaty to Grame, "I got a doctor, and there's no time to—"

Grame agreed by a jerk of his head, and she moved back from the bed. "Go ahead, doctor," she said to Bertram.

He drew the sheet from the body, disclosing clumsy bandages, crimson with blood, over the young man's abdomen. Bertram removed the bandages carefully. The trouble was a gunshot wound; no doubt of it.

"Well—how about it?" Grame's harsh voice inquired. Bertram asked, "When did it happen?"

"'Bout twenty minutes before she came for you."

"He ought," said Bertram, and had to repeat, "He ought to be removed to a hospital at once."

Grame's piglike eyes glittered unpleasantly. "Hospital! Any boob can say that." Grame took a step forward. "Look here, you—are you any good? You wanted this case bad and you just thought you'd come, eh? All right—now what can you do?"

"You mean, what can I do for him here?"

"You said it. Right here!" Grame snapped. "Now!"

"Who'll help me?" he asked.

"I will," said Kitty, and moved toward him. Grame was silent, leaning against the door-jamb, his piglike eyes watching intently.

Bertram whipped off his coat, rolled up his shirt sleeves, and crossing to the oak bureau which held a china washbowl and pitcher, he washed his hands. Kitty Hewitt brought him a clean towel, and he returned to the bedside and laid out from his bag, cotton gauze, a can of ether and a mask, and his instruments in their sterile covers.

The girl, Kitty Hewitt, remained steady, in that grim business of finding the bullet and sewing up the damage it had done. Bertram had to have help, and without flinching she placed cotton sponges, held his surgical clamps, passed knife and scissors to him. She never quivered, never failed him. Grame leaned against the wall beside the door, watching. He neither helped nor interfered, except as the threat of him acted to throw Bertram into that rare state of daring and skill in which a surgeon plans, devises and operates greatly. Yes, greatly, for there under the light of those two pocket torches and with Grame sullenly watching and menacing him, Bertram Darand felt the thrill of greatness for the first time.

When he was sewing up, and almost had finished, he heard from Grame.

"You're gettin' away with it, ain't you, doc? I bet you done better'n Durkee would."

Then Grame knew he had made a slip; and Bertram knew it. Durkee! It was Durkee that they had meant to call; Durkee, in some way, was in with Grame. And now, as Bertram straightened and wiped his hands, his work almost over, he realized the insufficiency of his theory that Grame had shot this young man. Bertram stared at the white face of his patient and suddenly knew him.

"Eddie Pellen!" he cried to himself. This man was Eddie Pellen, known to the police as "Eddie the Immune," implicated in a dozen "jobs."

Bertram, staring down at Eddie the Immune, felt Grame's strong, heavy hand on his shoulder.

"All through?" demanded Grame.

"I am, now."

"Well, what d'you think?"

Bertram looked from Grame's heavy-jowled red face to Kitty Hewitt. She was standing away from him a little and she was pale from the unnerving strain. Bertram said, as much to her as to Grame, "I think he has a chance."

"That's the stuff," said Grame.

"Now, then, demanded Grame roughly, "how much do you know?"

"What?" said Bertram. His momentary warmth, following Kitty's admiration of him, was gone; he was feeling let down.

"You heard me," Grame threatened: "how much do you know?"

"Why?" said Bertram.

"You think you recognize this fella?"

Bertram's instinct warned him against lying. "Maybe," he said.

"I guess so. Well—you're through now. You did a good job. Whadda we owe you? A hundred? How's that?"

Optimistic About Everything Says Josephine College

Dear Folks:

Since Joe wrote last week I suppose it is my turn now, so here goes. To begin with it has been entirely too lovely on the outside to get enthused over studies and lessons while on the inside of a class room. This is the time when you have to stand right up and shout "Ain't Nature Grand!" I believe it is and so don't get excited if my grade don't show up so well, 'cause I'm for more nature and less classrooms.

At present writing Joe is interesting himself in nature somewhere in some co-eds roadster. But for me, I'll take my roadster rides in the moonlight and enjoy the calmness of the heavens above.

To hear me talk I suppose you would believe that your daughter has gone to the dogs or been led astray. But don't be pessimistic, folks, and think of me as being so bad, 'cause I'm not. I'm optimistic about everything. I can even join in with the fellow who says that Onion belongs to the Lily family.

Fraternity initiations begin next week and now that Joe is an active member I suppose he will be in for all the torment that he can give the boys after the way he was treated. And our sorority initiations will start soon after but we aren't so reckless as are the boys.

Then on Monday the big event of the season will be decided and sororities will have plenty to talk about thereafter. It's the beauty contest. Jascha Heifetz, 26-year-old violinist, will act as one of the judges. Elsie Janis says he is the world's most eligible bachelor. So you can look out for a big time in our campus circles.

That week will be a large one indeed for on the following day the mock convention is to be pulled off. Famed politicians will be personified in real fashion when our own future politicians get in action. Then when the campus elections are held later in the spring all the late tactics will be employed.

You have probably heard of the parking lot the university prepared for the students to get them to remove their cars from the university districts. It's a fine lot and all indications are that it will be just as fine several years from now. It is across the Olentangy river and consequently there have been no cars parked there since the plans was first proposed. Why, if anyone was to park there it would be so unusual that the car would be reported as a stolen car.

Tempus is figiting again and so I'll close till next week,

Josephine.

An art museum has been fitted with a special heating and ventilating apparatus, so that the air within the building can be kept at the proper temperature and humidity to keep valuable masterpieces from cracking or warping. Many of the most costly paintings were made on wood backs which easily warp and ruin the pictures. This treatment of the air removes the dust which is also injurious to these works. The weather-making apparatus is helpful in protecting collections of furniture from harmful drying or swelling.

In Topeka, Kansas, where many retired farmers are educating their children, there were 1450 pupils in the audience of a four-year high school, when a contributor to The World's Work visited the school. He reports that of these, 1000, or about 70 per cent, had one or more parents born on farms or in the country, 450 of them were so born, and only four stated that they had chosen farming for their careers.

A NEW BANK

Last week the Citizens Bank announced that they would build a new home for their Hilltop Branch, to be located on West Broad street at the northeast corner North Park avenue. In planning for this new building, which will probably be the most up-to-date and most beautiful business house on the Hilltop or in the West End, this company expressed their faith in the Hilltop as could have been done in no other way.

Bank buildings involve large amounts of money and since such a strong financial institution as the Citizens Bank has announced that it will build a new home for its service to Hilltop people it can be understood that the building will be in keeping with the general spirit and progress that makes up the community.

This is indeed an expression of satisfaction in what the Hilltop has done in the past and an optimistic view of what is to be done in the future. Great things are in store for this section of the city. And there is much reason for the individual to have faith in the Hilltop.

MISUNDERSTANDINGS

The affairs of two people became scrambled over an omelet, says an Associated Press report. The happiness of two lives was disrupted because of a small matter, as so often happens. Yet that simple incident was, no doubt, the straw that broke the camels back. Misunderstandings and heartaches had been piling up, until the breaking point came. How essential is thoughtfulness and kindness in our dealings with those who are near to us!

LETTERS TO THE PEOPLE

Probably one of the most interesting parts of any paper is that section containing the letters to the editor. In these are the thoughts and opinions of the people of the community, and their ideas are interesting as well as valuable.

Believing that there are many on the Hilltop would be interested in such a column in this paper we take this opportunity to ask for opinions, ideas suggestions pertaining to the Hilltop and the people here.

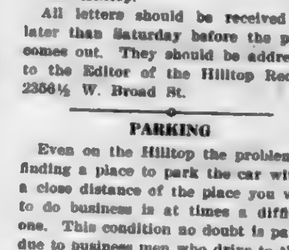
All letters received will be subject to the approval of the editor and will be given a proper space if they are thought to be of interest to the people of the Hilltop.

All letters should be received not later than Saturday before the paper comes out. They should be addressed to the Editor of the Hilltop Record, 2356½ W. Broad St.

PARKING

Even on the Hilltop the problem of finding a place to park the car within a close distance of the place you wish to do business in at times a difficult one. This condition no doubt is partly due to business men who drive to their business and park their car in front of their place of business or someone elses and forget about it until time to go home. This condition is an inconvenience to many possible customers and in some cases may cause a Hilltop business man to lose a sale.

Could not the Hilltop business man, who drive their machines to their place of business, help each other by parking on a side street and thereby leaving the parking space in front of their places of business open to the accomodation of possible customers?



Spring has a wonderful effect on everything. It is the one time of the year that everyone looks forward to. Everything happens in the spring time. It is the time for the arrival of the robin, house cleaning and papering, flower gardening, garden planting, automobile jaunts, and changes in young men's fancies. After all it is a good time because it is the time when a person is right next door to nature.

THE NUMERICAL VALUE OF WAR

The World war is ten years past. And with this thought in mind some people believe that war is inevitable. So the thoughts of today should be turned to peace and methods whereby it can be obtained.

• • • •

Everybody admits that the World war was an expensive thing both in lives and money. The lives are gone and the money for a great part remains in evidence in the form of national debts. The lives we will not at present consider. Instead of the humanitarian aspect we present money values of the war ten years after the conflict.

• • • •

The total cost of the war for the 25-month period that the United States was a participant amounted to $21,850,000,000. A big number says every one. But then this is an age of large figures, so why worry over a little thing like that?

• • • •

But to figure it in comparitive numbers we have a number 20 times as large as the pre-war debt or equal to the amount of money spent by the federal government from 1791 to 1914 including all the wars and various expenses of the government.

• • • •

Assuming that the Revolutionary war had been carried on at the expense of it at that time the amount of the World war expense would have been enough to prolong the Revolution for 1000 years.

• • • •

The war expense was more than $1,000,000 per hour for the 25 month period. The final ten months of the war was run at the rate of 44 million dollars per day. Coming down to earth in figures that are even astonishing to the average citizen this amounts to $30,555 per minute.

• • • •

They all paid too—not just the U. S. The cost to all nations involved has been set at $180,000,000,000. The number reads one hundred eighty-six billion dollars. For Great Britain alone the cost was more than it has cost to run that government from 1492 to 1914.

• • • •

So much for the World war. It is just one of many, but outstanding as being the worst. Future wars will continue to be worse. These figures are being lightly shaded from time to time by the money taken from the pockets of the tax payer. It is supposed that tax money is used to run the government. This statement is true but its meaning is limited by the fact that the war expense is figured in this amount paid for taxes.

• • • •

Just what part of the government revenue goes for war debts? In the year 1870, 36 per cent was so used. In 1918 it figured 32 per cent. At present the amount is about 30 per cent.

• • • •

Today the pestilence of war is not present but the cost of protection continues to mount and the figure assumes somewhat the aspect of war figures. The largest battleship of the U. S. navy today costs 43 million dollars and is scrapped in the following ten years in order to keep up with the improved methods of warfare that are being developed.

• • • •

Just this one article of protection would run our State university for a period of ten years. So it goes that the numerical figures of war appear as a liability rather than an asset.

The family group of curious, inactive gases—helium, argon, neon, krypton, and xenon—which were discovered some years ago, have proved valuable to man. Helium is well known for its use in airships. Another use has been found for it in the form of a helium-oxygen mixture to be breathed by deep-sea divers. Argon-filled electric light bulbs are more efficient than those filled with nitrogen gas alone. Neon gas glows a bright orange-red in electric vacuum tubes which are used as advertising street signs or powerful fog-piercing airplane beacons.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

HAVE LOFTY AIMS

You who are so often discouraged in the gray dawn, when it takes all your resolution to arouse yourself, ought not to lose heart.

The embarrassing puzzles that confront you with the coming of another day have been the common heritage of mankind since the first tick of time.

Millions of men and women, long before you came to this planet, passed through the same slough of despond, broke away from its terrible mire and paved their paths to success in flaming gold.

Through trying hours of depression, through storming waters and tempestuous winds, through lonely days when not a friendly smile beamed upon them, through heat and cold, heartaches and tears, these tired, timorous and anxious souls held to their lofty aims.

They turned their backs upon the somber marching brigade and lifted their eyes to the fleckless blue above.

Like trustful children they clung to the hand of Faith as she led them gently over the rough places and cheered them with encouragement.

Then came the flushing sun to light up their way—the glorious transformation—the rebirth of inspiration and ambition which took them step by step straight to the object of their life's desire.

To aim high, you should do as they did and pack your heart with good resolutions.

You may be cast in the world's drama for a leading part!

Aim high, pull hard on the bowstring and send your arrow speeding to the mark.

Let neither fear, pride nor passion weaken you.

Show those around you that you have mettle and character. Make the demonstration imposing, but not offensive.

Keep on the sunlit highway. Make room for fellow travelers.

Give swiftness to your feet as you turn away from folly.

Seek knowledge and understanding. Be loyal to your employer, to your creed and to your God.

If you do these things you will reach the enchanted dais at the summit of the hills, waiting there for your coming.

Can you vision it? If you can, you will feel the first thrill of the joy that will be yours when the world crowns you as one of its victors.

Ambition of This Young Hilltopper Is to Be Fireman

WARREN SIDNEY LANTHORNE

"Well, I think I'll be a fireman," was the reply of this young Hilltopper when he was interviewed last week. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Lanthorne, 48 N. Eureka Ave.

The young man continued to tell his reasons why he wanted to be a fireman. He told of a recent trip to station No. 10 where his father was on duty. "I want to run the pump on one of the new trucks. But I'll not slide down that big pole." And he turned his attentions aside to his father. "Daddy I don't want you to slide down that pole anymore. When you hear the bell, go down the stairs. You might break your leg on that pole."

"I like the chief's bell," he continued "more than that horn to get people out of the way."

Yes, he's to be a fireman for he has suggested other occupations and they haven't met with the approval of his parents but he isn't discouraged as long as he can be a fireman. Early last week he inquired, "Mother, would you like for me to be a taxi man?" Her reply did not cause him any uneasiness. "How do you like a policeman?" Again the answer came "No." "Well, then I'll be a fireman."

Warren Sidney is four years old and will start in kindergarten when he is five.

USING OLD PHONOGRAPH RECORDS

Old or cracked phonograph records become quite numerous in a family of children. One of the ways of using them to advantage after they are cracked or too worn to play, is to keep one on the ironing board to keep the iron polished. It is handier and quicker than a piece of beeswax that is too small.

There are other uses of old records which enable the children to learn the properties of wax and to construct things from it. The wax may be melted away from the other ingredients in the records by putting them in oil of turpentine, or by heating in boiling water. The other ingredients form a residue, leaving the wax on top. The wax can then be used for modeling various animals and toys. It can be used for waxing floors and furniture by adding turpentine to the desired consistency.

Articles that are exposed such as floors and doors will not warp or crack under the heat of sun or radiator if they are frequently treated with wax. A good floor wax is composed of two parts of wax and three parts of venice turpentine.

The Sandman Story

By Martha Martin

'Tis DEER IN THE ZOO

Billie Brownie loved to go and see the creatures in the zoo. Nothing delighted him more than to go and call on some of the Deer family and others in their neighborhood.

First of all he called on the white-tailed deer. When Billie Brownie saw all the splendid big antlers looking particularly fine.

"We gentlemen," said Mr. White-Tailed Deer to Billie Brownie, "are the ones who have antlers, though the Miss and Mrs. Reindeer have antlers."

Mr. [illegible] was a most [illegible] creature, and he told Billie Brownie something of himself too, besides what he told him about the antlers.

"We live where there is thick underbrush and plenty of wooded country and we manage to get through this kind of country even though we have such big antlers," he said.

"So Many Wonderful Creatures in Our Great Family."

"It is only we gentlemen white-tailed deer who get so cross at certain seasons, and then it is that we might be [illegible] our heads down to [illegible] and [illegible] our enemies with our great antlers before us.

"We are brave, though, and we love life and we want to be here and we [illegible] we [illegible] back. Yes [illegible]

We [illegible] known of all [illegible] don't [illegible] in [illegible] [illegible] here."

"Yes, I imagined that," smiled Billie Brownie, "but I'm always glad to be told for I like to hear all the good news I can and I'd rather hear a thing twice than not to hear it at all."

"I've got also an older [illegible] of the furry creatures," a bit of good news," said the White-Tailed Deer.

"Oh, I think so," said Billie Brownie, "for you were speaking of some [illegible] and that is White-Tailed Deer news, at any rate, and you are in the zoo here now."

"Well, glad it interested you," said Mr. White-Tailed Deer.

Then Billie Brownie went to call on the Axis Deer.

"You're the most beautiful of all," Billie Brownie said, as the Axis Deer smiled sweetly.

"It is a lovely compliment, Billie Brownie," the Axis Deer said, "and it delights my heart, yet there are so many wonderful creatures in our great family—oh, so much finer than I could ever hope to be.

"There are splendid elk and moose, great, majestic, handsome animals, so big and so magnificent!

"There are curious ones, too, as the Mule Deer from the Rocky mountains with his long ears. He is a big creature and much larger than I am."

"Oh," said Billie Brownie, "size isn't everything. I love your soft tan hair and your beautiful white spots, and I like it that though you come from a warmer place than you are now in you do not complain."

"Ah," said the Axis Deer, "but think how kind they are to me. They have built a house for me so that in the winter I can go inside my lovely warm house and not mind the cold."

"So I could not complain."

"True, they have done that for you, lovely Axis Deer. But at the same time you aren't of the complaining kind. If you were you'd complain and grumble about the weather even though you have a warm home.

"Creatures who complain do so anyway and it shows they have such cross dispositions. Yes, I'm an admirer of yours, lovely, graceful, sweet-natured Axis Deer."

And the Axis Deer looked at Billie Brownie out of his beautiful eyes and smiled that smile that only a deer can smile—just a little wee smile, but oh, so full of sweetness!

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

THE THIRST FOR GLORY

Thirst for glory is instinctive. Like most things which are instinctive, it is useful.

Early in life a little boy begins to take pride in the things which his parents own.

He is sure that their piano is a better piano than that of the neighbor's, and that they trade with a better butcher.

He does this because he can thus shine in reflected glory, which is better than no glory at all.

By and by, as he grows, he fights with other boys, not so much because he is quarrelsome, but because fighting is the best way to get credit in the eyes of other boys.

A little later he "shows off" such accomplishments as he has in order to gain the admiration of the other sex.

It is a mistake to regard this thirst for glory as vanity.

One of the reasons that war appeals strongly to young men is that it affords an opportunity for glory.

There are men who fight in the armies of other countries, which proves they are not fighting for patriotic motives.

Nor do they fight for the sake of killing.

They "seek the bubble reputation," even at the cannon's mouth.

We have known many men who have accomplished important things in life, and we have never known one who has not been very proud of the recognition his work brought him, and very glad to work hard for more recognition.

If every one was contented to be a mere plodder, to walk along the byways of life, without ever seeking a taste fo fame, nothing worth recording would have happened in the history of the world.

The statesman who fights for a cause, the painter who paints a masterpiece, the preacher who sways congregations, all are working partly for glory, and all eagerly welcome it when it comes.

And why not?

What is there in life any sweeter than applause and praise, so long as it is honestly earned?

Lincoln, as a young man, was delighted at the approval he won when he fought successfully an important lawsuit.

Even modest John Keats sought approval, and was broken hearted when work which he knew to be remarkable was sneered at by a parcel of smug critics.

Ambition has played a great part in the progress of the world. Sometimes it has been mean and selfish, but as often it has been high and noble.

It has always been an incentive to that tremendous effort and labor without which no fame and no achievement is ever possible.

Vol. XI. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, April 19, 1928. No. 51.

TO DEDICATE NEW CHURCH

St. Aloysius Will Be Dedicated by Bishop J. J. Hartley Sunday.

The new St. Aloysius church at Midland avenue and Broad street will be dedicated on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. The Right Reverend James J. Hartley, D. D. will preside at the [illegible].

Rev. R. E. Schwars states that there will be but one mass in the new church on Sunday. The 7 and 8:30 masses will be held in the old church as usual.

While the church is being dedicated the doors will be closed to the people but will be opened and the people will be admitted when the dedication is completed. The altars will be blessed before the mass.

The new church was built at an expense of about $150,000. It will seat 600 people.

One of the outstanding features of the building is the art windows. They were imported from Germany. Much of the marble used in the altars and statues was imported from Italy.

Rev. Schwars stated that Hilltop people would be welcome to visit the church or to attend the services.

MEN'S CLUB TO BE ORGANIZED

Tentative plans for the organization of a men's club at Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church were made last Sunday evening. The objective of the club will be to take up some feature of work in the church.

On Friday evening, May 4, a supper will be held at the church when it is hoped to complete the organization.

William F. Weir, D. D., director of Department of Men's Work, Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian church in the United States will be the speaker at this meeting and help in the organization of the club. It is hoped all men of the church will take an active part in the work of the organization.

TROOP 45 HOLDS CAMPFIRE MEET

An "August Assembly" of Troop 45 Boy Scouts was held on Monday night at the home of Scoutmaster A. W. Elliott at Rome. Supper around the campfire was the big feature of the evening.

Plans were made to sponsor such a banquet and get together each month.

Those present were Herbert Williams, assistant scout master, George Cooper, E. H. Matheny and V. E. Wolfe, members of the troop committee.

Scouts in attendance were James Matheny, John and Robert Wolfe, Raymond Gaib, Gifford Markeson, Jack Miles, Ralph Harper, Gerald Pollman, William Craft and Robert Cooper.

Adds Partner

C. J. Barber, dry cleaner at 1426 Sullivant Ave., announced early in the week that J. F. Michael, formerly with the Smith Dye House of Pittsburg had bought an interest in the Barber Dry Cleaning Co. The new firm will be known as the Barber & Michael Dry Cleaning Co. The partnership went into effect on Monday.

Pass Tests

Ten members of Troop 23 Girl Scouts passed their Tenderfoot degree on April 12.

The patrol leaders of the troop are: Anetta Jones, Helen Berry, Hildred Couser and Dorothy Adams.

Bishop Maize to Preach Here

Harrisburg, Pa., Pastor to Speak at Westgate Park Evangelical Church Sunday.

Bishop M. T. Maze, D. D., of Harrisburg, Pa., will preach Sunday evening, April 22, in the Westgate Park Evangelical church, 2836 W. Broad St., at 7:30 p. m.

Bishop Maze comes to Columbus this week for a meeting of the Ohio Conference of Presiding Elders, and is scheduled to speak at the Columbus District Ministerial convention to be held in Westerville on Thursday and Friday of this week. He will preach in Marion on Sunday morning, coming to Columbus to speak in the Westgate Park church on Sunday evening. Matters of special interest to all Evangelicals on the Hilltop will be announced. There will be special music under the direction of Mrs. Frances Smith.

Council Favors Skip Stop Cars

Speed up Ordinance to Appear Again in Two Weeks.

On May 17 an ordinance permitting skip stop car service by the Columbus Railway, Power and Light Co. will go into effect. The ordinance was passed on Monday night by the city council.

The ordinance making all streets with car tracks main thoroughfares and permitting 25 mile per hour speed in the city was referred to the traffic commission and will come before the council in about two weeks.

It is not known if the head of the Rail Light Co. will institute the skip stop service if the other ordinances are not approved.

Objection to the main thoroughfare ordinance was voiced by the Columbus Automobile Club.

Girl Reserves Give Program at O. S. U.

The Girl Reserve club of Highland Avenue Junior High school gave a demonstration of the Girl Reserve recognition services before a class at Ohio State university in connection with the Ohio Educational conference at the Ohio Union on Friday, April 13.

A seven-mile hobby hike was enjoyed by the club on April 10 under the direction of Miss McGregor and Miss Kennedy.

The club was formally recognized at the Y. W. C. A. by the Barrett group on March 27.

Mrs. Harry Geis, 1168 Hope Ave. entertained the U-Go-I-Go Bridge club Tuesday evening, April 10. Prizes were won by Mrs. Tom Wimer and Mrs. McKenzie. The next meeting will be held Tuesday, April 24, at the home of Mrs. C. F. Gillivan, 38 N. Terrace St.

WEST HI-Y GIVES SUNDAY PROGRAM

The Hi-Y club of West High school furnished the program at the evening services at Gift St. M. E. church Sunday.

The introductory address was given by Elmer Smith. Lawrence Tracy spoke on "The Hi-Y Emblem." Frank Ryder on "The Hi-Y Platform," and John Wolfe on "The Hi-Y Purpose." David Ballard and Lionel Koontz sang.

Boys' Worker at Highland P.-T. A.

H. W. Gibson of Boston to Address Meeting Tonight in Church Auditorium.

H. W. Gibson, noted author, lecturer and boys' worker of Boston, Mass., will speak before the meeting of the Highland Ave. Parent Teacher Association to be held tonight at 7:45 in the auditorium of the Glenwood M. E. church. His topic will be "Should Parents or Children Control the Home?"

Mr. Gibson is being brought here through the courtesy of the Y. M. C. A. This meeting is open to all parents on the Hilltop and West Side. Parents of high school children are especially urged to attend.

Children will be entertained with educational movies and a talk by Mr. Craig. Music will be furnished by the Boys' Glee club. H. C. Hutchison will lead the invocation.

This promises to be one of the best meetings of the year at Highland school.

To Give Show

A picture show for the benefit of the John Burroughs school will be given at the Ritz theater at 8:30 p. m. on Friday, April 27. The proceeds of the show will be used to buy equipment for the new addition of the school which will be opened up next fall.

25 ADMITTED TO EXCELSIOR

Honor Is Self-Made, J. G. Collicott Tells Highland Assembly.

"The Honor list in a democracy is a self-made affair and because of this a great deal more is expected of honor students," J. G. Collicott, superintendent of Columbus public schools told students and members of the faculty at Highland Junior High on Thursday morning when 25 members were admitted to the Excelsior Society, honor society of the school.

"However this does not always follow and in these exceptions is the challenge to the rest," he continued. "Thus we must learn to appreciate our own good points and our own failures so that we may make the most of ourselves." In closing he said, "It is be a friendly world and as long as we conduct ourselves properly people want to and will be our friends."

The exercises were held in the auditorium of the Glenwood M. E. church. The new members of the Excelsior club were seated on the platform. H. H. Keighley, principal, presided at the meeting.

"Highland School," a song written and composed by Miss Ola Trump, teacher of music at Highland, was sung by the Girls' Glee club as the opening number. The Boys' Glee club closed the program. The "Response" for the Honor List was given by Jack Miles.

The Flag salute was led by Scoutmaster Elliott and a color guard of Boy Scouts followed.

Following is the list elected to Excelsior:

Lena Mae Adkins, Mary Allison, Irma Bartgis, Lewis Chenowith, Arnold Fink, Iris Gill, Olive Grimm, Ruth Hensel, Elizabeth Homer, Ethel Kelly, Emma Lohr, Madge Markins, Catherine Maupin, Jack Miles, Corinne Miller, Virginia Miller, Emma Muller, Helen Park, Roy Riggs, Louise Robb, Anna Reese, Louise Shellabarger, Eunice Stringer, Faye Trapp, Wanda West.

Make Hilltop 100%

Delegates to the National Republican and Democratic Conventions will be elected at the Primaries on Tuesday, April 24.

Much depends upon this election. The delegates who are elected at this time will nominate candidates to be voted on in the November elections. Therefore it is necessary that the most capable delegates be elected on Tuesday in order to get the best men in these presidential race.

It is the duty of every resident of the Hilltop to make this section of the city highest in percentage of voters. One hundred per cent is not impossible.

Democrat Women O. K. Candidates

Eleventh Ward Women's Club Endorse Two for Delegates to Convention.

Mrs. C. C. Williams and Mr. Nathan McCoy, candidates for delegates to the National Democratic convention were unanimously endorsed by the Eleventh Ward Women's Democratic club at the meeting of the organization at the home of Mrs. Samuel Willis, 145 S. Roys Ave., on Monday night.

Fred Heer and Henry Worley were endorsed for county commissioners.

Other delegates that have been endorsed by the club are Mrs. W. K. Merriman, Mrs. Walter Freshwater, Grover Amerine, John Lucas and William Palmer. The alternates are Mrs. Richard C. Frank, Mrs. F. L. Scott, Fred Ault, Ralph Smeltzer and Henry Schultz.

The next meeting of the club will be held at 211 N. Burgess Ave. on May 21.

Westwood Initiation

Judge E. V. Mahaffey of the municipal court will be the speaker at the meeting of the Men's Brotherhood of the Burgess Avenue U. B. church next Tuesday evening, April 24, at 7:30.

His subject will be "The Under Privileged, the Over-Privileged and the Privileged Boy."

CLASS MEETING

The Beta Lambda class of Glenwood M. E. church will hold its regular business and social meeting at 2881 W. Broad St., Tuesday evening, April 24, at 8 o'clock. All members are cordially invited. Mrs. Clara Gibson is chairman and her assistants are Mesdames Geren, Gibson, Gemeinhardt, Fishinger, Fink, Fletcher and Mrs. Hodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Wilson and daughters Margaret and Helen of 38 S. Wheatland Ave., were the honor guests at a 6 o'clock dinner Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Wobley of Riverside Drive.

Named Investigator

Mrs. R. O. Harrison, 53 Blunt Blvd., was appointed as an investigator in the city charities division to succeed Miss Mary Rowan. Mrs. Harrison was appointed by Safety Director McCune. Her appointment went into effect on Tuesday.

Hilltop in Council

When city council met on Monday night the following matters pertaining to the Hilltop were passed on:

Ordered the improvement of Binns boulevard and Roys avenue between Dartmoor and Vandeburg.

Adopted a resolution to repair side walks on Belvidere avenue, Sullivant avenue to Broad street.

Win Prize

Jack Richard Metzger, 6, and Allen Bell Metzger, 10, of 170 Midland Ave., were winners of a prize of $5 in the D-O-K-R amateur night held at the K. of P. hall, 24 W. Goodale St., last Tuesday night. The two sang several songs.

Start Children at Home—Valentine

More Important Than Education in Schools Says Former P.-T. A. Council Head.

"Education in the homes is more important than in the schools," said Mrs. C. M. Valentine, past president of the Columbus P.-T. A. council, when she addressed the meeting of the West Broad School Parent-Teacher Association at the school auditorium last Thursday afternoon.

"Our children cost too much to be experimented with," she continued. "The right kind of influence in the home is the laying of the cornerstone for the child's life."

Mrs. Valentine explained the seven objectives of the P.-T. A. She also recommended that parents read the book "Parents on Probation" by Marion Van Waters.

Musical numbers were given by Roscoe Karns and Margaurite and Louise Byerly. A report of the convention held at Marion was given.

Republican Meet Set for Friday

Will Boost Willis Delegates for National Republican Convention.

A Republican meeting will be held on Friday evening at the I. O. O. F. hall, 2356 W. Broad St., at 8 p. m. James A. White and Edward L. Taylor will be the speakers of the evening. The purpose of the meeting will be to boost the Willis delegates for the National Republican convention.

The meeting is being sponsored by the Willis-for-President Twelfth District Republican Committee. Cecil J. Randall, 1089 W. Broad St., is chairman and Charles S. Best, 1170 Virginia Ave., is secretary.

The Willis delegates have not made known any popular choice to take the place of the late Senator Frank B. Willis. They will be free to vote for any candidate whom they feel will be able to represent the Republican party in the coming election.

The primary election will be held on Tuesday.

Contest to Close

The contest of the Reds and the Blues of the Young Married Peoples' Bible class of the Hillcrest Baptist church will come to a close on Sunday.

At present the Blues have a total of 128 points. The Reds have 414 points. Dr. R. J. Miller is instructor of the class. It is open to anyone.

The Southeast Ohio branch of the Women's Missionary association will be held at the Burgess Avenue U. B. church Wednesday, April 25 and 27.

MAY ANNOUNCE LIBRARY SITE

Holmes Library Books May Be Turned Over to Hilltop Branch.

It is expected that some definite plans as to the location and establishment of the new Hilltop Branch library will be announced by the first of next week according to J. H. Pugh, city librarian.

A meeting of the library trustees was held on Monday. Most of the plans for the new branch libraries made possible by the $30,000 appropriation of city council are nearly completed. Books are being ordered and the remaining difficulty lies in the fact that an exact site has not as yet been decided upon.

The matter of a site is in the hands of the city law department and some conclusions will be made soon. The leases will be for a period of one year, according to the appropriation of the council. A new lease will be signed for the following years if the council makes a similar appropriation for following years. A great number of possible locations have been submitted to the board for approval.

J. A. Holmes, son of J. T. Holmes, donor of the books of the Holmes Hilltop library, stated that the Holmes library could run until June on the funds now in the treasury. It would be necessary to conduct a canvass of the Hilltop as in previous years if the library was to operate beyond that time.

Mr. Holmes suggested that the Holmes library board would probably offer the books of the present library to the new branch library to be retained on the Hilltop.

Attic Serves as Gentle Reminder To Girls Who Would Be Aviators

High, high up in the air! That's the ambition of a group of Hilltop girls that have recently banded together in an attempt to make their dreams come true and at the same time keep abreast with the modern age and take to the air.

And when everything was said and done the group, consisting of 12 girls, most of whom are students at West High school gallantly displayed their symbols on their middles and called themselves members of the Aviatrix club.

Now to the name would signify the club is a feminine institution for the purpose of studying aviation. And that's what the girls say they are doing. They have high hopes for their club and every member has a desire to take to the air to show this changing world that the women of the coming generation will have a say in the way things are to be conducted in the air in the future.

But so far as has been ascertained no member of the organization has as yet had this looked-forward-to-thrill. And furthermore they have no landing field or airship for their meeting place.

But why worry over such trivial matters say these up and coming Hilltop girls. And so to make things more realistic and to ever remind them of their purpose they hold their meetings on the third floors of the various homes of the girls. And as the girls in their high stations look out over the city and imagine the future of their club when they have all become expert airplane "propellers."

The girls have their meetings every two weeks. During the summer months they will probably meet more often and take extended sojourns to Norton Field. And here the girls have hopes of displaying their power over men and make the heads of that flying post realize the value of girls in aviation and give them a trial flight.

And now for the personell of this newly formed organization that may soon take to the air. Miss Ruth Epperson is president and Miss Margaret Houghtoman is vice president. Irma Bartgis is secretary and treasurer.

Other members of the club are Helen Blair, Grace Pinsenschaum, Jean DeBow, Jane Markoma, Frances Gilliian, Gertrude Held, Rita Mae Wolfe, Corlene Miller and Virginia George.

The Papuans of New Guinea have their fish nets spun for them by spiders. A flexible bamboo stem is stuck into the ground where the spiders are thick. The end of the pole is tied down to the stem, so that a large loop is made, which the spider soon finds and fills with his web. The threads spun by these spiders, which are about as big as a hazel nut, are so strong that the webs make very good fish nets.

Baseball and Exams Make a Full Week Says Joe College

Dear Folks—

Josephine has shifted the task to me this time. I suppose she believes that I have more powers over you when it comes to getting money. Well there is no use beating around the bush or giving my words flowery language. We need cash and we are giving you our thanks in advance for it.

This week has been cluttered full of various things from the opening of baseball season to the first mid-term exams of the quarter. And in addition the Ohio Educational conference has been in session here and we have had lots of brainy men from over the country here to pour out their experiences and ideas to those who would become members of the pedagogy in later years.

Not for me. I mean the teaching stuff. I have had enough of it from having to sit before a school marm or professor for the past 13 years. I'll be satisfied with having some of the knowledge they have tried so hard to poke into my cranium but I don't believe I could contract for a life of tormenting students.

Well, Ohio State went down under the heels of the Indiana baseballers for the opening game of the Big Ten series. Things don't look so bright here in the way of the old collegiate baseball. One good thing is that you don't have to strain your eyes through a knot hole to see the games here.

But maybe you don't think I'm getting red up on this H. O. T. C. stuff. When I first came here I could hardly wait till I could get my uniform and begin playing soldier. But I've changed as have most of the boys. Now the uniform is bespattered with horse hairs and dirt and is torn in several places and no longer are we proud of the blue in the uniform. And hot—oh boy are they? This spring weather will be the cause of a reduction in weight if we are forced to wear these suits.

But speaking of the school army, you should see the boys strut their stuff on Wednesday afternoon.

And in regard to the mid-term exams. Well I can't say what I think of them. They are bad enough in the winter time and now you can imagine how we feel toward them when everything is rosy on the outside and we are cooped up here in a class room with a pen in one hand and pushing it for all we are worth to finish a certain number of questions before the hour is up.

Just a word before I close— If you could send that money special delivery we sure would appreciate it.

Your Collegiate Son,
Joe.

A chemical tear gas, employed in the World War, has been found useful also in time of peace. Food products such as meal, nuts, butter and dried fruits exposed to chloropicrin for a week, have been uninjured. The gas does not affect the germinating power of the seed and it kills or fatally poisons such insects as the Indian meal moth, the Mediterranean flour moth, and the flour beetle.

OUR TOURIST CAMP

Time for tourists is here and this end of the city has no real offering in the way of a good tourist camp. Instead we have but a poor excuse at the foot of the hill "where the Hilltop begins."

A tourist camp goes a long way in leaving a good impression with tourists as to the pride of a city. Should the camp have extra facilities and cleanliness the city is judged to be interested in the tourist traffic.

There can hardly be a doubt as to Columbus wanting the summer tourists. But the tourist camp spoken of does not display such a feeling. The fact that it is located at the bottom of the hill and forms a ravine with no outlet makes the parking lot a small sized lake after a summer rain. This is both uncomfortable and unhealthful.

Some reconstruction work on this lot at a small expense would make it an ideal spot for tourists. And it is truly to the advantage of the city to have such work done.

Spring time could hardly cause a man to complain of his health or his business so when we hear someone going through such talk as if they might mean it we believe that they have a little too much spring in their veins and let it carry them too far along the lines of least resistance toward no good end.

What's in a garden. There can be more in the back yard patch than you might suppose. It will when properly cultivated produce vegetables for the table and it also gives out lots in good health through the exercise expended in keeping the ground in shape. This little touch of nature goes a long way toward making the spring and summer the bright time of the year.

If you keep disregardin' the example of others, you never become wise if you keep imitatin' it, you never become great.

We cannot have peace along the pathway of life until, like little children, we put our hand in the Father's hand and say, "Lead on."

Each of us needs a college yell to cheer on the team composed of Faith, Hope, Love, Courage and Work.

Try Haunts Grocery & Meat Markets.

A flower makes excellent use of both the rain and the sunshine; so may we utilize both adversity and good fortune.

"Trade Your Smiles."

Shadows of the City

By EDWIN BALMER and GENE MARKEY

A NIGHT CALL

W. N. U. SERVICE (Copyright by W. G. Chapman)

Grame had become too suddenly affable. Bertram did not like it; and he liked it less when he glanced at Kitty Hewitt. She was gazing not at him, but at Grame, with wide eyes.

"Look here,' she said to Grame. That was all. "Look here!" But she sucked in her breath quickly and her big eyes made a plea.

"I'll get you the cash," said Grame and he turned heavily and walked from the room.

Bertram faced Kitty, who stared at him with eyes haggard from what she had been through and from dread. Her eyes said that she wanted no more this night and they told that she knew there must be more.

"What does it mean?" Bertram asked her.

"Wait here," she begged. "Don't try to pull anything. Don't make a move." She crossed the room, closing the door. His fingers, putting away his instruments, lingered on the longest of his sharp surgical knives, then he stood his head and returned it to the case. He went to a chair against a wall on which Eddie Pellen the Immune's clothing lay; but as he bent over and was feeling through the pockets, the door suddenly opened and closed again. Kitty Hewitt had returned.

"Listen," she said.

"Well?"

"Drop it, doctor," she ordered curtly, as he clung to Eddie's clothes. "Hoping for a gun. Well, those have been frisked. Besides—" she took a step toward him—"do you think you'd have a chance in the gun fight here? You're in a jam, but I've got a chance for you."

Bertram dropped the clothes. "Chance? What do you mean?"

"Listen," she said again. "You're a surgeon—and a d—n good one. Well, these people need a d—n good surgeon. It wasn't your fault you got in here tonight. I brought you. But that does not help you—" her voice dropped to a whisper—"with these people. But I got your chance, doctor. I said to Grame, 'Doctor Darand's young and you can count on him. If he comes with us.' So come—I'm telling you."

"With you?"

"Nobody will ever know," she said, again pleading with him rather than threatening.

Dr. Bertram Darand had no long time to deliberate over it. Grame entered.

"Here!" he offered banknotes. "I got your money. Two hundred for the job. That's how we pay. See?" His pigilke eyes searched Bertram suspiciously. "There y'are."

There was no hint of bargain or compact in Grame's cold offer. Whatever Kitty Hewitt had made him agree to a few minutes before was now denied. Grame was paying for a completed performance, asking nothing of the future.

Bertram backed away a little, staring at Grame and at the money, but not thinking of it. His mind was on the window behind him. He was on the first floor, he recollected, and he considered. "They're giving me this money, for a blind. They're going to kill me, and they can as easy take back two hundred as one. The window's my chance." But he ceased to back toward it. Instead, he advanced to Grame and took the money.

"Thanks," he said, as easily as he could. "Your man's doing well. Anyway, I can't do any more here. I guess I'll be going."

"I'll drive you," said Kitty Hewitt quickly.

Grame turned to her with a scowl. "You're all in, Kit. Sope'll take him home."

"No one will have to take me," said Bertram. "I'll 'phone for a taxi."

"'Phon's out tonight," snapped Grame. "Sope'll be glad to do it."

"I'll walk," Bertram offered, as steadily as he could.

"Suit yourself," said Grame, and turned and left the room, but waited outside the door. Either he had given some signal to Kitty or else of her own accord she followed him, and just outside the door, Grame spoke to her in whispers.

Bertram did not try to listen; he backed to the window and then, suddenly swinging about, he seized the lifts under the window blinds. By the grace of God, the window was not locked nor did it stick. He had it up before Grame could jump into the room. Bertram leaped through the window upon a cement paving in a tiny court between two building. He sprawled on the cement, and as he picked himself up a circle of light followed him, his shadow sprawled below him. Grame had come to the window and was holding him covered by the light of an electric torch.

Probably Grame had him covered by a pistol, too, Bertram thought, and he cringed in expectation of a shot. But no bullet came and Bertram shrank to the wall and crept along it toward the end of the area where it narrowed into a bottle neck, to the alley.

Still Grame did not shoot; he made no sound; he only kept his light close to Darand. But at the end of the area two dark figures loomed up. Bertram halted and pressed against the wall.

Beside him, very close, a bolt scraped and a door opened—a door which freed no light.

"In here," came a whisper of a voice—of Kitty Hewitt's voice. "Quick!"

He stumbled forward and in. The door slammed behind him and the bolt scraped again. An electric torch lit a circle of cellar, showing a laundry tub and a gas stove.

"There!" said Kitty Hewitt, and her circle of light lifted to another door ahead.

Together they flung open the door and went into the brick-walled passage, where her light disclosed another door, directly ahead.

He opened this, but more cautiously, and he found himself at the foot of a short flight of cement steps leading to the street. Behind him Kitty Hewitt had extinguished her light.

"Into my car!" she whispered to him, and together they ran up the steps and across the sidewalk to her roadster.

Another car, a bigger one, stood behind it, but no one was in the car.

Then someone came out of the front of the flat building; somebody, not Grame, called "Kit! Kit! you d—n fool!" Yet no shot was fired.

That street, in front of that flat, was no place for shooting.

Kitty swung the car about a corner and looked back. "They're after us, doctor," she said, her voice thrilling.

Of course "they" were after "us"—us being Kitty Hewitt and Bertram Darand, M. D. "They" were in that big car which had been at the curb behind Kitty's, but Kit was giving them a ride.

Her foot on the accelerator strained forward constantly. "The d—n thing's down to the floor board," she said to Bertram, complainingly. "It's wide open."

She meant the foot-throttle, of course; she was giving it all the gas she could.

"Where are they?" she asked him.

He gazed back and estimated. "They—" no doubt about it, "they" were about a block behind.

Kitty Hewitt asked: "They're going to get us?"

"They're gaining some." Bertram said, and after a few more seconds a roar reached Kitty and him above their own engine noise.

"How close?" asked Kitty, never taking her own eyes from the pavement rushing under her wheels.

"Fifty yards."

"Look under the seat!"

"What?"

"Look under your seat!"

The cushion on the front seat was divided and he lifted the half upon which he had sat and uncovered a contrivance of steel braces, wound with a heavy chain.

Kitty Hewitt called: "That's it. Take it out."

He took it out, thrust back the cushion and plumped down upon it, the contrivance in his lap.

"Spread it!" cried Kitty.

He unwound the chain and found folded arms of steel at each end. He spread them and they formed six armed stars of steel.

"Get it?" Kitty Hewitt cried to him. "Throw it in front of their wheel. Throw it out, when they come up."

Kitty Hewitt skewed her car over, it veered so suddenly that Bertram thought she was hit.

"Now give it to 'em!" she yelled and Bertram understood. She had swung to the left, to bring them up, when they overtook, on the right where he could throw his stars and chain; and, cooly as he could, Bertram arranged his bobble of steel and gave it to them.

"What'd it do?" Kitty Hewitt demanded.

"I don't know."

"They turn over?"

"It smashed them," Bertram said. "They're against the curb. But I don't think that their car has turned over."

"All right," said Kitty and drove on.

"Why," he asked gently, "why did you do it—for me?"

"Oh!" she exclaimed, and hesitated an instant, as though startled by him out of her own thought. "I'd have dont it for anybody," she answered lightly.

"Would you—for anybody?"

Her wide eyes turned to him frankly. "No," she told him. "Of course I wouldn't." And she seized the driving-wheel again and pressed the starter.

"Where're you going?" he asked her.

"Oh, just going," she said, and they moved slowly through suburban streets where milk-wagons were delivering to little cottages and where they found no one but milkmen astir until a newspaper truck lumbered by them and came to a halt before a little shop.

"Would you mind stopping?" Bertram asked Kitty Hewitt.

She drew up near the shop. "Go ahead," she said; and he stepped out and took one of the papers from the bundle.

"Policeman Shot by Gunman!" said the black-face type at the top of the front-page column inserted as last "extra" news.

"Eddie Pellen, who has come to be known as Eddie the Immune, shot and probably mortally wounded Patrolman John Monaghan in a revolver battle when Monaghan came upon Eddie Pellen in—"

R. Darand, M. D., did not read the rest of the report. He looked up at Kitty Hewitt.

"The papers got it, did they?" she asked.

He handed the paper to her, and watched her as her eyes went to the black-face type.

"That it?" he asked her.

"That's it, doctor."

"Well," he said to her slowly, "what are you going to do now?"

"What are you?" she demanded of him. "That's what I need to know, first."

"Why?"

"Why?" she repeated, with a shade of her contempt with which she had ejaculated "you" when they were racing. "I suppose I've just made myself awful popular with Grame and especially with Sope, just now."

"Are you," said Bertram, "are you figuring on going back to them?"

"Going?" she exclaimed and smiled ruefully. Doctor, those boys are gutters."

"You mean they'll get you?"

"Get me? If you peep, doctor, I don't know about you, but I do know about me. I haven't a chance. But if you'll play with us, if you'll just be sensible now and be good—"

"Be good!" exclaimed Bertram.

"Yes! Listen now! You were in a jam. I got you out into it; but you got yourself in, too. Isn't that the truth? You knew I didn't come for you. You walked right in. Anyway, there you were in a jam, and I got you out, didn't I?"

"You certainly did."

"It wouldn't be so bad, doctor, if I hadn't had to spring the chain. But that—well, we don't know what we did, do we?"

"No!" Bertram admitted.

"Maybe nothing can square it," said Kitty thoughtfully. "But maybe, if I go at them this way, maybe if they're just jarred a little and I say as soon as I see 'em, 'You're a fine bunch of boobs. Here I've got you a good surgeon, who'll work with us, and all you can think of is to croak him. He won't breathe a word. He's with us.' Then if you don't squeal, maybe I'll get away with it. Do you see, doctor?"

"I see," said Bertram, "I see, of course—they'll punish you, if I tell anything. That is, if you can't escape them."

"Me, escape!" said Kitty. "Me?"

Bertram demanded: "What are you to them? To Grame?" he particularized. "To Eddie Pellen?"

"Why do you want to you?"

"I want to know," said Bertram, "a lot more about you."

"You do?"

"I want to know that more than anything else."

"Then keep to yourself what you know and maybe you'll know more about me. If you talk, all you'll know is that somebody'll find me with a bullet or a knife in me—or maybe choked."

She moved her car slowly. "Wait!" begged Bertram, but she shot her car swiftly from him. "Good-by!" she called, and, without again looking back, she left him there.

Bertram Darand, M. D., took a street car into the city. He could have hired a motor, since he had two hundred dollars in cash in his pocket, but just now he had a longing for the company of ordinary people.

Every newspaper in that car like every paper in the city, was displaying the black type, declaring last night's crime of Eddie Pellen, Eddie the Immune, and demanding the immediate finding of Eddie.

During that day there was more than the usual outcry for the punishment of a gunman.

But before he could be punished he must be found, and no one who knew told where he might be found. R. Darand, M. D., did not tell.

He could not know that his silence made safe Kitty Hewitt. For Grame and Sope and the rest might punish her anyway, and the idea of it excited Bertram every time he thought of it and thought how she, so slight and fair and quick, raced for his life without regard to her own risk. But at least he could refrain from surely condemning her, and so, keeping to himself what he knew, he waited.

Important Announcement

It has always been the object of this store to so conduct its business that it will be of greatest possible service to the people of this community—our customers. In selecting merchandise it is our policy to adhere rigidly to this one standard; that we must sell only those products which will render the greatest measure of service and give the greatest degree of satisfaction to those who honor us with their patronage.

It is in keeping with this policy that we have secured the agency for a line of paints and varnishes, which, after thorough investigation and tests have convincingly demonstrated their superior work.

Lowe Brothers Paints and Varnishes

Will Be Handled Exclusively by Us.

We feel that our customers will welcome this move on our part. It has required a considerable investment. It is a step forward. It puts us in a position to more completely and more satisfactorily serve the home owners of this community than ever before. It enables us not only to render greater service through finer merchandise, but also to provide our customers with decorative plans, color harmonies and worthwhile suggestions in the use of paint and varnish for every purpose.

Black With White Satin Smart For the Springtime Ensemble

Paris continues to laud "stylish black." Wherefore this combination occupies a foremost position on the spring style program. Satin, too, is receiving enthusiastic indorsement from fashion leaders. Which leads to an interesting problem in arithmetic, namely, satin plus black gives as answer an extremely smart spring ensemble. Continuing the adding process, satin plus black plus white reaches the sum total of modishness.

Could anyone wish for a more fetching costume for springtime than the ensemble of black with white satin shown in this picture? It is not a bit flapperish but supremely genteel, the sort that makes its wearer look "every inch a lady."

It is no ordinary satin, which has been selected for the developing of this truly patrician costume. There is an exquisite new satin out, which is reversed with faille instead of the usual crepe-back. Modistes and couturiers are quite "mad" over this recent fabric find, for it self-trims to the point of distinction. It is this very satin which serves as medium for the ensemble illustrated, which accounts for its convincing elegance.

The coat acquires supercharm in that it has a slender V-shaped inset of the faille at the back extending from the neckline to below the waistline. Corresponding trimmings appear on the collar and on the sleeves at the wristline.

All the newer details of the mode are reflected in the styling of this costume. It answers to the call of smartness in that its coat is exquisitely tailored. The skirt is plaited all around, for fullness is featured in hemlines this season. The modernistic applique of the satin of the skirt appearing on its contrasting blouse is also expressive of the latest.

The beauty of this delectable ensemble is that the coat can be used as a separate wrap. Then, too, a skirt of black satin attached to an underbodice is a treasured possession. It is the nucleus of a costume for almost every daytime occasion, except sports. Topped with a blouse of metal splendor, it is dressy. With a washable crepe de chine blouse it is every ready on demand. When all is "said and done," there is no money more wisely spent than that invested in a quality-kind black satin ensemble.

HOW I MAKE

By Readers of the Hilltop Record

Escaloped Fish

2 cups cold flaked fish,
1 cup of white sauce,
1 cup milk,
Few sprigs parsley,
Bit of bay leaf,
1 slice onion,
Salt and pepper,
½ cup buttered crumbs.

Heat milk with parsley, bay leaf and onion until well seasoned and make into white sauce (recipe in last week's Record). Arrange fish and white sauce in a buttered baking dish in alternate layers, cover with buttered crumbs, and brown in a hot oven.

Pineapple Ring Salad

Place lettuce leaves on salad plates, on this place a slice of pineapple, grate a little mild cheese on the pineapple and serve with a mayonnaise salad dressing.

What the Smart Set is Wearing

Have you wondered about that evening dress, as to the length of the skirt? Do you want it short but are afraid that the long skirt is the correct thing for evening? Then your worries are over for you can have your skirt short if you want to or you can have it long. If you decide on the long skirt then you must have the bodice tight and the skirt bouffant. If you are slender then you can wear this very nicely but if you are so unfortunate as to be over weight then you had better wear the dress of the straight silhouette and short skirt.

There is another version of the long skirt that has found favor especially with the younger set and that is a bouffant skirt long in the back and knee length in front. If the skirt is long both in front and back then it is usually made of transparent material, the slip being much shorter, about the length of the dresses worn in daytime.

Many of the straight line dresses are beaded in all over designs, this is especially true of the black evening dresses. Some frocks are trimmed with only a small bunch of flowers on the shoulder. Simplicity seems to be the keynote for the smart evening frock, the cut of the gown being the outstanding feature.

Black and white are especially good, but pastel shades are becoming more popular as the season advances. At a recent affair many white, and black gowns were worn, also the black and white combination. One of the later, a Paris creation had a bodice of heavy white crepe with a black circular skirt, heavily embroidered with beads and in colored silk.

HERE AND THERE

By C. C. H.

Here and There ....

Many cities are planning their clean-up campaigns for the year. And in fitting with the season Chicago is preparing for a scouring that will give that city a different appearance and a different name. But their dirt happens to be of the scandal type while other cities for the most part are centering their attempts to rid the town of trash and rubbish.

• • • •

What Chicago needs is a Pied Piper with powers over bootleggers, crooks, criminals and gunmen. The only trouble is that there would be such a tremendous increase in vacant houses that the city would probably have to support the property owners.

• • • •

Does the farmer ever stop to think that he might not need relief? Or does he stop to think what the ultimate end of the proposed measure will be?

The latest thing in the air is the proposed plan for 36-hour service across the Atlantic. This will be provided by depots placed at sea. They will be placed every 350 miles. This being so the time is not far distant when the "Thumber" may be able to do his stuff across the plot that Columbus thought was a stiff task for even the Santa Maria and the Pinta.

Vote for the Willis Delegates

The question of vital and far-reaching importance is whether the Willis delegates or the Hoover delegates are in better position to determine Ohio's choice to the best advantage of our party and to Ohio voters.
The Hoover delegation is pledged irrevocably to Hoover.
The Willis delegates will be free to vote for some other candidate whom they feel will better represent the party and the nation.

Honor Glenwood Pastor and Wife

Bon Voyage Dinner Party on Eve of Departure for Eureopean Trip.

Three hundred members of Glenwood Methodist church honored their pastor and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Barber, with a Bon Voyage dinner party Monday evening in the social rooms of the church.

Surprise guests included the pastors and their wives from the Hilltop churches.

During the evening's program, Dr. Barber was presented with a purse of gold from the men of the congregation, and officially invited by the church board upon it's unanimous vote to remain as their pastor for another year upon his return from a three-month's leave in Europe.

Dr. Barber has been at Glenwood church for four years and under his leadership 598 members have been received into the church fellowship, which places Glenwood as the largest methodist church in the Columbus district fo 42 churches.

Arrangements have been made to have various pastors fill the Glenwood pulpit during the absence of Dr. Barber

HIGHLAND LOSES TO BARRETT, 9-3

Highland Junior High school lost the first baseball game of the season when they met Barrett last Thursday. The score was 9 to 3.

Davis of Highland was theoutstanding player of the game. During his pitching battle he fanned 12 men and walked but one. Errors from his teammates permitted the scoring by Barrett. Highland failed to hit in the pinches.

Highland had four hits to 12 of Barrett, and nine errors to five of Barrett.

Highland will play Franklin tomorrow at Franklin No. 5.

Arbor and Bird Day on Friday

Governor Donahey Urges Tree Planting and Bird Culture by Schools.

Friday is Arbor Day.

In a proclamation addressed to all teachers in schools of Ohio, Governor Vic Donahey has set aside April 27 as Arbor and Bird day in the state.

The governor urges the teachers and students to take an interest in reforestation, landscaping and bird culture.

The custom of setting aside a day for bird and arbor day originated in 1882, when a group of school officials at Cincinnati saw the need of bird and forest preservation in the state. The custom was taken over by the state in 1885 and has annually been set aside since that time. This movement which originated in Ohio spread to nearly every state in the Union.

In many localities whole communities turn out for tree planting. Many trees for beautification will be planted on Friday.

Mrs. T. F. Price of Portersville, O., spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. I. E. Price and Mrs. Ritchey, 274 S. Burgess Ave.

NEW BUILDING FOR LIBRARY

Hilltop Branch to be Opened About July 1 at Hague and Broad.

A new building is being erected at Hague avenue and Broad street to house the new Hilltop branch library. It is located just west of West Broad street school. Work started on the structure late last week.

The new building is to be of light buff brick, one story, facing on Hague avenue. It is to be about 60x32 feet. Large glass front windows will provide a well lighted room.

The building is being erected by George Gutches, 66 S. Third St., and being leased to the city for one year. An appropriation for the branches next year will decide if the building is to be leased for the following year. Roy Francis, one of the members of the newly organized Better Home Builders, is contractor for the building. E. L. Skipper, Hilltop plumbing contractor, has the plumbing contract.

The new branch will be approximately the size of one of the wings of the public library. It will probably be ready by July 1.

Books are being ordered and equipment advertised for according to librarian John Pugh. When opened the branch will have about 1700 books.

The only other section to get a new building for the branch is Linden. It is being built at Aberdeen and Cleveland avenues. The Clintonville branch will be at 3317 N. High St. and the southern section branch will be at 1124-26 S. Parson Ave.

Marble Champs Being Chosen

Citizen Selects Winners of Holton Park and Glenwood Park Districts.

Paul Gildersleeve, 12, of 232 S. Harris Ave., student at Highland Ave. school won the marble shooting contest conducted by the Citizen at Holton Park on Tuesday.

He will represent Holton Park district in the finals on May 19. The winner of the finals will get a free trip to Atlantic City and a silver cup. He also gets a gold medal from the Citizen for winning from his district.

The semi-final winners at Holton Park were: Charles Ranney, 683 S. Eureka Ave.; George Frogratt, 306 S. Ogden Ave.; Paul Cathers, 214 Brinker St., and Harold Leslie Terry, 58 N. Park Ave. The referees were Howard Kent, Bill Knox and Walter Clouse.

Those in the race at Glenwood Park on Tuesday for the championship of that district were Earl Frogatt, 116 Midland Ave.; Harold Hunter, 207 Belvidere Ave.; Arthur Sahr, 1447 Merriman Ave.; John Hipple, 48 Whitethorne Ave.; Alfred Hatch, 202 N. Oakley Ave.; Donald Vance, 1930 Floral Ave., and Oscar Leach, 923 W. Broad St.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Oliver, 85 N Chase Ave., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ruth Oliver, to Mr. Clarence Benner, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Benner, 32 Binns Blvd. The marriage took place April 24 at Newport, Ky.

Hilltop Record Has 11th Birthday; Never Missed an Issue or Been Late

Tomorrow marks the 11th anniversary of the Hilltop Record. Eleven years ago tomorrow the first issue of the Record made its appearance on the Hilltop and has continued to come out each week.

During this period the paper has been issued every week and has come out on time.

The paper was founded on April 27, 1917, by S. J. Westlake, local printer. The first issues were printed down town but later was printed on the Hilltop in the present location of the Record at 2356 W. Broad St.

When the first issue made its appearance it was a four page, four column sheet, about one-fourth the size of this page of the Record.

No glaring headlines were seen on the first issues. Small type heads were used to mark the stories. Church news and church notices with an advertisement of L. M. Seiller made up the first page.

"We have no great predictions to make concerning the future of the Record, but we do promise to do our best to make it an interesting newspaper devoted exclusively to the Hilltop and vicinity," reads an editorial of the first issue.

When the Record was first issued the subscription price was 25 cents for six months.

Back in 1917.

We see by the first issue of the Record that the Hilltop was not experiencing a boom but a good steady substantial growth.

W. L. Millikin was among the advertisers with his store located at his present place of business.

Fred Sulzberger was with Cussins & Hartsough Co. Department store.

T. C. Mitchell had assumed control of his barber shop at 2385 W. Broad St.

The Hilltop Improvement Association had appointed a committee to assist in any way those who wish to plant gardens but lack the necessary seed or ground.

Glenwood M. E. church won the championship of the West Side in basketball.

A. Sillman advertised his cleaning and pressing shop and the Economy Variety store was remaining open until seven o'clock of evenings.

The West Side Lumber Co. was urging Hilltop people to not waste the corners in their homes.

Patrick Lane was helping to improve the west side of Hague avenue by the erection of a modern eight-room brick dwelling.

The Hilltop Undertaking Co. was being directed by W. L. Millikin, Winfield Scott, M. S. Millikin, Fred W. Postle, B. L. Ingle, C. E. Millikin and L. H. Seiller.

And through these eleven years the Hilltop Record has continued to be "published once a week in the interest of the people on the Hilltop."

Josephine Writes of Week's Struggle As Joe Calculates

Dear Folks Back Home—

While you are probably netting out the few remaining onion plants on the old back yard so as to save enough in the vegetable line for the summer to be able to give your two protegee at Ohio State university another splatter ling of the educational fluid, the two specimens just referred to are relaxing after a hard week

I say last week was a hard week because there was so much in it. Three dances were in force for luck or us, the beauty contest was staged on the campus, the mock convention was held, sororities initiated and several banquets were partaken of. So you can readily see that we have been so busy there has been no time for study. I just can't see the reason for professors assigning work when they know our time is so full of activities in the spring.

Probably the most excitement of the week was the mock nominating convention. 'And say folks you can't get ahead of the women of this generation They had their part in the Great American Party program. We nominated Judge Florence Allen. And you should have heard the speeches. "Did you ever see an angel with a beard?" hurled one of our loyal supporters. But some of the Hughes backers took offence at this hairy remark and reminded the delegates that Christ himself was rarely every painted as being without one.

The beauty queen was selected but as yet she hasn't been announced. That part of the affair will come as an added attraction for the Senior Prom to be held this Friday night. Probably the stage and screen editor of the Lantern is getting his rake off in the form of all the comps he wants. Or it may be that he his holding out in an attempt to date up with the girl for the prom.

Speaking of the Lantern, it was judged the best college daily in the United States at a convention of journalists held in Texas last week. O, you have to hand it to the old school after all, folks. It gets pretty hot sometimes.

You should see some of the pledges we are putting through the torture of initiation in the sororities this week. It seems pretty good after all to be an active and do the things to others that was done to me when I was given the pin not so long ago. Just now we have all the girls lined up for a parade on the outdoors. They are garbed out in high top shoes, coats on backwards and paint galore. They sure give the appearance of second Sadie Thompsons.

Joe sends his best as per usual. He is busy figuring at present as to how he can make the only five spot he has buy a new sweater for his knickers, go to the dance tonight, take the girl friends to the matinee on Saturday and still have enough to buy his collegiate incidentals through the week. He suggests that if you know how to solve his problem he would appreciate it.

Josephine.

HOW I MAKE

By Readers of the Hilltop Record

Editors Note—We are convinced that our readers will be interested in obtaining the favorite recipes of their friends and neighbors and will also be willing to share their favorite recipes. Send all recipes to the Woman's Page, Hilltop Record. All contributions must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender. Recipes will be published without the name of the contributor if so requested.

Orange Whip

1 teaspoons gelatin,
1 pint orange juice,
Sugar,
½ cup cold water,
Juice of one lemon.

Soak gelatin in cold water and dissolve in hot water. Strain into this the fruit juice and sugar to taste. Set aside until partly jellied and then whip with Dover egg-beater until it becomes white and frothy.

Baked Tuna Fish

1 cup bread crumbs (buttered),
Small can tuna fish,
White sauce

Mix bread crumbs and tuna fish, put in casserole and cover with white sauce. Sprinkle some of the bread on top and bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Molasses Nut Candy

2 cups sugar,
2 tablespoons corn syrup,
⅔ cup water,
1 cup nuts.

Boil until it reaches the hard ball stage. Remove from fire and pour over nuts chopped fine which are spread on the bottom of a greased pan. Place in a cool place and after it hardens cut into squares.

One-fourth off on all early spring millinery. Some very special values.

USING UP THE RADIATOR SPACE

There are often rooms in houses which derive their heat from other rooms so that if both radiators are turned on the heat is too great. In such rooms the radiator space is effectively used by a simple bookcase made out of shelves constructed above and at the sides of the radiator.

There are comparatively few days where all radiators in a house or apartment need to be turned on to maintain the proper temperature, and the one least needed may be easily treated to this way. Even if the heat is occasionally used there will not be any damage done to the books or the ornaments above, unless of course there are wax or tallow candles. The single shelf above the radiator acts so as to direct or radiate the heat out into the room instead of directly up.

Any smoke which might come from the top of the radiator is caught by the under side of the shelf and is kept from soiling the walls or the books above it. In the room without a mantel such a bookcase can be made the "center" of the room, and attractively decorated with mirror above, and candelabra at the sides to balance.

What the Smart Set Is Wearing

Do not worry about the color of your new spring coat if you haven't bought it yet. It will have to be either tan or black for the shops are not showing anything else. Of course if you insist they probably will show you one or two blues or a gray.

Kashas, broadcloths and satins are the materials favored. Black looks particularly stunning in either broadcloth or satin. The kashas look best in the natural kasha cloth.

You may not like fur for summertime wear but practically all of the smart coats are liberally trimmed with fur, some have fur cuffs and no fur on the collar or a fur collar and no fur on the cuffs. Very few coats have both fur collars and cuffs. The fur cuffs are of course the newest. The throw collars are usually shown with the fur cuffs.

Many of the sports coats are strictly tailored and of course do not have fur collars or cuffs. But even the sports coat have fur collars or cuffs.

So if you want to get your new hat before you get the new coat get something that will look good with either tan or black and you can't be wrong for nine chances out of ten your coat will be of one or the other color.

Ionaco is the name of a newly invented magnetic therapeutic device, designed to assist natural forces in the restoration of health. So certain are we of what Ionaco does that we invite Hilltop residents to try Ionaco three times without charge or obligation of any kind at our offices. Or if you cannot come to the office telephone and a representative will be sent to your home to give you a demonstration without charge or obligation.

If You Are Sick? Try Ionaco Free

Ionaco is producing results in Columbus and there are many Hilltop owners who are boosters. They were as skeptical about Ionaco as you are. You do not need to believe in Ionaco to get results. A LADY COMPANION WANTED

Beth sighed as she opened the newspaper and cast her eye over the "Help Wanted" column. She had been in Honolulu two weeks and as yet not a sign of work. It was beginning to worry her, especially since there remained in her small account not sufficient money for passage back to San Francisco.

Certainly nothing for her unless she wanted to take a job as somebody's cook. Beth wasn't so sure that she knew enough about cooking anyway. From the "Help Wanted" her eyes strayed to the personal column. Now as a rule this column in Honolulu newspapers does not amount to much. But on this day was:

"Woman desires lady companion for trip to the coast. Fare and return for company. Apply in person at 2245 Makiki Heights."

One minute later Beth was getting ready for that interview. She was certain it was exactly the thing for her. But wasn't she in luck, though, to have seen that advertisement! She dressed herself in a little green and white sports suit that she had been inveigled into buying by an ingenious saleswoman. But she gave thanks to the woman at the moment. Green was certainly her color and quite lucky, too—some one had said. Bits of bronze hair peeped from beneath a small green hat that hid almost all of the brown eye. Still Beth had another eye that was quite uncovered, and two cheeks of rose, and a nose and lips so fashioned that one would know at once that she was extremely pretty.

She took a taxi and was set down before the entrance of an imposing home. A soft-footed Japanese woman admitted her. As she entered something told her that she was not the only girl in Honolulu who had read that notice.

There was a row of chairs about the room—every one tenanted by a woman desirous of exchanging company for passage.

Beth hesitated and then stopped where she was. There was no place to sit, certainly. No one offered her a chair. One woman of doubtful age, after an interval during which she had looked Beth over from her little green hat to her white toes, sniffed audibly.

Her attitude said plainly that it was a sin to have so much beauty wrapped up in one person, and she did hope this woman would want real companionship and not a picture to travel with her.

A step was heard. There was a general shifting of chairs and rearrangement of feet. An expectant hush greeted the appearance in the doorway of—a man. He looked about uncertainly for a moment, then his eyes fell upon Beth. It might have been that she was standing in his line of vision or that she seemed so cool in green, but he smiled and beckoned her to follow.

"This is for my aunt," he explained after he had offered her a chair. Then Beth saw that he was young, much younger than he had at first appeared.

"She has left it all to me," he smiled as his eye ran over her neat figure. "Let me see—she wants mostly some one that pleases the eye and speaks tolerable English. . . ." He walked to the window and threw open the shutters. Beth gasped as she took in the panorama of the city from the Diamond Head fortress to the Pearl Harbor locks. He watched her face keenly as she stood there drinking in the beauty of the tropic scene.

"Would you stay to luncheon and meet my aunt?"

They wanted her to remain the day with them so that her personality could really be probed. Mr. Cramer assured her. It frightened Beth at first, but the little gray-haired lady was so delightful that she forgot entirely she was on probation.

Beth and Mr. Cramer swam in the surf at the beach while aunty looked on wistfully from the pier, her white hands folded idly in her lap.

Mr. Cramer watched Beth as he floated lazily on the water—watched her struggles with the difficult crawl stroke. Then with a strong rippling movement he was beside her. "This is the way you must learn first," he demonstrated.

"Now let me support you for a moment while you get it," he offered. Little rivers of emotion quivered through Beth as she became conscious of muscles like twisted steel.

"Tomorrow is Sunday," he announced irrelevantly as he helped her. "You must dance with us tonight and stay tomorrow—you will be able to. I hope—" His blue eyes were bent on her eagerly.

"But your aunt —" she began.

"I am arranging this. You will, won't you?" he begged.

"Well," she hesitated. "I must there's something I must do then."

They waited for her downstairs while she bought an evening gown. She must have it, even though it took most of her remaining cash. A wave of fear passed over her when she considered the possibility that she might not suit after all. . . . Surely after all this there would be no possibility of that. . . . But she couldn't think such gloomy thoughts long when before her in the mirror was that vision in metallic and gold cloth . . . besides the saleswoman was playing the part of the siren. . . .

"It was made for you, my dear," she wheedled. "It turns that bronze hair positively red!"

It was a perfect dream of a night. Such a night as would happen to a girl once in a thousand years. Beth was thinking this as she stood on the balcony with Mr. Cramer by her side. The sobbing of the native music in the ballroom and the movement of many feet came to her ears like an echo from the past. Already she was thinking of Mr. Cramer as Jimmy. (His aunt called him James.) Jimmy had been unutterably lovely to her . . . His little thoughtful attentions . . . his perfect manners. . . . She thought with a little twist of her heart that she would have to say good-by to him when she sailed. Of course they would accept her—after this. The ugly little doubt crept in to spoil the moonswept night.

It would be nothing less than black tragedy to her—if they didn't! With that expensive gown she had bought . . . She began to feel a little sorry that she had bought it. She might have made her old one do.

But there was the wail of the guitar and the throb of musical voices back there, and here the splendor of the moon-washed island before her. She couldn't be sorry for long.

"You are a sweet child," Jimmy was behind her there and his arms creeping slowly about her. "I envy aunty her trip—in fact, I think I may go along. . . ." She felt more than saw two blue eyes, rather darker now, peeping into her face. There was a faintly sweet breath on her cheek, then it was pressed suddenly into a button of a man's coat.

She wasn't thinking of the pain the button made. She was exulting that the doubt of a moment before had vanished. They would take her now. Hadn't he said so? Something, though, caused her to ache dully in some spot or other. It was like no pain she had ever experienced.

They danced awhile then. No need to talk. Perhaps it was the cadences of the music.

She was just slipping through the living room to the balcony—all alone this time—when she heard voices. She knew them both. One was his and the other was the soft, cultured voice of his aunt.

"I don't see how I can find another at this late date," she was saying. "James, you should have told me before!"

"Well, aunty, dear, I didn't know it before, either—" he laughed slightly. "But you wouldn't think of sending her with you—"

"No, but—tomorrow will do—" There was his laughter again.

The blood in Beth's body seemed frozen. The scoundrel! She could have scratched him. To keep her hopes high when he knew all the time she wouldn't be hired. Tears burned her eyes. She tried to keep them from falling on the new gown. Yes, and there was the gown—her money—

She turned and ran out then. They wouldn't need to tell her. She ran down the front steps and crossed the lawn, keeping within the shadows. Down the hill, her delicate tissue slippers crunching the gravel and the dust mounting over her bronze head. What would she do? The words sang themselves over and over in her brain.

Suddenly the lights of a car flashed upon her and it came to a stop with a screech of brakes.

"Beth!" babbled the excited voice of Jimmy as he swept her, tears and all, into his arms and carried her to the car. "Why—what does—why did you do this?" he asked as he took out a handkerchief and wiped the tears away.

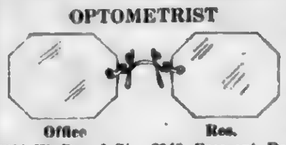
"I heard what you told your aunt . . ." she sobbed. And I didn't want to wait—let me go—" she begged. "You don't need to try to make it easy—"

He drew her, resisting frantically, to his breast and held her there.

"It's true," he said after she was quiet. "I don't want you to go away with aunty—that is—unless I will be able to go along and I don't know just yet whether I shall be or not—

"I thought—" he hesitated, "I thought if I could get away we might both go and call it a—honeymoon!—would you, Beth?"

He didn't have to hold her then. In fact his arms had relaxed and still she lay there, hiding a happy smile in the sleeve of his coat.



"What does aunty say?" she asked finally.

"She is very much in favor of the honeymoon idea," he smiled. "You see she doesn't want anyone now but you either, and—" he turned her face to his, "I know I won't have anyone else."

Geronimo's Brain Not Equal to Webster's

The statement is often made that the brains of Geronimo and Webster were the same in weight. It is doubtful whether it is true. Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology at the National museum, said on this subject: "I am unable to find any record as to the brain of Geronimo. But I knew him in life and he did not impress the observer by any unusual size of the head. As to the brain of Daniel Webster, the brain weight was 1,519 grains, but judging from the large cranial capacity as well as the large external measurement, Doctor Jeffries, who made the autopsy, was of the opinion that the brain in its normal (presenile) condition weighed probably as much as 1,880 grains." Dr. Walter Hough, head curator of anthropology at the museum, also stated that he knew Geronimo and was impressed with the fact that he had a rather small head.—Pathfinder Magazine.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

AS THE SHOE WEARS

That there is prophecy in the way one's shoes wear out is an ancient idea which still holds its own in the realm of superstition. There are several variations of the well-known rhyme on which the oracle is couched, but the variation is so slight that meaning is practically the same in all.

A good specimen is as follows:

Wear at the side, a rich man's bride;
Wear at the toe, spend as you go;
Wear at the heel, spend as you feel;
Wear at the ball, live to spend all.

The only serious difference in the rhyme is with regard to wearing at the heel which is sometimes said to mean that you will "Love to do well," and another that you will "Save a good deal."

This superstition is only one exemplification of the mystic qualities which since man first began to clothe his feet has been considered as pertaining to the pedal covering. While conceived, in common with other articles of man's clothing, to be imbued with the man's physical and spiritual "ego," the shoe appears in the primitive mind to have been conceived as also possessing certain magical qualities of its own. As witness the divining by shoes, the significance of having one foot shod and the other not, the putting of magical herbs into shoes and the throwing of the shoes as an emblem of subjection and of luck, etc.; as well as the ancient shoe "taboos" such as the prohibition of entering the Sanctuary of the Mistress at Lycosura in the Arcadia shod or the Shrine of Alectrona, daughter of the Sun, at Rhode. And in some cults the shoes of the priestesses were not to be made of the skin of any animal which had died a natural death.

The idea behind these taboos—for there was an idea—Sir James Frazer frankly says, has been lost in the mists of antiquity. Of the superstition under consideration it may be said that the idea that the manner in which a man's shoes wear is indicative of his future comes from that sympathetic magic through which a man's clothing partook of his individuality so that what happened to it happened to him—one phase of shoe-magic as has been stated. Just why the significance of the omen should be financial in its aspect is so far undiscovered by investigators.

WEST BROAD STREET TRAFFIC

Traffic congestion on West Broad street between Whittethorne and Hague avenue during the rush hours of the evening and on Saturday night is becoming so acute that some relief will have to be provided for the safety of pedestrians.

Last week a man was struck by a machine and painfully injured at West Broad street and South Parkavenue and many others have recently narrowly escaped injury.

Traffic lights at the intersection of several streets in this district would greatly add to the safety of the public and in fact have become necessities. Council should be called upon to provide this relief.

The Southwest Advancement league voiced its displeasure with the manner in which Columbus public schools were operated when the secretary of the league last week filed a complaint with the board of education claiming there was too much "foolishness" in our schools.

The "foolishness" was described as school plays, clubs and other organizations within the schools.

Undoubtedly quite a little comment could be made on both sides of the question, and perhaps in some instances there is just a little too much "foolishness" for the good of the scholars and the schools.

However the complaints invariably come from the older generations who attended school under entirely different conditions. The schools of 25 years ago fitted the older generation for the affairs of today and the schools of today are fitting the future generation for the affairs of the future. We can not use the same methods in operating business that we did 25 years ago, and neither can we use the methods of 25 years ago in operating our schools.

Specific instances of "foolishness" may be pointed out, but the board of education undoubtedly is exerting every effort to give Columbus the best schools possible within their means.

THE ADVERTISING OUTLOOK

Bruce Barton, who should know what he is talking about when he discusses advertising, says there will be more advertising than ever in 1928. Referring especially to magazine and newspaper advertising, he ventures an estimate of not far short of eleven hundred million dollars' worth as the sum of next year's advertising appropriations.

Mr. Barton's optimistic view is evidently shared by large advertisers. In response to inquiries sent out by the Advertisers' Weekly, a majority say that they expect to increase their appropriations in the new year. They express confidence in the outlook, and their experience as advertisers justifies them in extending their operations in that field.

Mr. Barton thinks that advertising will prolong the good times. So apparently do the advertisers. They have tested their ideas in the most practical of all fields and have the soldiest reasons for their confidence. They are backing their judgment after proof of its soundness—Columbus Commerce.

THE GREAT AMERICAN PARTY

The political season is here in full force and the air is full of Smith, Dawes, Hoover, Lowden, etc.

• • • •

And it all brings to mind that if you are goin to vote in the fall elections or if you did vote in the primaries on Tuesday you must have belonged to some political party. And since you do adhere to some party we ask the why of it all. The only good excuse for your selection is probably that your father was of that party and you are falling in line.

• • • •

And so it goes in politics today. A heep starts out and all the others follow. If your party has a man in the field you generally vote for him regardless of what he is. You adhere to his party name rather than investigate the principals of the party or the man himself.

• • • •

Last week students at Ohio State university held a mock convention on the campus. Various states were represented and many nominations were made from the floor for the candidates for president. The party itself was known as the Great American Party. No party lines were conformed to and the object was to nominate the choice of the assembly rather than to consider the party the person belonged to.

• • • •

What America needs today is a Great American Party. The political leaders may belong to certain groups as they please but every voter should be a member of the Great American party.

• • • •

It is known well enough that each political faction has certain qualities that may well be applauded. But neither party has been found to favor the good things of all the parties.

• • • •

In forming the platform of the Great American Party to be put into actual use in the coming election it is our belief that the mock convention held on the local university campus brought out a great number of the principles that would really go to make an ideal platform.

• • • •

"Parties have their place in a democratic system, but when they become ends in themselves they are distinct menaces." This from the mock convention. And further . . . "The question of religious affiliation should not be considered as a qualification for political office . . . We warn the American public that the success of a democracy depends upon its leadership. The disgusting political exposures of the last few years are the resultants of the attitude which American people have taken toward political officers . . . We demand the strict enforcement of all laws passed to carry into effect the principles of the Eighteenth Amendment . . . We advocate strict government regulation of all natural resources . . . Realizing the fact that international trade cannot flourish under the present tariff we advocate a policy of steady reductions all along the line on all tariffs, except those for revenue only . . . We favor immediate participation of the United States in the Permanent Court of International Justice and active membership in the League of Nations . . . We favor immediate settlement of international debts . . . We demand the immediate withdrawal of the armed forces from Nicaragua."

Here we have the high points of the Great American Party as set forth in the mock convention held on the campus last week. And here we have sound principles of government that would be for the good of the United States if enacted.

Gingham Finds New Expression In Coolie Coat and Pajama Sets

With the return of the first robin we greet our tried and true friend, gingham. Though gingham is perennial, especially for children's wear and house dresses, as summer approaches we find it returning to vogue for beach wear and summer daytime frocks. This year it is going to be especially strong for coolie and beach coats, as well as for bathing suits. The gingham beach coat has already made its debut at Palm Beach, and must follow as summer follows spring, so we will see it at our northern beaches. A very pretty design in these coats is called "Lightning." A glance at the figure to the left in the picture shows the appropriateness of the name.

We have heard much of the beach pajama. The pajama is worn abroad on the beaches, but here in America the custom is not as yet so established. Women here have taken enthusiastically to the pajama in the three-piece model for wear during housework hours. It is becoming quite the usual thing for the housewife to wear her gingham pajamas with sleeveless shirt and trousers posed under a coolie coat, while washing her dishes or attending to manifold duties in the home. The model in the picture is very attractive and no doubt will prove an inspiration to the home dressmaker to immediately invest in several yards of gingham, for with a good pattern to follow, styles like those shown in the picture are very easy to make.

More elegant pajama costumes of hand-embroidered and hand-painted satin are becomingly worn by women entertaining informally at luncheon following the bathing party and on yachts during the winter at our Southern resorts. The fad for wearing the less elaborate pajama for housework may be an adaption of this vogue.

One of the innovations which will manifest itself when summer comes, is that of gingham parasols.

Quick-Drying Enamel

A NEW ENAMEL
WITH SURPRISING QUALITIES

See It Demonstrated!

Lowe Brothers Quick-Drying Enamel has the desirable qualities of lacquer. It has no unpleasant odor and is no more dangerous as a fire hazard than other oil or varnish paints and enamels.

No special undercoating is necessary with Quick-Drying Enamel nor is a special thinner required. When necessary to thin, turpentine should be used. It can be applied without danger of raising the old finish, and in redecorating, one coat will ordinarily be sufficient for it hides exceptionally well.

Quick-Drying Enamel dries dust-free in one hour, can be recoated in from four to five hours, and dries hard over night—ready for service. It sets slowly allowing ample time for brushing back through the wet enamel to smooth out any imperfect places.

Quick-Drying Enamel works as easily as an oil paint that takes very much longer to dry. It goes on smoothly, dries without brush marks to a beautiful semi-gloss finish and produces a perfectly hard, flint-like surface.

Good-bye dingy looking roofs - that discount home values!

See This Beautiful Roof Today!

YOU would scarcely believe that the home it now protects, was built twenty years ago. Yet, just a few days ago the original roof was rated unsightly and a poor asset to its community. Actually it discounted the homes around it.

With this new Mule-Hide Roof, applied over the original worn shingles—fresh life is now put into the old home. The insurance rate too, is less as leading companies recognize the fire resistant quality of Mule-Hide.

Today this old home—reroofed with Mule-Hide—would easily bring $500.00 more than if the old roof remained. You too, can increase the comfort and value of your home by reroofing.

Before you build or reroof see us. We will quote you a complete price applied by reliable local contractors. Or sell just the material if you prefer to do the job yourself.

To make your roofing dollar last—see us first.

THE EDITORIAL WORM TURNS

An Iowa editor, weary of giving [illegible] the puffs of undeserved publicity, adorn the with flattering references, to [illegible] individuals and organizations in the town, publisaect the following editorial

"Here you will find a schedulgown in prices from which no deviation we might made but we hope to donate a sel. Folpercentage of our earnings toward the founding of an asylum for those feeble minded people who are running this paper as a philanthropic enterprise.

"For referring to some drug store clerk as a talented young man with a promising future, when everybody knows he will never earn a dollar in life and will end up in the penitentiary, $10.18

"Reference to one as a hero and a man of courage who will stand by his conviction when it is common knowledge he is a moral coward and would sell out for a dime, $4.13.

"Referring to some gossipy female as a charming young lady whom it is a pleasure to meet and know, when any man in town would rather see Satan coming, $8.18

"Calling an ordinary preacher an eminent divine, 5¢.

"Referring to the local merchant who never advertises and who is too stingy to contribute a cent toward needed public improvements, as a progressive business man and leading citizen, $144.40."

Associate Dealers Of Oakland-Pontiac

CHARLES W. ALTHEN

EDGAR G. PLANCK

Contracts have been signed by Orr S. Zimmerman, Inc., with the West Side Motor Sales Co., 1354-56 Sullivant Ave., in which the latter become Oakland-Pontiac associate dealers, serving particularly the territory west of High street.

Edgar G. Planck, who has operated the West Side Motor Sales Co. for the past three years as Star and Durant dealer, has associated with him in the new set-up, Charles W. Althen, who has been a member of the firm of the West Side Motor Sales Co. for more than a year. Planck has more than 14 years of automobile experience to his credit.

An up-to-date service station will be maintained for Oakland and Pontiac owners as well as continuing to service the Stars and Durants. The firm has built onto their present modern garage an addition which gives them 2500 square feet more of floor space. With this space and expert mechanics they are able to continue to give the best of service to the Hilltop trade.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"OUT OF DEBT, OUT OF DANGER"

Here is a rather platitudinous little saying which would seem, to the user of trite phrases to have been coined perhaps by some one in a witty mood and to have lived because of its aptness and the "catchiness" of its alliteration.

The fact is, however, that "out of debt, out of danger," is found to be several hundred years old, having had an auspicious beginning in English literature:

"But they much more marvell and detest the madness of them whyche so ch-- riche men in whose debt and daunger they be not, do give almost divine honoures, for none other consideration but because they be riche."

And Shakespeare, in the "Merchant of Venice," makes use of the expression in only slightly different form from our modern phrase when he speaks of a debtor being "within the danger of his creditor."

The Sandman Story

ABOUT FISH

"No creature could have a name which could sound any worse than mine does," said the weakfish. "Of course, people like me. Yes, I'm a popular fish. They welcome me when I first appear in the spring, and they like me right through the summer.

"They are also glad when I stay late in the autumn. Now, you know I'm nice to look at, for I'm a fish that cares about its personal appearance.

"By that I mean that I do not look any old way at all. You know some creature will look so uncared for somehow. They will look dirty and untidy and far from attractive.

"They will walk in an ungraceful fashion and not pay any attention to charm, nor to - - - -

Donald Backman.

Dramatization, "A Tree's Di[illegible] by the following pupils from[illegible] Rosie Jones' room: Marian [illegible]hardt, Virginia Hutt, Mary Pierce, Richard Smith.

Poem, "Salute to the Tree" pupils from Miss Watt's class.

Song, "Arbor Day," pupils from Alspach's class.

Poem, "[illegible]

"We Love the Warm Water, Summer Is the Time for Us."

is more than can be said for many, when they walk.

"If I did walk I would be graceful about it. I'm graceful when I move. Maybe I have said that before. I don't know.

"Even if it is said that it makes brains to eat fish, I do not understand it. I don't think we're so very brainy. But anyway I was talking about our personal appearance!

"We wear handsome silvery creatures. Oh, very pretty, indeed. We're soft and pleasant and do not weigh too much, and yet we are not so small that we don't amount to something.

"In fact, were just right, weighing from one to four or five pounds, each." A pleasant weight the weakfish thinks.

"We love the warm water. Summer is the time for us. Of course, some of us do stay around in the autumn, but the fish that likes the autumn is the frostfish.

"Now frostfish is an ugly creature with an enormous mouth and pointed big teeth—ugly teeth and an ugly mouth and has three fins which show prominently on his back. They're the fins known in fish talk as the dorsal fins.

"Every one has noticed them on the members of the goldfish family—not the same kinds of fins as the frostfish has, but dorsal fins, I mean.

"The frostfish is caught in great numbers in nets while close to where the surf is breaking along by the ocean. That is where they are looking for the sand eels which they are so fond of, as I've said.

"But when I say that the frostfish are so fond of the sand eels, and when I say people are fond of the frostfish, and when I say we are very popular, you must understand me.

"The frostfish like the sand eels to eat. People like the frostfish as food!

"And we're popular because we're good to eat! Perhaps you wouldn't call that being popular. I don't suppose so. But it means we're liked in that way.

There are 527,040 minutes in the year 1928. How many of them are gone? And how many have you to look forward to? Already another one has passed into the days of uselessness. What are you going to do with the next one?

"Trade Your Smiles."

A disease which came into prominence in 1918, known as "sleepy sickness," is said to result from the eating of tinned foods. The microbe which causes sleepy sickness is unknown, and the disease must not be confused with African "sleeping sickness," for which the biting tsetse fly is responsible. Victims of sleepy sickness often fall into a deep sleep under extraordinary conditions—at a meal or during a conversation—from which they can be roused at intervals to be fed, but immediately succumb again to slumber. In other cases the disease seems entirely misnamed, for instead of being intensely lethargic, the patients are roused to excessive muscular and frequently mental activity. Bacteriologists all over the world are seeking the cause of this disease.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

A HEART-BREAKING JOB

It is perhaps natural for mothers to be climbers.

They want their children to know better people."

They want their daughters to marry well, so as to be relieved of the anxieties that perplexed their mothers.

So they constantly plot and plan to "break in" to a station in society a little further up—and if they gain that, to go on up further.

It means the acceptance of snub after snub, and the necessity of accepting them all as if they were kind words.

It means in most cases the expenditure of money—which would be far better put into the savings bank or into some good investment, where it could be got out again when needed.

The climber spends her money—or more likely her husband's—doing things for people who do not want anything done for them, giving parties which few of the people invited to ever attend, and in seeking to "buy into" a place higher up.

That ambitious people should want to meet and mingle with people of more education and culture is easy to understand.

That means progress. One of the benefits of education is that it fits the person who gains it to make a wider and more useful acquaintanceship.

But that sort of advancement is not "climbing."

The climber cares nothing for the attainments or the cleverness of the person with whom she wants to mingle, or with whose children she wants her children to associate.

All she cares about is some fictitious—"place" which they occupy, and which she wants to occupy with them.

Naturally most of the people who are forever trying to struggle into another "set" fail of the attempt, and by and by become resigned to filling the place in life for which they are equipped, financially.

But many of them, particularly mothers, persist and break their hearts when they find that all their planning and scheming has gone for nothing.

It is far better to choose your acquaintances and those of your children from those similarly situated, than to endeavor to break through an upper crust—even if you might in the end arrive in a strange and not too friendly region.

For the people who have the "position" have, as a rule, gained it by long effort. They are afraid to lose it by associating with "climbers" and they are certain to be fiendishly rude for a long time to the new arrivals lest they should expose their own "newness," by being pleasant.

NEED QUALITY AND SERVICE SAYS REEDER

Decentralization Movement in Retail Store According to O. S. U. Professor.

There is a decentralization movement on in the retail store business, C. W. Reeder, assistant professor in marketing at Ohio State university, told members of the Hilltop Business Men's association Tuesday night.

People are no longer going to the centralized section of the city for their goods, he said. There are bigger opportunities afforded to the community business man since this is true.

People are tending to buy their goods and service in the immediate community more and more, he pointed out. He showed where nearly every service and goods needed could be bought at home.

Mr. Reeder pointed to the growth of the chain stores in the past few years and termed it a distribution revolution. Attempts at regulating such business by law have failed in many cases, he said, and stated that the only method of meeting the situation was to offer better quality and service. "Personalized service is necessary," he said.

Sub-committee chairmen for the Hilltop picnic were appointed at the meeting.

Councilman Floyd Greene stated that the contract for sidewalks on West Broad street west of Hague Avenue had been let and that a shelter house would be erected in Westgate park this summer.

In regard to the sewer situation on the Hilltop Mr. Greene pointed out that complete relief could not be secured until a new trunk line sewer is installed in this section.

J. L. Millikin Dies at Home

Was Resident of Hilltop for Past 33 Years; Three Sons Survive.

John L. Millikin, 85, veteran Hilltopper, died at his home, 2526 W. Broad St., on Thursday, April 26. He was buried on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Millikin was a resident of the Hilltop since Nov. 25, 1895.

He was born in Washington county, Pa., Aug. 18, 1842, and came to Madison county, Ohio, in 1856. He owned and operated his farm in Canaan Township Madison county, until he came to Columbus. He retired soon after moving to the Hilltop.

Mr. Millikin was a believer in the Hilltop and encouraged his boys to get in business and stay in business on the Hilltop. He was optomistic about conditions here and built many houses and buildings in this section of the city.

He was a member of Hoge Memorial church.

Surviving him are three sons, Charles Rolland, Wyatt Lester, and Marvin Stanley, all of whom are in business on the Hilltop.

His wife, Elizabeth M. Millikin, died June 28, 1920, and his daughter, Maud Lena died in 1911.

Funeral services were held at Hoge Memorial church on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial was made in Green Lawn cemetery by C. J. Kohn.

Start Bank Bldg.

Excavation Work Started on New Bank Building.

Another step toward greater Hilltop was taken on Tuesday morning when the first ground was broken for the new Hilltop branch of the Citizen's bank to be built on the northeast corner of West Broad and Park avenue.

Excavation work was started and will probably continue through the week. Cement work on the foundation will be started immediately. The building will be of brick and stone construction.

It will probably be completed near September 1.

Arbor Day Observed By School Children at West Broad St.

Membership in the American Tree Association was given to 19 students and three classes at West Broad Street school on Friday, April 27, Arbor Day.

Membership was given to all those who planted trees. And it was a busy group that planted trees at West Broad. Two kindergarten classes and a fifth grade class went in a body to plant trees on the school lawns.

Every year the schools respond to the appeal of the governor to plant trees on Arbor and Bird day.

In addition to the trees planted by the classes there were 19 planted by individual students around their homes. Several varieties of trees were put out by the students. They ranged from cherry to maple trees.

The individuals that planted trees on Arbor Day were: Howard Schubert, Geraldine Cook, Virginia Brock, Billy Fergusson, Hampton Cruise, Donald Falkenberg, Betty Silliman, Robert Wilson, Robert Wright.

Raymond Fulton, Frank Kennedy, Albert Nettleship, Orville Jones, Lawrence Sears, Donna Putman, Elvera Horn, Charles Freeborn, Beryl Burdette and Ethel Allton.

Arbor Day exercises were also given in all the rooms of the school

BANDS TO COMPETE HERE MAY 11 AND 12

Nearly 1000 high school students will be present in Columbus on May 11 and 12 to compete in the band contest to determine the two best bands in the state.

The winners of the meeting will be entitled to enter the national contest to be held later at Joliet Ill.

There will be at least 18 bands in the contest here. Six will play in the final competition at Memorial hall, Saturday, May 12.

The bands will be judged by their marching ability as well as their music ability.

Oratory Prize Goes to Hilltop Student

Betty Warner, Central High, Wins in All-City High School Contest.

Miss Betty Warner, 16, of 156 Binns Blvd., won the first prize of $50 in the Columbus High school oratorical contest held at East high school on Friday night.

Miss Warner was the youngest student entered in the contest and the only sophomore. She represented Central high school. Her subject was: "Daniel Webster and the Constitution." The money will be used to buy a bronze plaque to be left at the school.

Ruth Montgomery of North high school won second place. Her topic was "The Constitution and the Citizen Today."

Others in the contest were John Wolfe, West high school, "The United States' Contribution to Constitutional Government;" Robert A. Carr, East high, "John Marshall's Contribution to the Constitution;" Sara Horwitz, South high, "The Meaning of the Constitution Today."

Judges at the oratorical contest were Professor George W. Knight, Ohio State university; Charles A. Leach, city attorney, and E. W. Pahlow, Ohio State university.

Miss Warner won out in the preliminaries at Central high on March 13.

Build Addition

Campbell Pharmacy Room to Be Completed About July 1.

Work started late last week on an addition to Campbell's Pharmacy at 2708 W. Broad St.

The room when completed will extend back forty feet beyond the present length of the room. It is a continuation of the present room.

The prescription department of the store will be placed at the rear of the building and an up-to-date soda parlor with booths and tables will be installed according to C. H. Campbell, proprietor.

The building will be completed about July 1. It is a one-story room.

Mr. Campbell recently celebrated his fourth anniversary in business on the Hilltop.

C. J. Randall Will Seek Nomination

Seeks Nomination As Judge of Court of Domestic Relations.

Cecil J. Randall announces his intention of qualifying as a candidate for judge of the Franklin county Court of Domestic Relations in the August Republican primary.

Mr. Randall is 42 years of age, married, has four children, two boys and two girls, and resides at 1989 West Broad St. He has resided in Columbus 28 years.

He makes the following statement of principles:

1. The court should be so organized and administered that all agencies charged with the welfare of boys and girls may co-operate on a broad plane of helpfulness and service to the childhood of the city and county.

2. A conciliation branch of the court should be established to prevent, if possible the breaking of family ties Divorce and separations are the most fruitful causes of juvenile delinquency Many fathers and mothers are but grown-up children. Sympathetic advice and counsel will often keep husband and wife together.

3. To have a part in the saving of boys and girls is a challenge to a great service and the court should have a vision of this work as a sacred responsibility.

4. In the problems of childhood punishment should be the last resort. It would be my purpose, if nominated and elected, to use every means possible to obviate the necessity of committing boys and girls to correctional institutions.

5. Modern scientific means are available for testing the causes of an social tendencies in children. When from birth conditions have predestined that a boy or girl is mentally incapacitated to serve himself or the community, he should be permanentaly committed to the proper institution

6. There should be close co-operation between the court and the schools

Mr. Randall is a graduate of the Law college and College of Liberal Arts of Ohio State university and has practiced law in Columbus for 16 years. He is a member of Glenwood M. E. church, Columbus Bar association, several lodges and clubs. He was Columbus' first public defender and is now president of the board of education.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Mildred Heskett, 450 S. Eureka Ave., to Cecil L. Neff, 86 N. Burgess Ave., April 4.

AIR MAIL MAY LAND HERE AT NEW AIRPORT

Commerical Airport on Hilltop Soon to Be Realized According to Harris.

Plans for making the Hilltop the center of the commercial air transportation in Columbus were laid before the Hilltop Business Men's Association at their meeting at the Masonic Tuesday evening by R. L. Harris, president of the Commercial Airway Transit Association of Ohio.

This association has already established a flying field on Sullivant avenue a few blocks west of Hague avenue. Nearly $20,000 has been spent there in the past few weeks in preparing the field and providing equipment. A steel hanger is now under construction.

Plans of the new airway association are to make this field the landing place for the air mail that will start in June. It is operated by the Continental Air Mail Line. The route goes through Cleveland and Louisville, Ky., by way of Columbus, Dayton and Cincinnati. Later a passenger service will also be established.

At present the proper lighting facilities for the field appear to be the only thing that may delay the air mail from landing at the Hilltop airport.

Mr. Harris pointed out the future of air transportation in the country and what this airport will mean to the Hilltop and Columbus in general. He pointed out the advantage to the business men of having so many more people drawn to this section by the airport.

He stated that the Hilltop had been selected due to the ideal location. It is close to town and yet far enough away to afford safety. The cleanliness and absence of smoke here also were factors in the decision to locate the airport on the Hilltop.

A committee from the Business Men's Association was appointed to co-operate with Mr. Harris in the establishment of the commercial field. It consists of R. H. Troffinger, H. G. Butler, R. O. Harrison and Floyd [illegible].

Exotic Prints Lend a Most Vivacious Note to the Mode

Prints! Prints! Prints! Everybody is going in for them. It is simply impossible to escape them and be in fashion. Not that anyone is really wanting to sidestep anything so colorful, so flattering, so altogether fascinating as the vivid prints which are lending such vivacity to the mode.

And wherever the exotic print, there also the kerchief scarf. The terms have grown to be almost synonymous. Making its debut as merely an accessory item, the silk square has finally worked itself into the very structure of the frock or the blouse this spring. The picture emphasizes the effectiveness of incorporating the kerchief scarf into the making of the dress. The print in this instance stresses the fact of high color, it being patterned in black, red and yellow. The blouse is white—a very startling contrast to the bizarre print. Which, of course, is just as the mode would have it—chantoyant, debonair beguiling. Notice, too, if you please, that the skirt is plaited all-the-way-round—another of fashions edicts for modern styling.

The plaited skirt herewith and the hemstitched silken square about the shoulders, leads to a word of suggestion to home dressmakers. To take the silk print to the plaiter is a master stroke of genius. This is because machine plaiting has a way of overcoming that bugaboo—"homemade" look. While about it why not order a square of matching silk to be hemstitched?

Any resourceful woman who would achieve a costume of distinction, would do well to buy a separate monotone blouse, either white, black, navy or some pastel shade, if not gray or beige. Supplement this investment with the purchase of a few yards of bright silk print. Having had a sufficient length of the latter plaited, it is a very easy matter to attach it to a straight underbodice, adding shoulder straps. Add the inevitable kerchief square and there you have it—a spring costume de luxe which will not be meeting its duplicate down the avenue. One could go even further in the path of economy and individuality by buying several separate blouses, if one does not care to make them, thus insuring diversified costumes.

There seems to be some question as to whether it pays to have elections. Especially does this apply to primaries. The cost for Franklin county was about $40,000 and but 30,000 votes were cast. This makes each vote cost about $1.30. But take away the right to vote and hear all the voices go up in protest.

Now that the Willis delegates have their places assured in the national convention we look forward to a big party in Kansas City. It will probably be cool there and they can parley as long as they like. But down in Houston, Texas, where it is so hot right now that people are going in their shirt sleeves the Democrats will cast their votes for Al and hurry home to the north.

Henry Ford came to the rescue of the German and Irish fliers after all because they have decided that his Ford plane will get them to New York in better shape than will the Bremen. But much credit is due them for their valiant attempt and success in crossing the big expanse. The Germans and Irish claim they are good men and as we have heard before "you can't keep a good man down."

There seems to be some discussion in sociological circles as to the relative merits of men and women. The argument seems to be based on the number of 'genius' of the two sexes. But when it comes to defining genius there is no one to be the judge. The women says she has more qualifications of the genius and the same from the men. So we take it that there will continue to be some discussion. One thing is certain, one can hardly do without the other. At least that has been the way it has been in the past.

Liquid carbon dioxide is found to be effective fire extinguisher which puts out flames by freezing them. It is kept under a pressure of about a thousand pounds per square inch in a steel cylinder to which a short piece of hose with a funnel-type nozzle is attached. When the carbon dioxide is released into the air, it solidifies, forming a cold "snow." This passes off into a gas as it absorbs the heat in large quantities from the burning materials. When the temperature is sufficiently lowered, the fire stops burning.

Everybody All Wet At Ohio Relay Meet Says Joe College

Dear Folks—

Last Saturday all the world seemed wet and dreary and in the midst of the rain Josephine and yours truly betook ourselves down to the Ohio relays at the stadium. And you can rest assured that we were good and soaked when it was all over. We saw the boys from home in the high school races but they didn't recognize us because we must have looked like drowned rats or wet hens or what you may want to call us.

God bless our happy army. We are all happy here because the highest ranking officer of the army didn't make his appearance and so it relieved us of an extra drill on Friday afternoon. Of course the Scabbard and Blade may be disappointed because he didn't show up but it doesn't affect the boys in the ranks that way.

You know that new word that has been in use so much here lately? It's "gripe." No one has given it a logical meaning but I've come to believe it is just another way of saying R. O. T. C.

Jasca Heifets, the man who judged the beauty contest last week wrote to a New York newspaper that if women were beautiful here at 9 o'clock in the morning they need not look for him back in New York. Evidently he found them the same here as elsewhere because we haven't noticed him sticking around.

A lecturer here last week stated that animals didn't have any minds but I can't believe a word of what he says after the associations I have had with some animals. You may well remember the fit old "Puss" had last summer when the Tom cat killed her baby kit. And then can you say that cat didn't have any mind? Some people would do well if they had as much cat sense as that cat did.

The first woman judge took her place in the Student senate last week and after the first day of duty she was very well pleased that she had a part in convicting two violators of the parking regulations. More power to the women I says and let's hear more from them. There's but one way of finding out if women are as capable as they say they are.

Speaking of women reminds me of the ball Josephine is going to attend on Wednesday night. It's the "Famous Women's Ball" sponsored by the W. S. G. A. All the girls are to be in costumes and will represent various famous women in history. Quite a bit of interest is being shown in it and the identity of Cleopatra is being withheld. I suppose she will be some coed that thinks she has a wicked form and a vamping look in her eye.

So much for the happenings of O. S. U. See you in print next week.

Tire Talk
That's 100% Sincere

When a great big company like Goodyear says this is The Greatest Tire in the World, they are not taking chances with their good name just to be sensational.

And you know us, too! When we repeat here what Goodyear says it's because we know it's true.

This is—beyond a doubt—the greatest tire in the world, and we have seen them all.

That's talking "cold turkey." But we're sincere about it.
Come in and see it—the new-type All-Weather Tread Goodyear Balloon. It has a tread designed specially for balloon tire wear. It has the genuine SUPERTWIST carcass—made only by Goodyear. Know these latest things about tires.

The Story of The Bill Orman Company

BILL ORMAN

AT exactly seven thirty on the morning of June 20th, 1913, a man approached the Service Department of the W. E. Evans Company, who at that time were operating a general garage, and asked to see the manager. Upon being told that no vacancy existed in the Service Department, he immediately replied that he had come for a job and refused to leave without being hired. After a few minutes of conversation the manager saw the futility of combatting the man's determined aggressiveness, so in order to secure relief, the man was added to the Service force. The management soon recognized the sterling qualities of the man who had refused to leave without a job and learned that his veracity was beyond question and that his integrity was for his firm first, last and always. He accepted his duty with an open mind and gave his best to further the Service of his firm. The goal of this man lay far beyond that of a mechanic, so a little later on he joined the Sales Force of the F. E. Avery Company, sales representatives of the Packard and Detroit Electric Motor Cars. His commanding personality soon won for him a high place in the ranks of Retail Salesmen and the firm soon realized that they were in possession of a man of exceptional ability. His sound judgment, sales and executive ability attracted the attention of other business men and in 1917 he severed his connection with the F. E. Avery Company and became associated with the Charles Zimmerman Sons Company, Dodge Brothers Distributors, as Sales Manager. During his connection with the Zimmerman organization he built up the largest and most loyal, energetic and successful sales organization in Columbus. His open mind and sincerity of purpose arrested and held steadfast the confidence of his firm, the sales force and the public with whom he dealt. Aspiring to still higher levels, he severed his connection with the Zimmerman organization in 1925 and opened a place of business at 1199-1201 West Broad St., representing the Hudson and Essex Motor Cars under the firm name of The Bill Orman Company. So now dear public, we are soon to introduce to you the man who started in at the very bottom of the motor car business, making a thorough study of its various branches during his steady rise from obscurity to his present and enviable position. The man about whom this story is written is, Mr. W. L. Orman, familiarly known among his countless friends and boosters, as Bill. He would be pleased to have you drop in and get acquainted with his organization

During the time that Bill was Sales Manager for the Chas. Zimmerman Sons Company, a young man called upon him in 1920 and requested a chance to prove his ability to sell motor cars. After several appeals on the part of the applicant, Bill decided to determine the stick-to-itiveness of the young man by assigning him to the job of soliciting prospects from door to door. This young man soon proved his ability to take the bitter with the sweet and was soon advanced to the position of senior salesman. Later, he was made Bill's assistant and operated in this capacity until the first part of 1925. At such time he severed his connection with the Zimmerman organization to accept the managership of a Chamber of Commerce in a southern city. Bill and the young man about whom this little story is written, kept in close touch with one another and in the early part of 1928 negotiations were completed which effected a reunion of the two men in a business way. It is now our pleasure in presenting to his many friends, F. M. Paul, Sales Manager of The Bill Orman Company.

The Bill Orman Company has enjoyed a most successful volume of business from the beginning of the company and it was not long after starting operations that Bill felt the need of establishing a branch store in order that the public might be served in a more efficient manner. To fill this apparent need, a new retail store was opened at 2810 W. Broad St. The man selected to manage this important branch is one well qualified to assume the responsibilities imposed upon him. He is well known on the west side, having lived on the Hilltop for many years. In fact, most of Bill's employes live on the west side. We now present Howard B. Lindemore, Manager of the Retail Store at 2810 West Broad Street.

"Know Ohio" Week May 21-28

League Plans to Sell Ohioians the Idea of Traveling In Their Own State.

Newspapers, radio, movies and bill posters will broadcast the story of "Why Ohioians should see Ohio first" during the week of May 21 to 28, under plans formulated at a meeting of the newly formed "Know Ohio" league in Governor Donahey's office.

The league, composed of large civic, industrial and commercial organizations of the state, plans to sell Ohioans the idea of travelling through the beauty spots of the state during the forthcoming motoring season. W. O Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State university, is president of the organization.

"Few Ohioans know there are 550 outstanding spots of either great natural beauty or intense interest in Ohio, listed in archeological archives and travellers' guides," President Thompson declared. "We now have more than 30,000 miles of improved highways over which motorists may travel for days without duplication.

"With Lake Erie and its beauty shore spots to the north, the Ohio river on the west and south and scores of beautiful lakes and streams between, intermingled with hills, small mountains, mounds and geological formations rich in history, Ohio presents a travel ground as interesting as any where in the world.

"Few people realize, too, that Ohio is strategically the industrial center of America—within 18 rail hours of 80 millions of people, that we have coal mines, oil wells, mammoth factories that are unduplicated anywhere in the world. Let's all see Ohio first."

Generosity

W. E. Eidson, president of the Hilltop Building and Loan, is treating his friends to coca cola, of which he has a plentiful supply, a gift from the Coca Cola Co., through the Helmbrecht Confectionery.

In Hospital

Mrs. D. S. McDaniel was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital last week, where she underwent an operation. She is some improved at this time. Mr. McDaniel is proprietor of the McDaniel Bakery.

MUST ORGANIZE SAYS DR. WEIR

Loyalty Is Missing Note in Church Today Men's Organization Are Told.

The church of today that does not organize its men is falling quite behind the reasonable expected achievement of the men, Dr. William F. Weir, men's worker of the Presbyterian church told the men of Hoge Memorial church that assembled for the organization meeting on Friday evening.

"Emphasis today is on the small group in the church. Loyalty of the men must be to the church first. We need to clarify our opinion as to the place of the church in society," Dr. Weir told the group of nearly one hundred men.

"Loyalty to Jesus in the church is the missing note today," said Dr. Weir. He pointed out that there was no place for men in the church in former days but at present anything can be accomplished in the church through the strong power of the men.

"It is unwise and unsafe for a Christian man to form a business partnership with a man who is not a Christian," he quoted from Roger Babson, nationally known statistician. "The one will build on the rock and the other on the sand and the fall will involve both," he continued.

He stressed the point that the one fundamental business of men is religion. Neither can we live without men who interpret God. Dr. Weir pointed to the editorials of two of the largest newspapers of Chicago as featuring these facts in their editorial columns.

Following the address of Dr. Weir the group was formally organized as the Men's Club of Hoge Memorial Church. Six monthly dinner meetings will be held each year from October to March.

The following officers were elected: president, George Matson; vice president, C. W. Michel; secretary, Jack Merriman; treasurer, Don Lear.

The entire meeting was in charge of the men. Men cooked the dinner, waited tables and furnished the entertainment. A quartet sang several selections and Tom Graham, commonly known to radio fans as Harry Lauder, sang for the group.

Goes to Blue Ridge

Raymond O. Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Hill, 435 S. Ogden Ave., will enter the Y. M. C. A. Graduate school at Blue Ridge, W. Va., on June 1st. He has until now been enrolled in the Y. M. C. A. Graduate school at Nashville, Tenn.

Too Fast!

Too good! That's the reputation of the student body of West Broad Street school when it comes to fire drills.

A recent inspection at the school with the fire chief as eye witness shows that 1130 children of that school can retire from the building in perfect order in one minute and 35 seconds. However Miss Harriet Judd, principal, states that the time is a little too good. It should stand at about one minute and 45 seconds to insure perfect safety for all children.

HILLTOP TEAM IN TOURNAMENT

Former and Present Members of Highland Team to Play in Legion Contest.

The West Side Ramblers, baseball team sponsored by Mr. Laymen, physical director of Highland Junior High school has been entered to play in the American Legion Baseball tournament. All the members of the team will be former or present players on the Highland team.

They will open their schedule Monday, May 14, at McKinley Diamond No. 3. The following boys have been asked to report: Terry Barnett, George Blackburn, Jack Miles, Ernest Nolen, Joy Riggs, Malcolm Snyder, Tom Swisher, Elwood Golden, Cecil Randall, Robert Walker, Kenneth Cox and Richard Dusenberry.

Highland Junior High won the second game in the Southern Division at the expense of Mound Friday to the tune of 17 to 10. The Hilltop boys slammed the offerings of three Mound pitchers to all corners of the lot, while Davis held the Court House boys in check, fanning 10 men.

Barnett garnered four hits, while Purdy, Hurley and Blackburn, secured three apiece.

Highland plays Starling Thursday at Central High field, when second place in the Southern Division will be settled. These teams battled extra innings last year for a 2 to 1 decision for Highland and a first class game is expected.

Score by Innings:									R.	H.	E.
Highland	4	2	2	2	0	2	5		17	20	3
Mound	2	0	3	1	0	2	2		10	10	3

To Give Play

"On the Hiking Line" has been chosen as the play to be presented by the dramatics class of Columbus Evening High school, Friday, May 11. Several Hilltop students have parts in the play.

CLEAN UP, PAINT UP AND FIRE PREVENTION DRIVE TO BE CONDUCTED MAY 20 TO JUNE 2

Paint up and clean up!

The time is from May 20 to June 2. The place is all Columbus. The purpose is to make Columbus a better place in which to live.

The two weeks from May 20 to June 2 have been officially set aside as clean-up and paint-up weeks for Columbus by the Chamber of Commerce with the co-operative support of the civic associations throughout the city.

A meeting of the clean-up and paint-up committee of the Chamber of Commerce was held at the Commerce Bldg. on Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock with Mayor James J. Thomas as chairman. Loring S. Jones was appointed director of the campaign. Representatives of the civic associations of the city were present as members of the committee. G. M. Palmer and C. Carlton Hartley, President and secretary respectively of the Hilltop Business Men's association represented that body at the meeting.

Several such clean-up campaigns have been held in Columbus during the past and are conducted in most large cities of the United States. The co-operation of the Boy Scouts, school children, Camp Fire Girls, women's clubs and business associations will be used in conducting the local war against dirt.

WHAT THE CAMPAIGN DOES

The clean-up and paint-up campaign creates community spirit. Chronic knockers are led into the ranks of the boosters.

Places once cleaned up will serve as an incentive to keep them clean in the future.

Streets and alleys are cleaned up and repaired and thereafter kept in good condition.

Fire losses are reduced through the removal of waste and rubbish. Fire traps are razed.

Vacant grounds are improved, mowed, cleaned of rubbish.

Public buildings are renovated, landscaping is renewed and trees are planted.

Homes are cleaned and beautified inside and out. Grounds, front and back, alleys and outbuildings are cleaned up. Garages and fences are painted and repaired.

Breeding places of diseases are destroyed. Flies, mosquitos, rats, roaches and other pests are eliminated.

Property values are increased.

It advertises the city.

It develops good citizenship and builds character.

The fire prevention campaign conducted by the chamber of commerce last fall was one of the most successful campaigns ever held in the city. During the time set aside 186 fire insurance inspectors examined business properties and schools for fire hazards.

Mayor Thomas stated at the meeting on Monday that the departments of the city would offer their support in the campaign.

Fire Chief Nice pointed out that over ten million dollars in property had been destroyed in Ohio due to fire since January 1. He believes that the business man is probably the most careless about fire hazards.

A prize will probably be offered to the school for the best report of the work during the campaign. Crusader buttons will also be given to all children taking part in the drive.

First Straw Hat

Another sure sign of summer is the straw hat. Sometimes!

Straw hat day has been set for May 15 but styles in this case don't happen to be according to the dictates of Paris or Fifth avenue. Someone always tries to jump the gun.

In this case the first straw hat of the season was seen near West Broad street Central avenue on the grounds of the Institution for Feeble Minded last Friday. Their remains the possibility that the hat was a last year's model so there appears to be no reason for men of the business world to worry about being left behind. Or possibly the owner had a straw hat complex.

TOURIST CAMP TO BE CLOSED

Service Director States Health Conditions Are Bad Due to Drainage.

Glenwood Park tourist camp was ordered closed by Service Director Duffy on Friday. He states that health conditions in the park due to the poor drainage of the lot make it unsafe for tourists to stop there. The condition cannot be remedied except at a heavy cost, he said.

The park was condemned last year by the city health department. It is below drain and sewer levels in West Broad street and cannot be properly drained.

Several autos continued to stop there during the week. It is the only place in this section of the city on the National Highway that is suitably located for a tourist camp. The heavy [illegible] indications are that eventually the world will look upon the idea of air transportation in the same manner as automobiles today.

And so it goes that the cities of the country are clamoring for support of their civic bodies and local government to establish airports. Columbus keeps in line and we of the Hilltop are able to realize that the Columbus Airport is here in our own "back yard."

One and six-tenths miles from Hague avenue on the Georgesville road is the beginning of what may be the center of this newly developed industry in the near future.

A steel hanger is being erected at present at the field and grading work is being done to get the grounds in condition for safe landing. The airport has already taken on the appearance of a commercial flying field in that several planes have already lighted there.

R. L. Harris and C. F. Ricketts sponsors of the newly organized Commercial Airway Transit Corporation of Ohio visited the government aeronautic division of the department of Commerce in Washington on Saturday. They were furnished with all the latest information concerning markers and lighting for commercial fields.

It is the hope of the heads of the company to bring air mail planes to the Hilltop station.

WHAT IT MAY MEAN

And those who are optomistic and look to the real future of aviation can see the Hilltop as a scene of trade and commerce with hundreds of machines of the air passing over this section to their ports in all corners of the earth.

We see the air mail landing at various intervals during the day and night. Second Lindberghs come swooping down over the Hilltop to put off their burden of mail. Hundreds of people come from miles around to see the mail planes land.

Peanut and pop corn venders break the stillness of the night with their sales talk as eager witnesses crowd around.

Who knows but that some tran-Atlantic flyer from Germany or Ireland may decide to make a better record and fly beyond the limits of appliance worn New York and give the middle west a chance to be the first greeters of world heroes.

planes are on display at their respective show rooms.

Yes the Hilltop will soon take to the air.

PICNIC PLANS ARE UNDER WAY

Committee Promises Many Interesting Features for Hilltop Outing.

Plans for the coming annual Hilltop picnic sponsored by the Hilltop Business Men's association are rapidly being brought into shape and all indications are that the picnic this year will eclipse anything yet put on by this organization.

At a meeting of the general committee composed of H. G. Deems, chairman; G. W. Matson and C. R. Pepple, with the divisional chairman at the Masonic Tuesday evening, many new features for the picnic were discussed, and these promise to be of much interest to all Hilltop residents when they are finally formulated and ready to announce.

Committee chairman are: Finance and budget, F. L. Sulzberger; concession, R. C. Lane; grounds, G. W. Matson and C. R. Pepple; contests, R. G. Haunts; entertainment, J. E. Hite; baby contest, Dr. J. T. Craddock; utility, H. G. Davis, and publicity and prizes, R. D. Hastings.

Spyker to Address West Broad P.-T. A.

Harry A. Spyker of the Y. M. C. A. will address the Father-Son meeting of the West Broad Street School Parent-Teacher association on Friday evening, May 11, at 7:45 p. m. in the school auditorium. At this time officers for the coming year are to be elected.

Missionary to Speak

Randall Speaks

Cecil J. Randall, 1089 W. Broad St., president of the board of education and a member of Camp Fire Council, addressed Camp Fire guardians who met Monday night at the Neil House to plan for raising $3500 as part payment for a summer camp for Camp Fire Girls of Columbus.

TRACK HAZARD BEING REPAIRED

I. C. & E. Starts Work on Improvement on Hague Ave.

Improvement of the street in Hague avenue next to the car line of the I. C. & E. started on Tuesday. The work started at the end of the line at West Broad street and will continue through to Sullivant avenue.

The street is being improved inside the car tracks and about one foot on the outside of each track. In most places the whole layer of bricks is being removed and reset.

During the past, several accidents have resulted from the condition of the street in Hague avenue. Large holes near the tracks presented a continual hazard to automobile drivers. A man was injured about two weeks ago on Hague avenue when he was hit by a car which was caught in the rut of the track and could not turn aside.

A notice from city council on the suggestion of Councilman Green was sent to the I. C. & E. Co. on April 30 demanding that the track be repaired.

Class Meeting

The Married People's class of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church will meet Thursday (tonight) at 7:30 at the church house for the regular monthly business and social meeting. The colors are to be counted at this meeting the same as attendance at Sunday school. Hostesses are: Mrs. Markert, Mrs. Heid, Mrs. Ivan Spencer and Mrs. C. C. Cook.

Junior Party

A party for Junior church members of Glenwood M. E. church will be held at the church Friday, May 11, immediately after school.

KIDDIE'S FREE SHOW AT RITZ

A free show for all kiddies of the Hilltop is announced for 9:30 Saturday morning at the Ritz theater. The film to be shown has not been announced, but Manager Pekras assures his little friends that it will be something they will enjoy. All kiddies of the Hilltop are invited to be guests of the theater at this time.

Named Trustee

Patrolman Frances M. Draper, 74 S. Roys Ave., was appointed by the trustees of the police pension fund to fill the vacancy on the board caused by the retirement of Corporal H. H. Sandusky. The board met on Saturday.

Madge Emily Walker is recovering from a severe attack of influenza from which she has been ill for the past two weeks at her home at 40 S. Terrace St.

ORSERVE MOTHER'S DAY THROUGHOUT NATION ON SUNDAY

Sunday is Mother's Day.

The day has been officially proclaimed by Governor Donahey as Mother's Day throughout Ohio. It will also be Mother's Day over the nation.

Thousands of mothers throughout the land will be honored on that day in a special way.

The first observance of Mother's Day was in 1910. At that time it grew up as a popular tribute. In 1913 congress authorized the president to proclaim the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day. This was first done by President Wilson in 1914.

This day is observed over the nation by wearing flowers, sending flowers, greetings, candy and gifts to mothers.

Special Mother's Day services have been planned for most Hilltop churches on Sunday.

Kazooka Orchestra Will Give Concert

"A Trip on the Magic Carpet" will be given by students of West Broad Street school at the school auditorium on Friday, May 18.

Featured in the entertainment will be the Pom Pom drill, Boys' Glee club, Girls' chorus, Junior Girls' chorus, Kazooka orchestra, Kindergarten band and school orchestra.

The Junior Girls' chorus will give an impersonation of "Violets" accompanied by Virginia Hohenstine and Edna Corcoran, violin, and Charles Walton, piano.

The Kazooka orchestra with Billy Ferguson son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ferguson, 62 S. Richardson Ave., as drum major, will give special entertainment. Magnolius Appleblossom, a new and mysterious member will also be present.

HILLTOP GIRL WINS HONOR

Miss Marie Davis Awarded Duse Fellowship; Will Study in Italian University.

Miss Marie Davis, daughter of Mr and Mrs. E. W. Davis, 91 N. Harris Ave., member of the faculty of the romance language department of Ohio State university, has been awarded the Eleanora Duse Fellowship by the committee on education of the Italy-America Society, for a year's study in a university in Italy.

Miss Davis will spend the summer in traveling in France and Italy after the close of the spring quarter here. Although Miss Davis' major study during her graduate and undergrate years was French, she has continued advanced work in Italian.

The fellowship, $1200, was established by a request in the will of Duse, the Italian tragedienne, who died several years ago in Pittsburgh while on a tour of the United States.

During the year Miss Davis will submit reports on the papers on certain phases to the Italy-America society.

Miss Davis, a member of Pi Lambda Theta and Lambda Omega, was graduated from Ohio State with a degree of B.Sc. in education in 1920 and an M.A. degree in 1921, winning a scholarship in the last year of her work.

She taught French and Spanish in Defiance college until 1923, and she then has been teaching French at Ohio State. Students throughout the United States vied for the honor won by Miss Davis.

Friends of Miss Alice Elvey of 118 N. Hague Ave., are glad to know she is much improved from what threatened to be a very serious illness.

Go to Convention

Gerald Smelekar, junior at Ohio State university of 261 S. Richardson Ave., will attend the national convention of Phi Alpha Theta, national honorary history society, to be held at Pittsburg on Saturday, May 12. He will go as a representative of the local chapter.

HOW I MAKE

By Readers of the Hilltop Record

Beef Loaf

1 1-2 pounds of round steak ground
2 eggs,
1 cup of crackers broken up fine,
Milk,
Salt,
Half can tomatoes.

Mix beef, crackers, eggs and salt, add enough milk to make a soft mixture. Shape into one or more loaves. Put into pan, pour into pan, water enough to cover the bottom about a quarter of an inch. Bake in a moderate oven for an hour and one half, when almost done pour tomatoes over top and return to oven.

Popovers

2 cups milk,
2 cups flour,
2 eggs,
2 tablespoons fat,
½ teaspoon salt.

Mix salt and flour gradually add milk, in order to keep mixture smooth; then add melted fat and unbeaten eggs. Beat thoroughly with a Dover egg beater or spoon. Pour at once into hot gem pans and bake for 40 to 45 minutes in a moderate oven. They should be served as soon as cooked.

Corn Bread

2 cups meal,
2 cups sour milk,
½ teaspoon salt,
2 teaspoon soda,
2 tablespoon melted butter,
1 cup sifted flour,
2 teaspoon baking powder,
2 eggs.

Sift dry ingredients, stir these into the milk, and then add butter and beaten eggs. Bake in a moderate oven.

Vanilla Caramels

2 cups sugar,
½ cup milk,
1⅝ cup corn syrup,
¼ cup butter,
1 teaspoon vanilla,
Chopped nuts.

Cook sugar, milk, corn syrup and butter together stirring constantly until it will form a firm ball in water. Pour into a greased pan. The nuts and vanilla are added after removing from fire.

FINE FUR MAKES FINE COATS IF USED DISCRIMINATINGLY

If "competition is the life of trade," it is also the inspiration to creative imagination. Now there's the case of ensembles versus separate coats. With the ensemble costume about to capture the fashion world with its endearing charms, it brings the matter up to the out stylist to meet the challenge. Hint's why the separate topcoat this season is a thing of such beguiling beauty, women of fashion simply cannot resist them. For that matter, it would be about as unwise a thing as one could do to eliminate the separate coat from one's spring and summer wardrobe. To worry along without a modish topcoat? Never!

And about that question of "to be or not to be furred." It seems that after all, there are some stylists who hold the opinion that a bit of choice fur makes even the handsomest coat look handsomer. So with the conviction that fine fur makes fine coats, if used discriminatingly, many of the world's leading coat designers are furring their most stunning models, either at the neck or the sleeves, but seldom if ever at both places at once. That is if a coat has a fur collar, the sleeves are devoid the fur cuff. And vice versa, when the sleeve is fur cuffed, the collar resorts to the self-fabric scarf for its detailing, or to some other intriguing manipulation.

The models in the picture illustrate the point. Both of these adorable spring coats are posed by Laura La Plante, for somehow newest fashions have taken to arriving via filmland these days. For the coat to the left, novelty patterned beige kasha is the favored medium. A beige fox fur collar tunes in with the color scheme and as if that is not enough to fill the cup of beauty full to overflowing the designer adds a graceful scarf of the fabric.

Kasha cloth, but this time a very pale beige, is also used for the coat to the right. Fur on the cuffs alone is a mark of style distinction, and this model stresses the fact. A riot of tucks also adds charm to its styling. A most interesting detail is that of the self-colored yarn embroidery which elaborates both sleeves and the long pointed collar.

I-ON-A-CO

You have probably heard about Ionaco and what it is doing in Columbus, in restoring to health hundreds of sufferers who had given up all hope. Now, you have an opportunity to investigate Ionaco for yourself and find out why Ionaco produces results.

Ionaco is not a faith cure. No faith is required to get results from its use. Ionaco is simple and inexpensive to operate. Everybody can use it. It is guaranteed to give continuous service. It is an investment in health for the entire family, always convenient. There is no discomfort, shock or unpleasant reaction from the use of Ionaco.

For the benefit of residents in this section an Ionaco office has been established nearby. You may have demonstrations at that office without charge or obligation, or telephone and we will be glad to send a representative to your home to give you a demonstration without charge.

SWEET REVENGE

By MRS. E. O. CARLSTON

(Copyright)

After exhausting the patience of both the sweetstuff and Margaret, Dora finally decided that her sister looked best in the rose colored satin, with very elaborate and to Margaret's chagrin, very expensive trimmings. When they again stepped into the elevator Margaret wondered what next, but wasn't left long in doubt. When they stepped from the elevator, the thin young woman found herself in a beauty shop.

"Why did you come here?" she questioned Dora.

"Because you are going to have your hair bobbed, Margie, dear."

"Oh, I don't believe I want to, Dora not today. Let's go home. It is time for supper."

"That doesn't matter. Father will not be home until late this evening, and they will have plenty for us to eat at the Metropolitan Restaurant."

After no little persuasion, Margaret permitted them to trim and curl her hair, and feeling like a sheep from the shearing, followed Dora to the Millinery Department to buy a hat. After the purchase of some smart looking pumps, and a new coat, Dora considered her self-appointed task complete.

Wednesday evening arrived, and with it, a crowd of gay young people including the real origin for the gathering, in the person of Mr. Leonard Benton, whom Margaret avoided all evening; but not so with Dora. When she started a thing, it was usually finished; and before the evening was over, Leonard was positive that Dora Wentworth was the most charming individual in the world, and he determined to cultivate her friendship.

As a result of this decision, he finally succeeded in leading her away from the others, bestowing admiring glances and numerous attentions upon her and Dora encouraged him as much as prudence dictated. "The higher the hopes, the harder the fall," thought the young woman to herself.

She soon made a move to rejoin the others. Walter Moreland, Dora's favorite suitor, had been invited, also. She must have a little chat with him. To her surprise, Mr. Moreland did not seem to notice her when she entered the house, being too deeply interested in what Margaret was saying to even notice anyone else.

The hours flew by, and the guests took their departure. The sisters, who shared the same room, retired for the night.

"Oh, I enjoyed it so much," Margaret said, enthusiastically, as her head touched the pillow.

"No doubt you did," Dora said crossly. "I, myself, would prefer the society of Walt Moreland to that of Len Benton."

Margaret began to cry, her principal weak point being tears.

"I am sorry, Dora, dear. I thought punishing Leonard was your only object this evening, and seeing how well you succeeded, I did not consider it wrong to talk to Walter Moreland."

Dora's anger was appeased when she thought of how well her plan against Leonard was progressing.

"He is coming tomorrow evening," he informed Margaret.

"Unless he neglects to keep his promise," the other girl added.

"He won't," Dora said, confidently; then added: "Margie, you looked sweet this evening. No wonder Walter was willing to substitute you for me."

Margaret smiled to herself, but said nothing. Dora's everlasting conceit frightened Margaret fearful it would bring her sister trouble some day.

The following evening brought Leonard Benton, for once, according to promise to the Wentworth home. Margaret retired to the room she shared with her sister early in the evening, and somehow she felt relieved to know that the young man preferred Dora's society to her own. As she sat alone in the room, her mind was full of thoughts of Walter Moreland. Then he would try to think of something else. Dora liked Walt, as she called him, better than any of the young men who frequented the premises. At this very minute, Dora was, due to regard for her, Margaret, playing a prank upon Leonard Benton to avenge his last actions.

The next news Margaret received regarding Walter was that he had gone away on a business trip for the firm belonging to his father, and would not return until the end of three months. Meanwhile, Leonard Benton was becoming daily more interested in Dora. One evening, the doorbell gave a loud peal, and Dora flew to the door to answer the summons. It was Leonard, who suggested that they take a ride in his car, adding a remark to the effect that the evening was very warm, which, of course, could be the only possible reason why he desired to drive through the village and the surrounding country with a girl like Dora Wentworth.

"Perhaps, Len, after while," she said sweetly, in response to his suggestion. "Let's have a little chat at home first." Then they sat down side by side on the pretty overstuffed davenport in the living room.

"I see you usually keep appointments with me," Dora said, tartly.

"There is no reason why I shouldn't. I find your company very enjoyable."

"Don't you think you should keep promises under all circumstances?"

"Certainly, why do you ask?"

"For various reasons," was all Dora would say.

They were soon traveling along through the moonlight and Leonard, being a good one hand driver was making good use of his time. Dora knew, before many days or hours passed, that this one-sided love affair, as she had called it, would come to an end, when she should laugh at Leonard's proposal, and tell him the truth about the matter. Somehow, strange to say, she dreaded for these days to end. Leonard was a delightful companion, not so dull as quite a few of the young men of her acquaintance.

As she rode by his side past beautiful orchards and grain covered fields, she wondered what she would say if Leonard should make a declaration of love to her in plain terms. Would she have the courage to carry out her plan? She wondered and pondered, unable to come to a satisfactory conclusion.

"Perhaps we had better turn back now, Leonard," she suggested, and the old flippant tone she had always used when addressing him was gone.

"Before we return to your home, I want to tell you something." He stopped the car and put his arm around her.

"Do you know that I care more for you than any other girl I have ever met?" he asked, earnestly.

"Just how much is that, Len?" Dora asked. "Perhaps you never liked any of them, and consequently your comparison may not be complimentary to me."

"It is true that I have never been in love before, and was not even deeply infatuated with any of the girls I went with. Now, everything is different. I know what love means," he told her very tenderly. "Without you, life to me would be very empty." He hesitated, then went on. "Dora, do you care for me? Will you be my little sweetheart now, and my wife later on?"

Dora looked very grave, and he knew from her expression that her answer would not be satisfactory to him. She finally spoke.

"Leonard," she said, "I have a little story to tell you, and I hope you will pardon me for what I have done. When you were going with Margaret, you never kept your promises to her, and the poor girl was continually humiliated by your failure to come when she expected you. One night, you were to take her to see a play, and when she saw you had again broken your promise to her, I went with her, and there in one of the box seats—a most conspicuous place—we saw you with another girl. I decided that you needed punishment, and determined to win your—" With a gesture of his hand he stopped her before she was able to finish the sentence.

"I see it all now and I never would have believed it of you. As to your accusation about my lack of punctuality when I was going with Margaret, the girl with me at the theater that night was my sister, and I can prove it. She said Margaret called when I was out, requesting her to tell me that it would be impossible for her to go with me that night. For that reason, I took my sister, Helen. The same thing occurred more than once, and I did not deserve the punishment you gave me."

"There is a great mistake some place," Dora said. "I know Margaret never called you to tell you not to come, because it was plain that she was very much disappointed when you failed to arrive at the proper time."

"No doubt there has been foul play some place, but that does not excuse your actions. Let us not talk any more about it," and he recklessly drove back to the city, while every nerve of Dora's body quivered, thinking that they would be sure to have an accident. She wondered at this change in Leonard. How different was his attitude now to that of a few minutes previous. He had changed from an ardent lover to a madman.

Without mishap they reached Dora's home, and as she stepped from the machine, all she could say was "Goodbye." She went directly to her room, where she found Margaret.

"How are you and Leonard getting along now?" Margaret asked. "Has he made his little speech yet?"

Dora threw her slippers down with a bang, and going to the mirror, roughly massaged her face.

"The entire affair was a mistake from the beginning. That was Len's sister who was with him at the theater that night, and he said that someone had called her pretending to be you, saying that you could not go with him that night. He said he never failed to come when he promised to come unless he was told to do otherwise, and I think he was telling me the truth."

Margaret was very much surprised at the news.

"I cannot imagine who phoned to his home pretending to be me," she remarked.

Follow the crowds to Seiller's Annual May Sale.

"Because he saw me riding home from town with Leonard yesterday evening, I suppose," Margaret replied. "And seeing Leonard parked beside me on the davenport evidently didn't help matters any. Len acted like an imbecile, forcing himself on me that way."

"He is not an imbecile, Margaret Wentworth! I don't like to hear such things about him." Dora's tone was anything but pleasant.

"He spoiled the evening for me, and the affair is not over yet. A misunderstanding exists, and someone will have to right it," Margaret declared.

"I have made a big enough fool of myself without trying to straighten this out, so far as Leonard is concerned. All I can do is to refuse to see Walter if he comes again."

BRIGHT PROSPECTS

Last week Prof. Reeder of Ohio State university pointed out to Hilltop business men that a decentralization movement is going on in the retail store business. People are realizing that the same goods can be bought in the neighborhood.

Community retail centers are in fifth small towns or cities in themselves today. Anything that can be secured in the heart of the city can also be bought in the community.

Hilltop building activity in the past months has taken a decided upward incline. New store rooms being built here will house new merchandise establishments and go to make this section of the city on a par with other communities.

Home owners and residents should view this with approval because of the fact that they will continue to be served with better service and goods as the Hilltop grows.

HAGUE AVE. CAR TRACKS

The car tracks in Hague avenue belonging to the I. C. & E. have been pronounced dangerous to travel on that street by city officials.

Several accidents have taken place there in the past few weeks as the result of the condition of the street next to the rails. Large holes in the street make driving dangerous.

It is the duty of the traction line to keep the street repaired according to the franchise. They have been notified of the condition of the street and ordered to take some action.

As yet no attention has been given to the matter. Some consideration should be shown to the notice of the city council and also the welfare of those who travel that street in cars. The franchise of the company should be investigated.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

HOW TO FOLD BILLS

There is a superstition widespread through the country that in folding your money you should fold the bills lengthwise if you would prosper financially. If you fold them short across you will always be "hard up." The basis of this superstition is very easy to come at. It is purely sympathetic magic—like producing like, what is associated in thought is associated in fact. When you fold the bills lengthways the money remains at its greatest length—literally the "long green," not curtailed nor stunted. If you fold the bills across you diminish them in length—apparently cut them in two, curtail them. Folded in one way they represent money extending and folded in the other money cut off. There you have clearly the association of ideas and the association of ideas brings about, by sympathetic magic, the association of actual fact.

The superstition is a folklore primer one but is interesting as showing how the human mind, even without the aid of tradition, unconsciously evolves in terms of sympathetic magic—an example of the persistence of the subconscious primitive in man's mentality

The Spectator

CLUBBING IT.

"Tonight is the night our XYZ bridge club meets," Mrs. Smith told Mrs. Jones over the backyard fence. "And tonight is Dad's lodge night and Betty is going to some school club meeting and John will be out with the Boy Scouts. I'm just wondering what I'll do with the baby tonight."

"Why not form a club for the babies," was the reply of Mrs. Jones.

And so it goes. Everybody in the household is clubbing it these days. If you don't belong to at least three clubs you may be considered a social outcast. Indications are that there won't be any social outcasts in this country because there are some hundred clubs organized every day.

There is no reason why anyone should be without a club today. If you don't belong just organize one for yourself. Hook a constitution and by-laws up to your hobby and give a name and charge a small initiation fee and you will have your club completed.

FOR BETTER OR WORSE?

When it comes to summing the club business up we wonder if there aren't a lot of people that believe all clubs are a lot of bunk. Expressions against them in the past gives enough proof that there are such people.

When the point is reached where there is no one to stay with the baby it may be wise to form clubs for the tiny tots too or better yet it would be wise to have a special department in every club to care for the children while busy mothers carry out the program of their respective organizations.

But in truth there is something to be gained from a great number of clubs and lodges. It may be true that American people are clubbed to death but the person who is not associated with some social and educational or recreational orders may be losing something that he is bound to gain through the associations with groups of people.

KNOWING PEOPLE.

There can be no doubt that group contacts are for the good of those involved. Exchange of ideas in such groups have been largely responsible for the growth of culture throughout the world.

The work a day man who turns his mind to the duties of business during the day and does not think beyond the immediate things with which he is associated needs the contact of a club or lodge.

Culture in the world has made remarkable strides in the past century and mainly due to the fact that men have been exchanging their knowledge. Two heads are better than one seems to apply here as a good illustration.

ON EXPERIMENT.

A British scientist once used himself as the subject for his own experiment. He desired knowledge of what might happen if a human being was shut off in the world from all contact with life. This man went to Patagonia where he cut off all relations with the rest of the world.

Over a long period of time he failed to see a human being or an animal and even the sparse plant life of the land failed to afford inspiration for thought of any kind he later related. Day after day passed and with nothing but skies above and sands below this man passed the time away without a single creative thought. His experiment had proven to him that contact with animal or human life must be necessary for living to be worth while.

ANOTHER ANGLE.

Associations may be good or bad. They may in some cases prove detrimental to the individual. Other experiments have been made to show that humans who have been brought up in the company of animals tend to have animal dispositions.

Possibly several hundred so called clubs of this country could be done away with and never be missed. A club is just as good as its members.

DR. AND MRS. BARBER

At the time of the presentation of a purse of gold by members of the Glenwood congregation to Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Barber at the dinner party given them prior to their departure for Europe, the following poem was read by Charles W. Haldy.

Often during our lifetime we cherish a thought,
If making a trip which comes to naught;
But now is the time when your wish comes true,
The fulfillment of which makes you happy and us too.
When at the end of your ocean trip,
All the steamer stewards expect a tip,
On land as well as on water too,
Tips included are expected from you;
So in order to prepare you for better or worse,
We have made up for you a little purse;
The word tip originated in England long ago,
T. I. P. to, insure, promptness—isn't that so?
On behalf of the congregation,
I make this presentation,
To show our appreciation,
And help your tipping through:
Wishing you Bon Voyage,
Is the prayer in our hearts for you
Charles W. Haldy

"Too much effort," said a worker grown weary in well-doing. "Too little accomplished," he afterwards complained.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

THE "DRAWING ROOM"

In this day of servant troubles and the three-room suite with kitchenette we do not hear so much of the drawing room as we used to. However, where there is the luxury of a house we do still find, occasionally, a relic of the formal parlor style of room called the drawing room. In England, incidentaly, in quite small "villas," as they call suburban houses, the term is still used, even though the room designated is what we would call a living room.

On its face the word "drawing room" gives not the slightest hint of its origin—yet how obvious once it is revealed! For it is merely a contraction for the original "withdrawing room," to which the ladies withdrew after dinner while the gentlemen sat over their wine!

For a little more along the line of curiety we present the following story told in class at Ohio State University. An orator of the theological school was in debate with a scientist. The question as you might suppose was evolution. The debate had reached fever heights on the part of the orator and the scientist held calmly to his seat.

"And do you contend that your grandfather was a monkey?" asked the orator.

"No," was the reply of the scientist. "But do you contend that your grandfather was a mud doll set up against the fence to dry?"

Campus Elections too Much for Joe Who Tries Politics

Dear Folks—

Joe is all tired out. He celebrated a little too much after the campus elections were over on Tuesday night.

You may not have raised your boy to be a politician but I'll sure say he has a good start in that direction. To hear the boys talk you would think he was a perfect grafter. He evidently must have preyed upon the freshmen and made them vote for his candidate, and by the way—his candidate was a fraternity brother and was elected.

Joe says that all the pledges at his house will hear from the actives at the next meeting. It seemingly pays to pledge votes in an election and woe unto the pledge that isn't on the job at all times.

Back home the leaves and vegetables may all be sprouting out as the result of the long desired sunshine but here we spend the hours thinking of how soon we may get out into the open air again. Some of the class rooms are so hot that it reminds me o ewe old boy off in the middle of August.

But we have something to look forward to I guess because there are but two more weeks of this warm spell in school. Then folks I'll assure you here will be a back to the soil movement as far as I am concerned. Joe says he may get a job here and work during the summer but I think he has his mind more at heart than he does work.

You should have been here for the initiation [illegible]

For two days the boys carried buckets and dippers to classes and on Wednesday the afternoon was taken up with parading about the campus in the various costumes. It was indeed a sight to look upon. But to give you an idea of it all what could be funnier than one of the boys playing the part of a colored preacher and trying to save the soul of another in the role of a wicked "brown skin gal" from Savannah.

Everybody was all set for a big show on Wednesday evening but it seemed to leave out for some reason. The boys in the R. O. T. C. were all set to shoot the governor when he re-viewed the troops in their drill. But Governor Pie showed up and watched the boys march by but they didn't give him his usual 19 guns.

Maybe Joe will have recuperated enough by next week to write again.

Josephine.

KEEP YOUR HOUSE PAINTED

Paint will help to keep a [illegible] cool in summer and warm in winter, made by a department [illegible] States Bureau of Mines. White—or better still, a [illegible] aluminum—paint on the roof of a house reflects away the sun's rays. In winter this would work the other way, for the rays of heat escaping from a house would be reflected back again.

The first automobile in America which really ran was built in a barn loft in 1892. When first cranked it dashed away from its inventor and tore a hole through the side of the barn, nearly wrecking itself at the start. But the inventor, Charles E. Duryea, was overjoyed to realize that he had contrived a vehicle which would move itself. Other experiments were made at about this time by Dave Buick, Henry Ford, Jonathan Maxwell, and H. H. Franklin. An early attempt at a low-priced car was made by A. P. Brush. This surprising model contained one cylinder and the company advertised that its car had "a wooden axle, wooden wheels, and a wooden frame." A disillusioned victim of such generosity reminded them of the unannounced fact that it "wooden run."

Method of Child Raising Gives Way to Persuasion

P.-T. A. Told.

Ch[illegible] of the rod has given way ...ession in the raising of children was pointed out by H. A. ... director of the boys' department at the Y. M. C. A. and director ...mp Willson, when he spoke at the ... and son banquet given by the ... Broad Street school Parent-Teacher Association on Friday night ... the school auditorium.

Religious attitudes have also changed from those of former time Mr. Spyker stated. Forcing the child into the church breeds hatred for the church in later life. At present the churches are making their work attractive and the child has a desire to go.

In speaking of the present day class distinctions Mr. Spyker advised the parents to do away with it in the home and the children will grow up to have no such prejudices. He believes there is too great a level between the rich and the poor and that the only way to overcome this fault in America is through education.

"Parents should spend at least one evening every week with their children in discussing their problems," he said.

Following the address these officers were elected for the following year: Mrs. M. B Harrison, president; Miss Harriett Judd, first vice president; R. G. Haunts, second vice president; Mrs. William E. Donehower, secretary, and Mabel Grau, treasurer.

Mrs. S. U. Stewart and Mrs. H. D. Shults were elected to represent the organization in the Columbus and Franklin County Council.

P.-T. A. to Elect

Mrs. C. M. Valentine will address the mothers and daughters at the Parent-Teacher Association meeting at Highland Junior High school tonight at 7:45 p. m.

Following the address, officers of the association for the following year will be elected. Special music will be furnished by Miss McKelvey.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH BEING DECORATED

St. Paul's United Evangelical church, South Warren avenue, is being redecorated by the Bryant company. The church is to be finished in lilac-gray and ivory tints with modern architectural designs.

The lighting system is also to be changed. Instead of the chandelier fixtures which are being used at the present time, four semi-indirect lights will be suspended from the ceiling.

There will be Sunday school and morning worship in the basement of the church Sunday, but no service will be held in the evening. The church will be reopened May 27, with Bishop E. S. Woodring present at the reopening service.

Superstitions

A well known English scientist once used himself as the subject for his own experiment. He desired knowledge of what might happen if a human being was shut off in the world from all contact with life. This man went to Patagonia where he cut off all relations with the rest of the world.

Over a long period of time he failed to see a human being or an animal and even the sparse plant life of the land failed to afford inspiration for thought of any kind he later related. Day after day passed and with nothing but skies above and sands below this man passed the time away without a single creative thought. His experiment had proven to him that contact with animal or human life must be necessary for living to be worth while.

ANOTHER ANGLE.

Associations may be good or bad. They may in some cases prove detrimental to the individual. Other experiments have been made to show that humans who have been brought up in the company of animals tend to have animal dispositions.

Possibly several hundred so called clubs of this country could be done away with and never be missed. A club is just as good as its members.

If you fold your money you should fold the bills lengthwise if you would prosper financially. If you fold them short across you will always be "hard up." The basis of this superstition is very easy to come at. It is purely sympathetic magic—like producing like, what is associated in thought is associated in fact. When you fold the bills lengthways the money remains at its greatest length—literally the "long green," not curtailed nor stunted. If you fold the bills across you diminish them in length—apparently cut them in two, curtail them. Folded in one way they represent money extending and folded in the other money cut off. There you have clearly the association of ideas and the association of ideas brings about, by sympathetic magic, the association of actual fact.

The superstition is a folklore primer one but is interesting as showing how the human mind, even without the aid of tradition, unconsciously evolves in terms of sympathetic magic—an example of the persistence of the subconscious primitive in man's mentality.

Insurance companies refuse to underwrite shipping on the Great Lakes after midnight of November thirtieth for the winter season. The chances of a boat's delivering its cargo safely at the time of the winter storms on the Great Lakes is so slight that the owners must take their own chances. The steamer, City of Bangor, loaded with two hundred automobiles, was "driven ashore near Keweenaw Point in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan," says Popular Mechanics. "There she remained where help could not reach her, and slowly she became ice-incased, which was all that saved her from being dashed to pieces." The automobiles were salvaged at great expense; those on the deck, being covered with ice, had to be melted free by steam jets. On another freighter "the steward started forward to bring some food to the owners. Amidships he saw a crack in the vessel—she was breaking in two." All on board were lost except the steward. In icy weather it is not safe to try to go aft, and men have sometimes gone hungry for days because they dared not cross the icy, wave-swept deck to reach the galley.

A new machine for transatlantic flying has been invented in New York. It is called the "aero-ship-plane," and is a combined dirigible, airplane and ocean vessel. It flies at the rate of ninety miles an hour, and travels on water at the speed of an ocean liner. When the weather is too stormy for travel it can be hung with out motion in the air, anchored with the aid of gyroscopes. The plans provide for thirty passengers and a crew of four in one ship.

The fata morgana mirage of the Straits of Messina has recently been photographed by phototelescopic cameras. This mirage, sometimes seen from the Italian shore, is the image of the city of Messina which lies below the horizon on the opposite shore in Sicily, brought to the eye by the refraction of light rays. A warm layer of air above a cool layer causes the light rays to be bent. This city in the sea, appearing and disappearing so mysteriously, was supposed by the ignorant spectators to be the magic home of Morgan le Fay, Sir Arthur's sister. They thought it was on an island which she could sink or raise above the water when she liked, and to which she lured unfortunate sailors who never came back to tell the tale.

A paper sale will be conducted by the Physical Education department on Monday. The proceeds from the papers and magazines collected by pupils in grades will be used in the book fund. Anyone having papers to be collected should call the school.

EXPECT MAIL PLANES JULY 1

Lindbergh May Accept Invitation to Fly First Plane Over New Route.

Air mail planes will begin to land at the new Columbus Airport about July 1, according to announcements made last week. R. P. Cunningham, Cleveland, president of the Continental Air Lines, Inc., visited Columbus last week and made several landings and surveyed the Hilltop field.

He stated that the field was safe for handling the government mail planes here.

Col. Charles Lindbergh has been invited to pilot the first plane over the new mail route.

New air-travel biplanes, with enclosed cock pits for passenger and mail are to be used on the route. It is said that passenger service will not be encouraged at first until the mail transportation has been proven efficient.

The tentative schedule of the mail planes will be to have one plane leaving Louisville at 7 p. m., arriving in Cleveland at 12 midnight. The return trip will be from 2:40 a. m. to 7:30 a. m. The Dayton-Louisville section will be daylight flying.

It is expected that the installation of the lighting will be completed by July 1. The contract will be let by the U. S. Department of Commerce on Friday.

Mr. Cunningham stated that he had originally intended to land the planes at Norton Field but later decided on the new Hilltop field.

Pawnee Indian Here on Sunday

Will Speak and Sing at Evening Service at Hilltop Church of Christ.

Ralph Allen well-known American Indian lecturer will speak at the Hilltop Church of Christ on Sunday evening at 7:30.

Allen is the great grandson of Chief White Eagle of the Pawnee tribe. He posed recently for the statue of the American Indian unveiled last week at the Ohio State Museum. He was selected from a number of Indians to represent the former Ohio Indians.

He formerly attended Denison University and is at present a junior at Ohio State university.

In addition to his talk on Sunday evening he will sing some of his native songs.

Allen celebrated his 23rd birthday on Saturday. On that day he was present at the unveiling of the statue at the museum and gave a program of Indian songs while attired in his native costume which was made by his mother. His headdress consisted of a sacred feather which had belonged to his grandfather. It was claimed the great chieftan was never defeated in battle while wearing the feather.

Worrell Will Occupy New Building Soon

Jean Worrell, real estate broker located at 2382 W. Broad St., will occupy the new building of Fred H. Umbenhauer now under construction on the northwest corner of North Park avenue and West Broad street.

Construction work on the building started early last week.

Mr. Worrell has been specializing in Hilltop properties for the past two years. He has been a resident of the Hilltop for ten years.

Kiddies Attention!

Students Gather Tons of Paper

John Burroughs Student Gathers 8000 Pounds in Clean-up Campaign.

It appears that a new record in gathering papers was set by a student at John Burroughs school last Wednesday and Thursday when the school conducted its annual spring clean-up drive.

John Fry, of the 6A class, brought 8000 pounds of paper to school during the two-day period. The next highest in the contest was William Acord, 6B, who brought 3000 pounds of paper to the school.

During the campaign the school was divided into two teams, the Boosters and the Hustlers. The Boosters were under the direction of Miss Mary Phelan and the Hustlers were directed by Miss Mary Watts. The Boosters won the contest.

The papers will be sold and the money will be used to buy equipment for the new building. The exact number of pounds of paper has not been figured yet.

Members of the kindergarten at John Burroughs have been busy since Easter making paper hats, dresses, aprons and smocks. The hats are made by cutting the bottoms from paper plates and trimming them with crepe paper. Some are made from muslin and gingham sewed with bright colored yarns.

Dr. Weber Improved

Dr. M. K. Weber, 2486 W. Broad St., who has been quite ill the past two weeks is slowly improving.

PROTEST PUMPING STATION ERECTION

The Hilltop Association for Permanent Sewer Relief has arranged for a special call meeting to be held Friday night, May 18, in the Burgess Avenue U. B. church, Burgess and Sullivant avenues, at 8 p. m.

The meeting is for the purpose of protesting the construction of the proposed sanitary sewer construction plan, and the erecting of a temporary pumping station in the alley east of South Park avenue at the intersection of Dartmoor road.

The proposed temporary plan is to pump the sewage through a lateral line into the Sullivant avenue sewer.

The cost of the pumping station is to be assessed against the property adjacent and contiguous to the proposed station.

Have Joint Meeting

Dr. C. H. Lose was chairman of the joint meeting of the St. John's English Lutheran and the Grove City brotherhoods held at Grove City on Monday night.

The Jenkins-Jones Quartet assisted by Walter L. King and Hubbert Jones furnished the music for the meeting.

NEW STORE WILL OPEN SATURDAY

Sons store handling patent medicines, toilet goods, tobaccos and sundries is a new store on the Hilltop and will have a grand opening Saturday, May 19, with special prices good for Saturday and Monday.

The store is located at 2371 West Broad street, one door west of the Hilltop Building and Loan.

OHIO FIRST

Know Ohio League Encourages Exchange Trips Over State.

During this week officials of the Know Ohio league are by means of a scheme of state-wide advertising pointing out to Ohioans the wonders of their own state and encourage them to see Ohio first.

Ohioans of the North will be encouraged to visit the South and those in the South will be encouraged to visit the lakes of the North.

The league urges that the motorists take at least one day of this period to visit a state institution and to better understand where the public money goes.

The greater part of the state institutions are to be found in the central part of the state and for the most part in Columbus.

For people living in Columbus it appears that out-of-town visits to the state institutions would be better than to visit at home. They should not neglect the place of interest here in their own community though.

Art Work on Display By Highland Pupils

Display of work by the pupils of the art department of Highland Junior High is now on exhibit in the art room. The showing includes original studies in black and white, design in color, block prints, pictures in charcoal, water color and oils.

A large number of beautiful lamp shades, in various sizes and a great variety of colors are on exhibition. Parents and friends of the school are invited to visit the art department any time during this week and view the exhibition and see how classes in this department are conducted.

TRAP SHOOTING AT H. T. GROUNDS

The twilight shoot of the Hilltop Gun club held at their traps on Wilson road at West Broad street was well attended and the scores were very good considering the weather.

Mr. Webster was high average with 74 out of 75. Morgan, Webster and Herron each got a "straight" of 25. Following is a list of the shooters and their scores:

Morgan	96 out of 100
Heed	93 out of 100
Thompson	91 out of 100
Groff	80 out of 100
Webster	74 out of 75
Herron	46 out of 50
Hudson	40 out of 50
Walton	38 out of 50
Mellon	37 out of 50
Shrum	36 out of 50
Butler	16 out of 25

The Hilltop Gun club is not operated for profit, just to promote shooting and a more careful knowledge of the use of fire arms. Visitors are always welcome.

Home Vandalized

Alvin Love, 481 Wrexham Ave., reported to police Saturday that the home he is building at 480 Hilltonia Ave., was entered and damaged to the amount of $200. He stated the linseed oil was poured over the floors and down the furnace pipes and varnish was smeared over the walls.

Butler's Bowlers Are H. T. Champs

Defeat Painter's Five at Solbach Alleys Last Friday Evening.

Butler Builders bowling team, winners of the Hilltop league pennant, won the title as Hilltop bowling champions, last Friday evening when they out rolled Painter's Five, winners of the pennant in the Hilltop Business Men's league.

Three games were rolled, total pins to count.

In the first game Butler's rolled 944 while the Painter Five gathered 850. Both teams turned in a lower score for the second game, Butler's winning the game by 18 pins.

In the third game Painter's came back strong and scored 926 pins to Butler's 806.

In the three games Butler's scored 2640 pins while Painter's scored 2588, giving Butler's the championship by 52 pins.

A fine crowd turned out to witness the match.

The Business Men's League banquet will be held Thursday evening, (tonight) at 7:00 at the Hilltop Church of Christ, when awards will be made to the winner in this league.

Celebrate Silver Wedding Anniversary

One of the features of the program will be an operetta entitled "Freshies" given by the Boys' Glee club.

Season tickets for the Redpath Lecture Course of the church may be used for this concert.

Mrs. Jennie McClain, 137 Midland Ave., will be hostess to members of Harmony Club all day Friday.

Rod Wielding Passe—Spyker

Old Method of Child Raising Gives Way to Persuasion P.-T. A. Told.

Wielding of the rod has given way to persuasion in the raising of children. This was pointed out by H. A. Spyker, director of the boys' department at the Y. M. C. A. and director of Camp Wilson, when he spoke at the father and son banquet given by the West Broad Street school Parent-Teacher Association on Friday night at the school auditorium.

Religious attitudes have also changed from those of former time Mr. Spyker stated. Forcing the child into the church breeds hatred for the church in later life. At present the churches are making their work attractive and the child has a desire to go.

In speaking of the present day class distinctions Mr. Spyker advised the parents to do away with it in the home and the children will grow up to have no such prejudices. He believes there is too great a level between the rich and the poor and that the only way to overcome this fault in America is through education.

"Parents should spend at least one evening every week with their children in discussing their problems," he said.

Following the address these officers were elected for the following year: Mrs. M. H. Harrison, president; Miss Harriett Judd, first vice president; R. G. Haunts, second vice president; Mrs. William E. Donehower, secretary, and Mabel Graw, treasurer.

Mrs. S. C. Stewart and Mrs. H. D. Shultz were elected to represent the organization in the Columbus and Franklin County Council.

Youth Killed In Auto That Upsets In Ditch

Stanton Ferrell, 18, of 1605 McKinley Ave., was killed Sunday afternoon when the car in which he was riding plunged into a ditch in Harrison Rd. a few hundred feet north of McKinley avenue.

Arden C. Graves, 122 Hayden Ave., driver of the car told police that a dog had run in front of the car and Ferrell grabbed the steering wheel of the car when he thought the dog was going to be hit. This turned the car aside into the ditch.

Ferrell is survived by his mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. James Johnson, two sisters and a brother. He was buried in Mt. Union cemetery on Tuesday by W. S. Shroyer.

HIGHLAND WINS FROM STARLING

Meet Roosevelt Today; Faculty to Meet Varsity Team on Tuesday.

In a well pitched game the Highland baseball nine went into second place in the Southern league of city junior high schools when they defeated Starling 8-6 on Friday.

Davis, Highland pitcher, allowed but five hits during the game. In the first inning Swisher dropped an easy fly and with three consecutive hits scored three runs.

Highland will meet Roosevelt on Franklin No. 6 for the last game of the season this afternoon. The game promises to be a win for Highland since Roosevelt has lost all four games played this season.

Following is the score by innings in the Highland-Starling tussel:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	R	H	E
Highland	2	0	1	0	1	4	x	8	7	0
Starling	3	0	0	0	1	0	2	6	5	6

Due to the fact that boys on the Highland team could not play on another team until the school season is over the game of the Hilltop Ramblers was moved up to Friday afternoon. The first game in the American Legion Junior tournament will be held at McKinley park. The game scheduled for Wednesday with the Gladden Cubs will be played later.

On Tuesday, May 22, male members of the Highland Junior High school faculty will meet the Highland Varsity team on the state hospital baseball diamond. To date the varsity has won one game and the faculty one.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH BEING DECORATED

St. Paul's United Evangelical church, South Warren avenue, is being redecorated by the Bryant company. The church is to be finished in lilac-gray and ivory tints with modern architectural designs.

The lighting system is also to be changed. Instead of the chandelier fixtures which are being used at the present time, four semi-indirect lights will be suspended from the ceiling.

There will be Sunday school and morning worship in the basement of the church Sunday, but no service will be held in the evening. The church will be reopened May 27, with Bishop E. S. Woodring present at the reopening service.

SUNDAY MARKS CLEAN-UP TIME

Collection Wagons to Make Complete Rounds of City Over Period of 30 Days.

"Clean-up, paint-up and fire prevention work should start at once," was the statement of Loring S. Jones, director of the clean-up and paint-up campaign being sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce from May 20 to June 2. The campaign will officially start Sunday.

Although the city will not be able to put on extra service and collection wagons during the period, Director Duffy announces that the entire city will be covered in thirty days. Advance men will notify all residences 48 hours before the arrival of the collection wagons.

About 30,000 clean-up suggestion blanks and questionnaires will be distributed to the school children of the city through the Fire Prevention committee and J. G. Collicott, school superintendent. Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls are also taking an active part in the campaign.

All rubbish set out in the alleys in the proper containers will be collected by the refuse department. Under a city ordinances such materials as are accumulated in the construction, and repairing of buildings is excluded in the definition of rubbish. Rubbish should be separated from ashes.

Flower planting, painting, decorating and building small improvements around the home are to be included under the campaign. An effort is being made to have every home in the city cleaner by means of this annual drive.

Director Jones states that yards, alleys and streets should be inspected now in order to have all plans made to begin work in the campaign early in the week.

These campaigns are sponsored by cities over the country and have been found to be very sucessful and a great aid in making living conditions better.

WARDROBE IS INCOMPLETE WITHOUT PRINTED DRESS

No doubt you have already bought a printed dress for early summer wear. If you have not, do not forget that he wardrobe without one this summer s incomplete.

There is nothing quite so serviceable as a nice printed dress for summertime wear. They can be worn early and ate and are equally as good on the warm day downtown as they are on a cool day. In a print one can feel well dressed for the day, whether shopping in the morning or at a matinee or a tea in the afternoon.

Then too, for the person who likes some particular color but cannot wear them, they are especially attractive because with the riot of colors in which they are made, your favorite color can be found and worn because of the other colors. If you are conservative and do not like things too loud, you will find subdued colors. There is a print for every type of person.

Some of these prints are in Indian patterns, others are scenes of historical places. One print that was rather striking had a dark blue background with a view of the Grand Canyon in vivid colors. Another print seemed to hark back to the garden of Eden or at least to some tropical clime because of the abundance of fruit. The wearer might well be afraid of hungry wolves.

To get the full benefit of these prints they must be simply made so that there will be no detraction from their own beauty which lies in the coloring and the patterning.

Salad Dressing

2 tablespoons butter,
1 tablespoon flour,
2 heaping teaspoons of sugar,
¼ cup vinegar,
¼ cup water,
Salt
1 egg.

Melt butter remove from fire and add butter, stirring until it makes a smoot paste, add vinegar and water and return to fire. When mixture thickens remove from fire and add the well-beaten egg. It may be returned to the fire for a few minutes or not just as desired when ready to serve thin with milk.

Waffles

1 ½ cups flour,
2 teaspoons baking powder,
½ teaspoon salt,
4 tablespoons melted butter,
1 cup milk,
2 eggs.

Mix dry ingredients and add milk slowly, stirring well to prevent lumps. Add melted butter and beaten eggs.

Tomato Jelly

Cup tomato juice,
1 slice onion,
1 stalk celery,
¼ bay leaf,
1 clove,
1 teaspoon gelatin soaked in 2 tablespoons cold water,
¼ teaspoon sugar,
Salt,
Paprika.

Simmer tomato juice and seasoning for five minutes. Add soaked gelatin to the hot tomato juice. Strain and pour into molds to set. Serve on a lettuce leaf with a salad dressing.

Boiled Icing

1 cup sugar,
1-3 cup water,
⅛ teaspoon cream tartar,
White of 1 egg,
Flavoring.

Cook sugar, cream tartar and water together until syrup will thread. Pour in a fine stream into well beaten egg white, beating until smooth and thick enough to spread upon the cake. Flavor and pour over the cake spreading with a spatula or knife.

HILLTOP AIRPORT

Columbus is to realize the ambition of every large city of any importance during this age. We have a commercial airport and government airmail is to land here. And getting a little closer to home we have the airport right here on the Hilltop.

What does the airport mean to the Hilltop?

For one thing it means that some employment will be offered and the possibilities are that they will make their homes on the Hilltop. It will also center interest in this section of the city and draw many people here as visitors and onlookers.

To the business man this will mean increased sales. To the individual it will eventually mean increased property value. To the community it will mean greater prosperity in general.

WHAT'S THE COST OF CLEANLINESS

May 20 to June 2 has been set aside as clean up, paint up and fire prevention week in Columbus. The efforts of hundreds of local business men, civic workers, school children, boy scouts and camp fire girls will be centered in this campaign during the next two weeks.

The object of it all is to make Columbus a better place in which to live.

Cleanliness doesn't cost very much when it is a habit. But to the person who suddenly decides he will "clean up things" it may be found to be a very discouraging ordeal. This being true it has been found profitable to have cleanliness as a habit rather than a trial and error experiment.

The city departments have given their co-operation in the past during these cleanup drives and promise to do so again.

Every particle of trash and dirt around the home should be destroyed during this campaign. Breeding places for disease, rats and insects should be eliminated. Those back yards and vacant lots that have looked so frightful all winter should be relieved of their burden. Such trash placed in the alley will be cleaned up by the trash collectors with no cost to you. And a little paint applied to the bare spots on the out buildings and fences as well as the house will make the living conditions of your community more pleasant.

Clean up and paint up.

Spring Effects Joe Who Thinks He Has Found "THE" Girl

Dear Folks:

They say highways are happy ways when they lead the way to home, so I'm for finding out. I'm going to take to the old collegiate thumb route Friday afternoon and expect to be home in time to eat if all my rides are on time.

I'll assure you I won't accept any rides with half-witted drivers or farmers with Fords as I did on the last trip. They are too slow. Me for the high-powered buggies. They go farther and faster.

Well this has been a pretty good week. The odds have been for us and against us at different times. State has won two games in the past week and dropped one. In tennis she has been successful as usual but when it comes to meeting Michigan in a track meet it is a different story. Michigan is a regular hard-luck story.

Well I have two more years in this institution of so-called learning yet and I hope I may be so fortunate as to witness one game of some kind in which O. S. U. comes out on top of Michigan. Just because they raise big potatoes up there is no reason why our corn fed boys can't give them a scare sometime.

But speaking of potatoes, I think it must be sweet potatoes we have here in Ohio. You should see the sweet little co-ed I have going my way now. I tried a complete new line on her and before I got through I had myself believing I was in love with her and I haven't been able to get over it yet. She isn't just a blonde that anyone can fall for. She is a determined brunette. And I'm a little determined myself now that I've met her.

Don't get excited as per usual and make a trip down here to see that I don't take things too serious because it won't do any good. You see I am determined. You may wonder how I'm going to support her. Well they say two can live as cheap as one so why won't it be as easy for you to send two through school as cheap as one?

Now I'm not kidding folks. I've studied this thing all out and my conclusions are that I am the one to give myself advice. I'm not at all egotistic but I have confidence in myself. I am able to realize that when I have the right girl it's high time I keep her. She is having a wonderful influence over me. Instead of spending my money recklessly on all the girls I meet, I'm giving her my spare time in the evenings. We generally take in a show or a dance.

Now rest assured folks that she is the girl after my own heart. I'll give you the lowdown on her when I write again if Josephine doesn't beat me to it.

Many happy dreams of your expected daughter-in-law,

Joe.

SWEET REVENGE

By MRS. E. O. CARLSTON

(Copyright)

"Don't do that, Dora," Margaret said. "If the four of us can keep together without further trouble being added to the misunderstanding now existing, the entire affair may right itself yet."

The next Saturday evening brought the male members of the mixup to the Wentworth home again. Walter chanced to arrive first, and finding Margaret alone in the living room, decided to have a talk with her. He seated himself beside her.

"What have I done to offend you, Margaret," he asked. "Why do you prefer Leonard's company to mine?"

"I did not consider it wrong or improper to allow him to bring me home the other evening, and his attentions Thursday night were forced on me against my will."

"What is his object? He is not in the habit of being so ungentlemanly," Walter said.

"Promise me that you will not tell," Margaret requested in a whisper.

"Certainly, I promise."

"I think he wants to make Dora jealous," Margaret explained briefly. "I cannot give you the reason without involving other people's secrets."

"I understand now, dear," he said, in a low tone. "But we must not allow this affair to come between us. Do you know how much it grieved me to see you with him the other night. Jealousy is a fault, but it proves that I have a certain regard for you, Margaret. I love you. Don't you care for me just a little?" he questioned anxiously.

"No, not just a little, Walter," she answered, "but a great deal."

"My darling!" was all he had time to say, but his look expressed much more. Leonard was demanding admittance at the front entrance.

"I will go to the door this time," Walter announced.

After Leonard was seated, and Dora entered the room, Walter excused himself saying he was going back to his home for a few minutes, but would return shortly.

After he had gone, an awkward silence ensued, which Margaret attempted to break with a remark about the weather. Finally, she branched off to the topic of conversation, and skillfully drew Dora and Leonard into the discussion. Presently Margaret chanced to look out the front window, and saw a brand new sedan stop in front of the home. A young man stepped out, it was Walter Moreland, who entered the house and announced that they were all going for a ride. He assisted Margaret into the front seat beside the driver's place, and the other couple occupy the back seat.

"I believe you two would prefer being alone this evening," Leonard said. "I thank you kindly for the invitation, but my roadster looks lonesome back there."

Walter laughed.

"I see your object, old man. Good luck!" He and Margaret were soon out of sight.

"Where would you like to go?" Leonard asked the girl beside him.

"I do not care to go any place unless you promise to drive more carefully than you did the other night," she answered.

"I promise, on one condition," he said.

"And what is that?"

"That you play no more tricks on me."

"Maybe not."

"I want a positive answer."

"All right, then, I will not."

They drove to the same spot where he had made his last attempt at love making, and again stopped the machine.

"Dora, I think I have reasoned out his tangled up affair. You vowed vengeance on me for my supposed disloyalty to Margaret, and while seeking to win my affection, only to trample it under your feet in the end, you fell in love with me. How about it, little girl?"

"You are suggesting a humiliating confession."

"I think not. If you really love me, you should be proud to say so instead of being humiliated by the confession."

His arm stole around her.

"Tell me the truth, little sweetheart. I love you; I want you. Do you care for me?"

"Yes, Leonard; and I hope you will forgive me for my actions of the past."

"I certainly will, dear. That was a queer foundation for a great love, but our present happiness is a result of your plan to get revenge against anyone who would be guilty of causing your sister disappointment, which proves that you are not selfish."

"Thank you for being so generous in your opinion of me. It is nice to be friends again."

"Indeed it is, darling," he said, affectionately. "Let us forget that we ever had a disagreement, and be glad that all is well that ends well."

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

UNIONS

Truly, "In union there is strength." And it is this same principle, old as the ages, that started the first union, the medieval gild, as it was called, from "gild" meaning payment.

It is a travesty that the original "unions" were not organizations of "labor," but of employers. They were boards of trades formed by the proprietors of the industries of each town, for protection against "foreign" competition. The rules of the gild against trading with "foreigners" except under certain conditions preserved for the trade men of each town a monopoly of local business. Capitalists! The authority of the gilds in the regulation of trade was greater even than that enjoyed by the town governments.

With the development of industry the general merchant gild was superseded by the craft gilds—individual organizations for every trade or industry in the town. As the merchant gild had regulated the trade of the town in general the craft gild supervised its own trade or occupation.

So powerful were these craft gilds that it was impossible for a man to carry on business without subjecting himself to the rules of his gild.

The gilds controlled a man's standing in his trade. Every worker had to serve for seven years as an apprentice without pay, when he became a "journeyman." This word was taken from the French "journee," which means day. For the men were employed and paid by the day. When a journeyman had saved enough money to open his own little shop he became a "master" tradesman. And here again we have capitalism in the trade unions, for only masters could become full-fledged members of the craft gild! But we learn that the proprietors and their employees worked in harmonious accord, without partisan interests, for the good of their craft. The millenium was here—about 500 years ago!

The Spectator

DRESSING THE WORLD.

Like the after dinner speaker we start our little speech off with a story but may help to keep our readers in a correct frame of mind.

Two husband and the wife were preparing to leave for the dinner party when the hubby looked down at his comfily clad wife with the low cut evening dress. "Haven't you forgotten something?" he asked in hopes of conveying his desire that she change her outfit.

"Oh yes, my ear rings," was her reply.

And so it goes that people have different ideas as to the proper dress. But so far the world has been in the habit of dressing up some way and regardless of some careless predictions we are of the belief that there will continue to be a demand for clothing.

STYLES.

One of the biggest problems of the day is "what is the style" rather than "what is the cost." Paris says what shall be worn and the poor working girl and the tired little gold digger work a little harder and dig a little deeper in order to keep up with fashionable Paris.

And if the thing is in style it is generally worn. Even if the animals do have their heaviest coats of fur in the winter time and shed in summer is no reason why the sweet young thing should not don her fur neck piece in the middle of August and stroll down the board walk of Atlantic City if it is style to do so.

After all there may be something to this style question. If it affords satisfaction and happiness to the women to wear a two-ounce frock on Easter morn just after a snowstorm we are in favor of sanctioning her mode of dress. She will surely have sense enough to come in out of the cold.

HATS AND SHOES.

Clothes make the man we have heard it said, but women are to be included under the statement too. Pretty feathers make pretty birds must have been meant for them.

With the chic little blue bonnet or whatnot color that may be suggested and shoes to match the modern girls appear on the scene like flashing bill boards.

With the advertising idea in mind we are reminded that all advertising costs moneys and likewise the girl to attract attention by dressing like a house on fire must pay for her billboard styles. But what is it to deprive yourself of an extra noon day sandwich or let breakfast go by on a cup of coffee in order to buy that pair of shoes made out of alligator's hips that Paris is raving so about.

MEN TOO.

"Dress well and succeed" is the challenge to the man in the business world today. And so to the clothing house he flocks with the others in his tribe and next morning appears before the boss in expectation of a raise in salary.

And as to men's styles we are here to say they are somewhat flexible too. Collegiate clothes and fancy colored B. V. D's are evidence of this.

THE CONSEQUENCE.

The result is that the well dressed man continues to succeed and he is attracted to the fashionable lady and in the end a happy marriage results. Very pretty picture you may say.

But we have the conclusion before us that changes in styles are good and a desire to dress is commendable. The fact that everyone wishes to be attractive therefore gives rise to a great industry.

And even if the women of today are through with the long skirt and the high necked waist the world is happy that they have found a more comfortable fashion. And if Paris can take bigger strides in that direction for men and women we say "More power to Paris."

FOR MEDITATION

TAKING A CHANCE

For several miles the automobile endeavored to pass but every effort proved impossible. The car, ahead, keeping the middle of the road, blocked the way. In sheer desperation an attempt to pass was made but the shoulders of the road were loose and down went the car into the ditch. It was a costly risk. The automobile was damaged, but no loss to human life. A narrow escape!

The driver took a chance. In a calmer mood he might not have taken the risk. The hazards of speed play havoc with one's judgment. A damaged automobile can be easily repaired, but social and economic conditions resulting from mistaken judgment are not so easily arjusted. A foolhardy risk is likely to result in a disaster.

We are living in a 60-mile-an-hour age. Judgment is frequently sacrificed to speed. In order to procure results quickly we take chances unwarranted by either wisdom or common sense. The average man is likely to trust too much to luck.

There is an important difference between taking a gambler's chance and an investor's calm precaution. If one can afford to lose, the former may be justified; but the latter is the wiser plan if the investment of either money time or energy must needs declare a dividend.

Be sure that the "aim" on your gun is properly set before you fire.

When convinced that you are right, without a reasonable doubt, then go ahead. The sacrifice of judgment to speed is folly.

Ohio State university has the largest R. O. T. C. unit in the country says a newspaper announcement one day last week. In fact the enrollment has reached the 3700 mark. A small army within itself. A few days later a headline read "Forced Drill Hit." If the students themselves had any say in the matter the number would perhaps be cut down to less than 700. And in the end the efficiency and quality of the 700 would surpass the present enrollment. There can be but little efficiency and interest in compulsory matters among the American people. They just aren't built that way.

Unification of religion seems to be one of the big steps in church circles. A statistical record of all the religions of the world today would reveal what might be considered to be a great number too many. The fact that so many of them are only different in name is reason enough for a consolidation. There may possibly be more strength in union than in the divided number.

We have heard of an inventor who carried his moonshine in a hollow bumper of his car. This is a better place for it than in the driver. But in either case it is generally in the bumper.

A few weeks ago we were a little peeved at the rainy weather but it won't be long now till we will be reciting pretty poems of "spatter little rain drops."

Speaking of rain reminds us that the picnic season has arrived again.

Lace Frock Is First Choice For Dressy Afternoon Wear

Everybody with eyes to see and ears to hear, who moves in fashion's circle, cannot help but become lace conscious this season, for lace is everywhere in the mode and among those who create "clothes beautiful" lace is a chief subject of conversation.

Lace is being used in ways not usually associated with lace. For instance, entire ensembles are being made of lace. Not only is the ensemble of beige, gray or black lace in smart fashion, but those in lovely pastel tints are equally so. A lace ensemble all in peach or flesh color is one of the delights presented on the style program for this summer. Soft green, too, is a favorite shade for the lace gown.

There is no doubt about it, if one is casting about in search of that which is newest and most prettily toned to dressy afternoon wear, no happier selection can be made than that of lace.

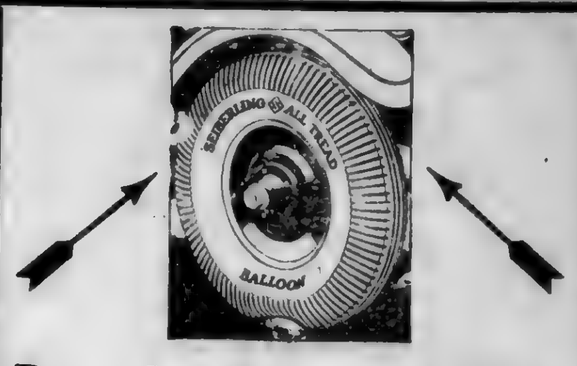
Fetching models are being highlighted in the mode, which top a finely plaited skirt with a daintily belted or draped blouse. In either event, belt or drape, a glittering crystal or rhinestone buckle or ornament almost invariably enters into the scheme of things. A shoulder pin to match completes the picture.

Very differently styled and emphasizing the so highly regarded feminine note, are the one-piece frocks of lace which abound in myriads of fluttering panels, jabot drapes, uneven hemlines and such. Usually all the edges of the lace are picoted, for hem and bindings are avoided as far as possible, as in to in nowise take away from the appearance of extreme daintiness.

Another favorite, and one showing entirely new styling trends, is the all-over lace gown made a la princess just such as Dorothy Gulliver, of screenland fame, wears so prettily in this picture. More and more, late silhouettes are suggesting princess and fitted-to-the-figure lines. We see this even in cloth tailor made suits which flit at a waistline as yet somewhat ugly, indicating nevertheless a trend of thought.

Not only will lace feature for dress and the separate blouse, but lace trimmed hats are numerous among millinery collections.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.



When you buy a hat, you want the best for the money. Our hats cannot be matched at the same price anywhere in the city. Burnside's Millinery Store, 2427 W. Broad St.

Not long ago we read a poem in a magazine with the title "Written On a Street Car." But you have the wrong impression when you think it started thus "a seat, a seat, my kingdom for a seat."

HIGHLAND 9A PLAY FRIDAY

9A Play to Be Held in West Broad Street School Auditorium.

"Fanny and the Servant Problem," the 9A play at Highland which is to be presented at the West Broad Street school auditorium Friday, May 25, at 8:00, has the following cast:

Lady Bantock ..... Mary Allison
Lord Bantock ..... Joe Hutchison
The Misses Wetherell ..... Corinne Miller, Virginia Miller
Bennett ..... Annette Holsbache
Jane Bennett ..... Ethel Kelly
Rosaria Bennett ..... Olive Grimm
Ernest Bennett ..... Robert Tharp
Dr. Freemantle ..... Robert Nicoals
George P. Newte ..... James Richards

This cast, which is being coached by Miss Velma Moss, dramatic coach, has been hard at work for several weeks and are prepared to present a pleasing production to the public Friday night.

The play is the story of a charming young actress who marrying a young Englishman, discovers after her marriage that he is a lord, and she is mistress of a home with 28 servants, every one of which is a near relation of her own. Her troubles and various ups and downs are well handled by Miss Mary Esther Allison who has the title role. She is well supported by Joseph Hutchison, as leading man, who turns out to be Lord Bantock. The rest of the cast also are putting their best abilities into this play.

The Highland orchestra will present several numbers between acts.

Youths Succumb to Wanderlust But Police End Thumbing Trip

Richer for the experience but with a springtime wanderlust satisfied two Hilltop boys were returned to their homes on Monday evening after a "thumbing trip" from Columbus to Wheeling, W. Va.

David Theodore Butler, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh S. Butler, 501 S. Hoys Ave., and Raymond Price, 13, of 668 S. Harris Ave., decided to take the above trip and so left on Saturday morning loaded down with a straw suitcase, four pounds of bananas and a small amount of money.

Police here were notified of their departure and so warned other city forces.

Two small boys with a suitcase and we presume no bananas or money hardly appear as prosperous tourists in a medium sized city and so the authorities at Wheeling took them to juvenile headquarters and cared for them until the arrival of their parents.

Young Butler, with a desire to keep his mother from worrying wrote the following note to her assuring her there would be no worry:

Dear Mother:

"I just had to run away. I hate to leave you, Lady (his dog) and dad We will be back soon. Your loving son, David Theodore Butler."

In a postscript he added that he didn't want his mother to worry and he also sent 5000 kisses for her.

It was at first thought the boys had gone to Zanesville where they have relatives.

Hilltop Pastors to Go to China

Rev. Carson and Vercia P. Cox Resign as Pastors of Highland Ave. Friends Church.

Rev. Carson and Vercia P. Cox, who have served as pastors of the Highland Avenue Friends church for the past year, have resigned their pastorate and are preparing to return to their work in China this fall. Next Sunday, May 27, will be their last service in the Highland Avenue church.

They will spend the summer months with relatives and friends in Kansas and California, and will then take up their work in China.

Rev. Walter R. Williams of Unionville Center, Ohio, will serve the church during the summer months. He has been engaged in school work for many years in both America and China, and for the past year has been superintendent of the Darby rural schools and of the high school at Unionville Center.

Troop 21 Entertains Fathers at Banquet

Troop 21, Boy Scouts, entertained their fathers at their annual father and son banquet held at Hoge Memorial church on Friday night. About 15 fathers were present.

Scoutmaster R. C. Kadel urged the fathers to attend the hikes of the troop and also stressed the need of co-operation between father and son.

Several games were played and the Scouts exhibited parts of their scouting work to their fathers.

Several fathers accompanied the troop on their hike on Sunday afternoon to Camp Ra-Fre-La.

Mrs. Walter Farber, 342 S. Harris Ave., assisted by Mrs. Joe Westerman and Mrs. R. Reed gave a shower May 16 at 8 o'clock for Mrs. Iona Kridline, who was recently married. It was a complete surprise and the gifts brought were beautiful and gladly received.

DOG POISONING DANGER TO BABY

Poison Thrown Into Yard Where Small Baby Plays.

Dog poisoning in Midland avenue and vicinity continued to hold away Sunday afternoon. Mrs. F. H. Ryan, 166 Midland Ave., reports that someone threw dog poison into her yard and their collie dog died about fifteen minutes later. The Ryans had had the dog for the past six years.

The worst part of the whole affair appears that the poisoning may end up in tragedy. Mrs. Ryan states that her 18-month-old baby plays in the yard. Such work on the part of those desiring to be rid of the dogs may prove fatal to human life.

There have been about seven dogs in the neighborhood poisoned during the past three weeks.

Highland Second in South League

Defeated Roosevelt but Fall Before Barrett in Championship Game.

Highland Junior High school won second place in the Southern Division of the city junior high baseball league on Thursday afternoon when they defeated Roosevelt 2-1. Davis added nine to his strike-out list, bringing his total to 46 for 35 innings.

Barrett won the championship, however, when they met Highland on Monday afternoon at Sunshine Park and took them into camp by the score of 8-2. Highland was successful in getting eight men to first base but failed to bring them in.

The following program has been prepared for the Highland athletic carnival to be held at the Glenwood Shelter house on Tuesday evening.

Marching Drill—Eighth grade girls.
Song and Dance—Harold Johnson and Arelie Ferguson.
Folk Dance—7B girls.
South End Minstrels—Julius Baker & Co.
Rhythmic Exercises—Eighth grade girls.
Horizontal Bars—Boys.
Several other features are planned for the carnival.

Mr. and Mrs. Maynard G. Brobeck, 1993 Fairmont Ave., and Miss Nellie M. Taylor, 104 S. Richardson Ave., accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Taylor, Norwood, Ohio, motored to Louisville, Kentucky, Friday, May 19, where they attended the Kentucky Derby.

The regular monthly meeting of the 11th Ward Republican club will be held Monday evening, May 28, at Hillcrest church. Pot-luck dinner will be served at 6:30 and an interesting program is assured.

Deems to Attend S. S. Convention

Hoge Memorial Sunday School Sends Delegate to Los Angeles Meeting.

A trip to Los Angeles to the World Sunday School Convention to be held there on July 11-18 was voted to H. G. Deems, 32 N. Hoys Ave., by the Sunday school of Hoge Memorial church on Sunday morning.

Mr. Deems has been superintendent of the Sunday school for eleven years. The trip comes as a reward for his services during this period in building up the Sunday school.

Delegates from all denominations and from all parts of the world will be present at the convention. Speakers of international fame will address the meetings. Individual conference groups will also be a feature of the meeting. Problems pertaining to Sunday school work will be discussed.

Mrs. Deems and son Ralph, aged 8, will probably accompany Mr. Deems on the trip. They will leave Columbus about July 4 and return in three weeks.

BISHOP WOODRING AT RE-OPENING OF ST. PAUL'S SUNDAY

Special services will mark the use of the re-decorated auditorium of St. Paul's United Evangelical church, South Warren avenue, Sunday, May 27. Bishop E. S. Woodring will be present and deliver the address Sunday morning and evening. Bishop Woodring comes from the East Pennsylvania conference which has just convened at Mohnton, Pa.

Redecoration of the auditorium has been carried out in strictly classical lines. The details are in modern architectural designs which harmonize with the color scheme. The fresco work around the border is finished in various colors and the whole has a very pleasing effect.

The ceiling is panelled into three divisions, each panel being decorated with a border of brown, red and green. The color scheme is distinctive: warm lilac gray on the walls blending into ivory tones in the panels of the ceiling, while the interior woodwork has been finished in dull varnish.

The lighting system has been changed; four semi-indirect lights hang from the ceiling, one in the vestibule and another beneath the balcony, while two lantern fixtures have been placed outside the main entrance. The church will be opened all day Sunday for inspection, and the public is cordially invited to be present.

BOOK PROBLEM IS UNSETTLED

City Library Board Gives No Reply as to Acceptance of Holmes Collection.

As the date for the closing of the Holmes Hilltop Library draws closer, no definite arrangements have been made as to the disposal of the books in the present library.

The board of trustees of the Holmes library has offered the books of that organization to be used by the city library in the new branch library located at Hague avenue and West Broad street.

Such an agreement would be with the understanding that none of the Holmes collection would be transferred to other branch libraries or the main library as is planned with other books of branches.

The city board has not given a reply to the proposal submitted by the Hilltop board of trustees.

The following new books have been placed on the shelves of the Holmes library:

The Sun Hawk—Chambers.
Shanghai Jim—Packard.
The Lone Hand—Bindloss.
The Darkest Spot—Thayer.
The Changing Road—MacGrath.
Kitty—Deeping.
Flambeau Jim—Spearman.
The Case of Sherlock Holmes—Doyle.
A Happy School Year—Dalgliesh.
True Bear Stories—Miller.
The Bunny and Bear Book—Smith.
The Billy Bang Book—La Rue.

Trap Shooting

The largest attendance of the season, to date, was noted at Tuesday evening's "shoot." A large number of visitors were present. Mr. Deem of Divide, Montana, and Mr. Harker, of St. Paul, Minn., showed that they were capable of getting a bag of grouse or ducks any time.

The only "25 straight" of the evening was broken by Mr. Pace. Come out and get acquainted with your neighbor shooters.

The members of Robert Morris Social club will entertain their husbands with an indoor picnic at Westgate Temple on Tuesday, May 29. A pot-luck dinner will be served at 6:30 followed by a talk by Mrs. Maude Murry Miller and a play. Hostesses for the evening are Mrs. H. W. Lowery, Mrs. Fred Hutson, Mrs. Seymour Hughes, Mrs. H. T. Mider, Mrs. A. H. Budd, Mrs. Edward Patzer, Mrs. M. J. Bell, Mrs. T. S. Fox, Mrs. F. C. Michaels, Mrs. H. S. Willberger and Mrs. George Young. Mrs. C. E. Price and Mrs. Elroy Drye have charge of the entertainment for the evening.

Hilltop Boy Is Marble Champ; Will Go to Atlantic City Meet

More fame for the Hilltop.

This time the famous character happens to be the marble champion of Columbus. Paul Gildersleeve, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gildersleeve, 252 S. Harris Ave., is the winner of the city championship in the Othon Sixth Annual Marble Tournament held at the State House grounds Saturday afternoon.

Paul is a student at Highland Junior High school and was given a royal reception by his classmates there on Monday morning.

He will represent Columbus in the finals at Atlantic City during the week of June 24. He will have all expenses paid on the trip and will enjoy all the amusements of the big sea side city during the week. On his way over he will stop at Philadelphia and Valley Forge.

He states that he practiced at home for four weeks after school. And so far as expensive marbles go he doesn't believe the high powered ones are so keen because the winner was successful in the finals with a one cent glassie.

The new champ went into the finals on Saturday against Oscar Leach, three times winner of the Glenwood district, and Marion Stine of Goodale Park.

Gildersleeve also won a silver loving cup as permanent trophy. On Saturday the champ will be a guest of honor at the inter-city marble tournament at the coliseum when champions of 30 Ohio cities will meet.

NEW CIVIC BODY ORGANIZED HERE

Broadview Property Owners to Discuss Improvements.

A new civic body for the purpose of bringing about improvements in Broadview addition was organized on May 14 at the home of Carl Goren, Crescent Drive. There were about 20 residents of the community present when the Broadview Civic Association was organized.

Officers elected are as follows: Dr. I. B. Hamblin, president; Ralph Jacobs, vice president; A. F. Elliott, secretary, and Carl Goren, treasurer.

A meeting of all the property owners of that section will be called for the near future at which time plans will be discussed for the care of the parks and the completion of the sidewalks. The exact date for the meeting will be announced in the Hilltop Record.

Clean-up Drive Gets Good Start

Hilltop Visited by Rubbish Collectors; Campaign to Continue to June 2.

Rubbish collection in the city started on Monday in connection with the clean-up, paint-up and fire prevention campaign being sponsored over the city. The Hilltop was among the first sections visited.

A warning was loaned to those homes visited by the collectors 48 hours in advance.

Residents are urged to keep their rubbish on the curbs until they receive the cards announcing the arrival of the collectors. Otherwise there is danger of the trash being scattered over the streets or upset on the lawns.

The campaign was officially endorsed by Mayor Thomas on Monday. He states that much may be accomplished in beautifying Columbus through the co-operation of the citizens in this campaign.

During the remainder of this week and next Hilltop residents are urged to make a thorough cleanup of their homes, garages, lawns and streets.

Dusty Miller to Be Here Tuesday

Prelude of Music Will Precede Address at Hillcrest Baptist Church.

Dusty Miller, nationally known philosopher and humorist will give an address at Hillcrest Baptist church Tuesday evening, May 29, at 8:15, using as his subject "A Daily Dozen."

Mr. Miller is a nationally known character and has entertained audiences all over the United States and his address Tuesday evening promises to be a rare treat for those who hear him. He hails from Wilmington, Ohio, and is president of the Daily News-Journal of that place.

As a prelude to Mr. Miller's address there will be a forty-five minute program of music, vocal and instrumental and the vocal parts being taken care of from talent taken from the Young Married People's Bible class who in conjunction with the Men's Bible class are sponsoring the occasion.

Formal Opening of Jacques Furniture Co.

In celebration of their removal into their handsome new quarters at 665-667 W. Broad St., the Jacques Furniture Co., announces their formal opening for today and this evening.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to inspect their new store at this time.

Decorate Church

While decorating is being completed in the main auditorium of the Hoge Memorial church the Sunday school of the adult departments and the church services will be held in the gymnasium, Rev. H. C. Hutchison announced Sunday.

The work will probably continue for the next two weeks. Bryant Brothers, Columbus decorators, have the job.

PLAY SUCCESS

Over 300 in Production at West Broad Street School.

Over 300 were present at the evening performance of the entertainment given by students at West Broad Street school on Friday night. A full house was also present during the afternoon.

"We have never given an entertainment in which the students responded so well as they did in this one," was the statement of Miss Harriet Judd, principal. There were about 300 in the cast including the chorus.

The money from the entertainment will be used to buy books, new records, shrubbery, flower boxes and vases, and other equipment needed about the school.

The beautification committee will visit West Broad school on Monday and Tuesday to determine what class the school will be in this year. In the past few years the school has stood high in comparison with others of the city.

Hoge Memorial Team Wins Bowling Title

Hoge Memorial church won the bowling championship of the West Church League on Monday night when they won three games from Burgess U. C. The race was very close throughout the season. St. Aloysius winning second place only one game behind the leaders.

The Church League banquet will be held at Burgess Ave. U. B. church on Monday night at 7:30 o'clock. The trophy for the winning team and the individual medals will be presented at that time. Several good speakers are on the program and entertainment by local junior artists.

When he received a cut on the left leg in an auto accident claims Leon Everingham, 2542 Steele Ave., it affected his baseball playing. And so he filed suit against Benner Bros. Garage, 1360 W. Broad St., asking $75,000 damages.

FURNITURE CO. TAKES BIG ADS

Two and Half Pages of Record Used to Tell of Special Furniture Sale.

A new record for the Record!

That's what is happening with the appearance of this issue of the Hilltop Record. The largest amount of advertising from a single firm in the eleven years existence of the Record is that of the Hilltop Furniture Co. found in this issue. Two and one half pages telling of the bargains they have to offer the people of the Hilltop goes to demonstrate their faith in Record advertising.

During the past year the Hilltop Furniture Co. has used the pages of the Record as their main advertising medium.

In the two and one half pages are found many furniture bargains in the special purchase and factory demonstration sale and the festival for the June bride.

Messrs. DeWitt Hicks and Rex Rosefield, proprietors of the Hilltop Furniture Co., are making special efforts to make the festival for the June bride one of real worth. They are offering their personal services and suggestions in furnishing the home of newly weds.

The sale will begin Friday. The store will be open every evening.

Give Program

The dramatization of "Taper Tom and the Princess" was given by the 1A grade at John Burroughs school on Friday in assembly. It was under the direction of Mrs. Strassheim.

The principal parts were taken by Dorothy Allen and Billie Cohen.

"My Doll" was sung by Helen Lane and Betty Grace Knisely.

RECEIVE INJURIES IN AUTO CRASHES

Frank Jones, 34, 624 S. Harris Ave., was cut about the face on Sunday when the taxicab in which he was riding crashed into a telephone pole in front of 1290 W. Broad S. He was attended at Grant hospital. The driver of the cab stated that he fell asleep at the wheel.

Martha Robinson, 19, 408½ S. Hague Ave., received cuts on the legs on Saturday night when the auto in which she rode with Mervin Nentael, 398 S. Ogden Ave., collided with the auto driven by Charles Grammon, 1206 W. State St., at West Broad street and Oakley avenue.

Ford Afire

When the floor board of the Ford car which he was driving fell onto the exhaust pipe and ignited Wayne Paullin, 160 S. Burgess Ave., made headway for the nearest store on Broad street and extinguished the blaze in short order with three buckets of water. When the fire department arrived the flame was dead.

Named Elegible

Benjamin Bennett, 617 S. Ogden Ave., was among the four named on Monday as elegibles for the vacancies in the police department. The names were requested by Safety Director McCune from the municipal civil service commission. Bennett was among the four highest.

HOW I MAKE

By Readers of the Hilltop Record

Vanilla Caramels

2 cups sugar,
½ cup milk,
1¾ cups corn syrup,
½ cup butter,
Vanilla,
Chopped nuts.

Cook sugar, milk, corn syrup and butter, stirring constantly until it will form a firm ball in water, remove from fire and add nuts. Pour into a grease pan. When cool cut into squares.

Coconut Biscuits

2 cups coconut,
½ cup corn syrup,
½ cup sugar,
½ cup flour,
White of one egg.

Beat the egg white until stiff. Fold in the sugar, flour, corn syrup and coconut. Drop on a baking sheet and bake in a moderately hot oven for 15 minutes.

Caramel Custard

4 cups scalded milk,
3 eggs,
½ teaspoon salt,
1 teaspoon vanilla,
½ cup sugar.

Put sugar in omelet pan, stirring constantly over hot part of range until melted to a syrup of light brown color. Add gradually to milk, being careful that milk does not bubble up and go over, as is liable on account of the high temperature of sugar. As soon as sugar is melted in milk, add mixture gradually to eggs slightly beaten, add salt and flavoring, then strain in buttered mould. Bake as custard. Chill and serve.

Finely Styled Fine Wash Fabrics Are Ultra-Chic This Season

What a change from the then to the now of washable weaves. Time was when the washgoods season meant headquarters for the humble, workaday materials—a department in distinct contrast to that devoted to the display of the more formal silks, satins and other esthetic textures.

Witness the evolution of the simple cottons and tub materials of yore. They are that finely textured and marvelously processed these days one finds it difficult to classify them. It is indeed bewildering to stroll through a "washgoods" section as now is. Were it not for the reassuring placards and signs about 'twould seem as if one had inadvertently wandered into the departmentof exotlier silks and formal weaves. There is that exquisiteness about the modern sheer cotton prints, silky washable broadcloths, fine organdies and transparent voiles, likewise the new rayon novelties which belie their origin. If they are not really and truly silk and all that, some of them are quite baffling, for they sure look the part. Besides, they have the added advantage of being reasonable in price and they wash! Do not forget that.

Not only are the new cottons and rayons meeting favor in the eyes of the haute couture but the woman who does her own sewing is finding infinite inspiration in the beauty and superiority of the new weaves. There's the attractive frock in this picture, for instance. It is made after a very simple, yet exceedingly modish pattern, one easy to obtain at your neighborhood store. The material is a handsome, washable silk and cotton fabric mixture, which lends itself charmingly to afternoon wear. Of course it is a flowery print, for prints have completely captured the fancy of the smart world for summer.

Since cottons have assumed such unmistakable style significance, it is in keeping with their prestige that they be made up as smartly as are the more formal materials.

Novelty Shoes Worn by Milady

Have you noticed the windows of the shoe stores? Then you have seen the wild array of colors and styles.

Heretofore the fads have been supply confined to hosiery, gloves, hand bags and other accessories but this summer shoes are coming into their own as never before.

The Deauville sandal is even better than it was last year. These sandals besides being stylish are exceedingly comfortable during the hot summer weather. They are appropriate for sport and street wear. They assure the shopper a comfortable day's shopping tour.

For the more "dressy" occasion but still informal and semi-sport, the red or blue one strap or pump will please the eye and add color to any dress. If you would like to wear that navy dress but feel that it is too dark and sober, then slip out in a pair of red slippers worn with one of the light shades of hose and what could be snappier?

Or if you want a pair of snappy shoes just are afraid to get a solid color such as red or blue for fear that you can not wear it with all of your dresses then, there are those nifty slippers of printed cloth which are being shown at all of the stores. They can be worn with practically any color scheme and for this reason they will probably be worn even more than the red or blue.

It is a clever idea to have a pair of printed shoes and a printed handbag of the same material or as near a match as can be made. These hand bags are new and nifty and the best part of all is that they can be made at home from a very little piece of material. They are cool looking and are quite different from the beaded or leather bags.

If you like to, the bag can be made of the same material as the dress or ensemble. If your new bag is printed then you may be sure that it is good for the summer.

The island of Juan Fernandez, or Robinson Crusoe's Island, is one of the most fertile and picturesque in the vicinity of South America. It is part of a crater edge of an extinct volcano, 370 miles from Valparaiso, Chile. Its population of 287 is mixed French, Italian, Spanish, and German. They have a completely equipped hospital, but no doctor. When one of the inhabitants becomes ill, his symptoms are explained by radio to doctors in Valparaiso. They send back instructions for treatment in the same manner. Only when an operation is necessary does a doctor visit the island.

DON'T BUY FURNITURE UNLESS YOU KNOW ITS PEDIGREE

Money spent in flashy-looking, cheaply built furniture is money thrown away.

Furniture may look attractive—and yet be cheaply built under the surface—where you can't see it.

IT ALL DEPENDS ON THE MAKER

If he builds just for the surface and puts cheap construction in the vital unseen parts, then his most beautiful furniture is a poor investment—because it soon loses its shape, becomes unsightly.

Your only safety lies in buying furniture with a pedigree—made by a manufacturer of established reputation for building "honest quality"—all the way through—at a reasonable price. Seeing the suites built in our window will convince you of "honest quality."

Beautiful High Grade 2-pc.

Masland Argonne RUGS

On the Sidewalk in Front of Our Store

May 25th to June 15th

The Sidewalk Test---What It Means to You

The Sidewalk Test is made for your benefit and for the benefit of every housewife who wants to know just what she is buying.

The sidewalk test proves the worth of Masland Argonne Rugs. Seeing is believing. It allows the people in this community to see for themselves just what abuse a really good rug will stand. One might as well test glass with a hammer as to put an ordinary rug out on the sidewalk. This is where the weak must fall by the wayside and where Masland Argonne quality stands.

What Becomes of the Rug

This rug will be left out on the sidewalk for three weeks including four Saturdays. Then it will be cleaned and placed in our window so that every one may examine it closely. It will then be sold to the highest bidder. Examine it closely and then mail your bid to this store. We positively guarantee that the rug which you see in the window will be the Sidewalk Rug.

New Linoleums

Have more color in the kitchen—and the bathroom and all over the house—with smart linoleum floors. You've no idea how decorative they can be in their attractive tile patterns, fancy figures and plain or jaspe colors and they cost less than having your old floors refinished. Best of all, a linoleum floor cushions footsteps, deadens sound and is cleaned easier than wood or tile. Newest patterns are here for your inspection in 2, 3 and 4 yard widths, priced as low as 39c per sq. yd.

HILLTOP PICNIC

The biggest event of the year for the Hilltop is drawing near again. It is the Hilltop Picnic. The exact date has not yet been announced but it will probably be made known within the next few weeks.

The picnic is sponsored by the Hilltop business Men's Association. The members of this body of business men put all their efforts together to make the picnic a success. Committees begin functioning for the next picnic within a few months after they have just completed one.

This picnic with its abundance of entertainment is but another expression of the interest the Hilltop business men take in this community.

We wonder how the "Health Supervisor" at one of the Hilltop schools felt the other day when she told a ten-year-old boy that he had very bad tonsils and he replied, "I had 'em taken out when I was four years old."

WATER SPORTS AT SCOUT CAMP

Swimming, Life Saving and Varied Program Planned for Camp Re-Fre-La.

Swimming, life saving and water sports are scheduled to play a big part in the summer program of Re-Fre-La, the Boy Scout camp. Under the supervision of Walter J. Caldwell, instructor in Physical Education at Ohio State university and a certified Red Cross Life Saving Examiner, a widely varied program of water activities has been planned.

The big swimming reservoir, with a capacity of more than a million and three quarters gallons, is constantly supplied with fresh water from a specially drilled well. The water is pumped into the pool at the rate of 150 gallons per minute assuring fresh clean water at all times.

During the summer camp, the pool is divided into three sections. The first with an average depth of three and one-half feet, is a training spot for non-swimmers.

The second of the two sections is devoted to beginners. Here the graduates of the "non-swimmers" pool are taught many different kinds of swimming strokes.

The third or upper section with a depth of six to eighteen feet is a place of joy for the good swimmers. A 20-ft. diving tower, 2 official A. A. U. spring boards, canoes, row boats and rafts are included in its equipment. Water polo, canoe-tilting and water cage-ball are very popular. Life saving instruction is given to all swimmers.

Campers swim three times a day at regularly scheduled periods. During these hours the pool is guarded by a Red Cross Life Saving corps.

"Did you ever hear," inquired a waggish acquaintance, "of the American who, owing to an accident to his airplane, suddenly changed his nationality—he came down a Russian."

"Yes," we replied, falling in with his humor, "but we heard further that this aviator carried a passenger who also changed his nationality—he landed on some telegraph wires and came down a Pole."

The Sandman Story

THE PROUD COW

"My name is Moody Cow and I have no horns. Moo, moo, moo, I have no horns," repeated Mrs. Moody Cow.

"Moo, moo, moo," said Mrs. Black Poll Cow, "I haven't any horns either."

"The same is true of me," said Mrs Red Poll Cow, "and what is more, none of our little ones have horns, as they follow our example.

"We don't mind it because other cows like horns. It's just not our way."

"Why talk of horns and whether you have them or not?" said Miss Jersey Cow. "The important subject to be talked about is that of milk."

"Milk is important," said Madame Jersey Cow. "Oh, yes, there is nothing so important except perhaps ourselves and good food for them to eat."

"The Important Subject to Be Talked About Is That of Milk."

"Well," said Miss Jersey, "I do give rich milk. There is no mistake about that, rich milk, too.' They belong to the same as we are. They belong to the same great family."

"Ah, yes," said Miss Guernsey, "that is true.

"The Jersey and the Guernsey give the rich milk. Now the Holstein ladies say that they prefer quantity to quality."

"True," said Madame Holstein. "I would rather give a lot of milk than a small amount of very rich milk such as the members of your family do.

"It is nice, of course, to give rich milk, but I think it is nicer to give lots of milk. Now, the way we do means that many, many more people can have milk than if we did as you all do.

"You are not so generous as we are. That is simply a family way of yours. But when you do give, you give handsomely. That is the way of the Jersey and Guernsey families.

"Now I hold the world's record for the amount of milk given—for the greatest amount of milk ever given. I do not mean that I, my self, hold this great record, but the Holstein family holds it.

"A Holstein cow has been known to give one hundred pounds of milk a day!

"There is nothing selfish about that. Nothing small or stingy.

"Ah, yes, our family holds the world's record for generosity in milk giving."

"Well," said Miss Guernsey, "we're good-sized cows and we think that some cows should not think only of quantity but should think of richness and such important things.

"We're rather rich looking ourselves, splendid looking we've been told, and we want to give the kind of milk that is like ourselves."

"Sometimes we're been fed up and given some of the Jersey milk to make us fat," said one of the Holsteins, "for we are fed well when we're out prize winning; or are hoping to be prize-winning cows.

"We're fed well all the time, of course, too.

"I do believe that we hold the butterfat record, for we've given eight pounds of butter a day—apiece.

"Ah, they have a silo on the farm, and they thresh corn for us for the winter time.

"But we do our work."

The Holstein family were spotted black and white coats and Miss Jersey wore a lovely fawn-colored costume.

But they talked no more now for a while as it was milking time, and they all went and lined up so as to be all ready.

They felt quite satisfied with what they could do and in the talk they had had.

Ramblings About Clothes and Things

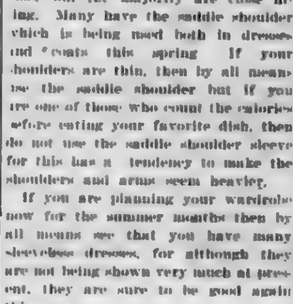
Your new dress will have one of the new necklines, of course. The newest thing in necklines is the one which looks like a V neck has been cut crooked, for the V is far over to the left side.

Most necklines are collarless, although occasionally a collar is to be seen. In the place of a collar, a straight piece of material of the same or contrasting material is draped around the neck, one end being held to the dress with a buckle and the other either free or lightly tacked to the dress. This collar if it can be called such is similar to a small short scarf and gives a finished air to any dress. This will be especially appreciated when warm weather comes and coats are discarded.

Sleeves are just as important as necklines and at present they are mostly all long. Some are large and some but the majority are close fitting. Many have the saddle shoulder which is being used both in dresses and coats this spring. If your shoulders are thin, then by all means use the saddle shoulder but if you are one of those who count the calories before eating your favorite dish, then do not use the saddle shoulder sleeve for this has a tendency to make the shoulders and arms seem heavier.

If you are planning your wardrobe now for the summer months then by all means see that you have many sleeveless dresses, for although they are not being shown very much at present, they are sure to be good again this year.

The cap sleeve which is no more than an extension of the shoulder of the dress is flattering to most people and is just a modification of the sleeveless mode.



See Seiller's ad on last page.

A curious scalelike insect attacked the California orange trees and destroyed them by sucking the sap from tender sprigs. These bugs had a heavy white coat which protected them from spraying or fumigation. Experiments were made to discover in what way they could be destroyed. It was found that a kind of ladybug found in Australia would eat these insects. Cases of the ladybugs were shipped to California, but they could not be shipped in numbers large enough to keep pace with the tree scale, and so a ladybug farm was established in order that they might be produced in great quantities. The average production of ladybugs at this farm is fifty thousand a day.

We may not know much about music, but we can know what it means to live in harmony with one another.

GERMANY VOTES

To vote or not to vote that was the object in mind when Germany went to the polls on Sunday to determine if the weaker sex of that nation might be strengthened by the power to cast their votes in the government elections.

American women already have that privilege and there has been little disagreement as to the success of the plan. When a nation with the strength of ours has found the plan to be a good one we believe in universal suffrage.

What might be the effect of the women voting in Germany? Here's a thought. There are about 2,500,000 more women in Germany than there are men. The recent war left the large surplus. German women could run the government through their voting strength if they were given the opportunity. And since women have a greater hatred for war and realize the loss to humanity and their own suffering during the last war when they gave up their sons and husbands it appears that there would be no more desires on the part of that nation to be the supreme ruler of the world.

AGE OF SPECIALIZATION

Manufacturing the needs of the whole family under the same roof may have been the proper way to produce the necessities of life in years gone by but a better method has been found for the present. Specialization and production of one good has been found to be more successful in many ways.

This has been the way to big business which has been highly responsible for the great advancement made during the past in the fields of production, distribution and better human welfare.

We contend that all has been for the best and proof of the statement lies in the fact that so many modern conveniences are present in our homes and in our business. Men have been found to prosper in groups more so than when left to themselves. They have been able to produce more consumption goods in co-operation than when left to their own initiative.

ANOTHER STEP

We believe that another step is rapidly coming into effect in this matter of bringing more people together under the same head. We have reference to the unification of religion.

"United we stand, divided we fall" has been found a true statement. The real gist of the statement is that there is strength in co-operation and union. More can be accomplished by one large group of the same opinion than by several small groups of different opinions.

But we come to realize that there are not so many different opinions in the churches of today. Practically all religions are based upon the quest of truth. It appears that this truth might be established with much more ease if the same ends were being worked toward by all people. And since there are few differences in the religions of today with the exception of the name it seems logical that there should be a unification of the groups into a strong body working toward one end.

THE SITUATION

Some small towns may have as many churches as they have people to attend them. At least there are not enough people to give all the ministers a fair audience. If they were to take turns in preaching to the whole town they might be able to fill a church for once.

In the large city a new denomination springs up every month and struggles under financial difficulties to become established. In many instances they fail. In some cases the new group is but a splitting up of the old church.

Can there be any real value in the creation of so many religious groups? What stands in the way of bringing the majority of these denominations together?

JUST A BABY

The eighth daughter had just arrived at the Williams' home, and five-year-old Jean had hurried to a neighbor's to carry the news.

"Is it a boy?" asked the neighbor.

"No," sighed Jean, thinking of the disappointment of her relatives, "it's just a baby."

ONE METHOD

One Maiden Sister to Another Maiden Sister—"It would seem so good to hear a man's voice 'round the house."

The Other Maiden Sister—"Well, let's get a radio.

Said a servant to an Irish laborer: "Here is a beer, Pat, if you care to have it, but I'm afraid it's quite dead."

Oh, dead is it? Well, then it's meself that's the boy to bury it."

A gentleman had a bad memory, a friend knowing this, lent him the same book seven times over and being asked afterward how he liked it, replied: "I think it an admirable production, but the author sometimes repeats the same things."

First Freshman—"Does that sophomore know much about art?

Second Freshman—"Does he! Say, he told me they've hung two of his stickers in Paris.

She—"Isn't it a nuisance, dear? Mother sent me a recipe for some wonderful floor polish, but I've mislaid it.

He (tasting soup, suspiciously).—"Are you sure you mislaid it, darling?"

AN INEXPENSIVE FAVOR

Combining the practical with the novel and beautiful, the hostess may surprise her feminine guests with this bouquet made of the small articles every woman needs.

The small paper doilies used for ice cream service are made the base of the bouquet. The rest of the items may be purchased at the local variety stores. Spread next to the paper are ten artificial leaves with their wire stems running through the center of the paper to form the bouquet holder.

A deep rose ruffle of crepe paper is next sewed to the leaves. A spool of thread is wound in a lighter shade of rose paper. A thimble is also covered in this shade. A paper of hooks and eyes is rolled into a pale green shade of crepe paper cut like a poinsettia. Lingerie tape, black pins, a rolled package of needles and a few colors of embroidery floss are likewise partially covered with pale rose-colored crepe paper.

At first glance the favor looks like a bunch of small flowers.

The Landau Sedan Body by Fisher

With special sport equipment, no smarter car than this

Smart as a racing craft to begin with. Long and low . . . with rakish, youthful lines. But with special sport equipment . . . it's even smarter. The peer of any car in its class.

Six wire wheels . . . their colors contrasting with body shades. Spares carried jauntily forward in special fender wells. A trunk rack behind . . . suggesting a series of week-end journeys. There's real style, if you ever saw it. There's swank . . . snap . . . personality.

Add to all this the charm of bodies by Fisher. The deep-cushioned comfort and luxury that Fisher bodies provide. Then you'll find the All-American Six leagues ahead of any rival. And you'll marvel again at its truly remarkable price.

2-Door Sedan, $1045; Landau Coupe, $1045; Sport Roadster, $1075; Phaeton, $1075; 4-Door Sedan, $1145; Cabriolet, $1155; Landau Sedan, $1265 (wire wheels, spare tires, and trunk rack extra). New Series Pontiac Six, $745 to $875. All prices at factory. Check Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices—they include lowest handling charges. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Don't Take a Chance on Tire Trouble This Summer

ARE you prepared for those hot summer days and nights when driving is the only way to keep cool? Will your tires carry you over the sizzling roads which always show up tire weaknesses?

There's no need to swelter on account of tire troubles—not when you can equip your car with U. S. Royal Cord Balloons at a very moderate cost.

We carry the complete line of long-wearing United States Tires—tires that are noted for their safety and dependability under every weather condition.

Come in and let us fit you out—one tire or a whole new set.

LIBRARY BOARD VOTES RETURN OF COLLECTION

Books to Be Returned to L. A. Holmes; Library to Be Closed June 15.

Books of the Holmes Hilltop library will be returned to the original donor, L. A. Holmes and to the four schools of the Hilltop according to the vote of the Library board at their meeting at the library on Monday afternoon.

The board voted that the original gift of Mr. Holmes be returned to him for disposal as he sees fit and that the remaining books be distributed to Highland, John Burroughs, St. Aloysius and West Broad Street schools.

The library will be closed on June 15. All books should be returned by that time. No books were issued after the board meeting on Monday.

A vote of thanks was extended by the board to Mr. Holmes for his original gift and also for his continued interest and support to the library during the past five years.

The books of the Holmes collection were offered to the city library board to be used in the new Hilltop branch library under the condition that the collection be kept intact. No action was taken by the city board however.

No definite date has been set for the opening fo the Hilltop branch but it is expected that it will be completed by July 1.

Mrs. Currier, librarian of the Holmes library, asks that all people having books out return them as soon as possible.

CAR SERVICE IS EXTENDED

Street Cars Placed in West Broad to Big Four Tracks on Sunday.

Street car service in West Broad street from Hague avenue to the Big Four tracks was started on Sunday morning.

The service is on a twenty minute schedule and is an extension of the Sullivant avenue and Camp Chase line following the I. C. & E. Traction line.

Car service in this section has been delayed for several months due to the triangular fight between the city council, street car company and the I. C. & E. Traction line. The right of way in West Broad street belongs to the traction company. This extension has been the cause of much of the trouble in the negotiations in settling the franchise.

The feeder buses were removed with the installation of the new car service.

The car service was discontinued several years ago when Broad street was paved from Hague avenue to the Big Four tracks.

Sulzberger and Fox Are On Annual Spree

Dr. T. S. Fox and Dr. F. L. Sulzberger left Saturday evening for their annual fishing excursion at Cheybogan Mich., where they will attempt to establish a record of some kind while fishing for the wily "miskie." They will be gone one week.

During their absence Sulzberger's store will be in charge of Mrs. Sulzberger, with a competent optometrist in charge of the optical department.

Buys Confectionery

Ray Fullmer, 302 S. Harris Ave., has purchased the confectionery, 3058 W. Broad St., formerly operated by Mrs. Parker. Hereafter the store will be known as "Ray's Cupboard." Mr. Fullmer has been a resident of the Hilltop for the past 11 years.

Store Robbed

The Curry Drug Company, 2149 Sullivant Ave., reports that thieves gained entrance sometime Thursday and took $26.50 in small change. Entrance was gained through a back window.

Tourist Camp Up Before Council

Service Department Asked to Locate Suitable Site; Several Suggestions Made.

When city council met on Monday night it asked the service department to locate a suitable place for a tourist camp. Since the closing of the Glenwood tourist camp the city has been without one. The camp was closed on account of the poor health conditions there.

There remains a possibility that the tourist camp may yet be retained on the Hilltop or nearby.

It has been suggested that the abandoned quarry land north of the Columbus State hospital be made into a tourist camp. This project would have to be approved by the state legislature.

Several sites have been suggested. None of them are near the National highway. This appears to be a handicap to tourists. It is hoped that council may see fit to make improvements in Glenwood park so it may be reopened soon.

HILLTOP CLAIMS GRAND OLD VETS

J. D. BROWN

JAMES W. McDOWELL

W. H. CARTWRIGHT

P. W. CLEMENTS

JOHN HUFF

Courtesy of Ohio State Journal

Grand old men are these veterans of the Civil War.

These five men are all residents of the Hilltop. Memorial Day found them for the most part active and optomistic.

Mr. McDowell and Mr. Huff both live at 420 S. Ogden Ave. And with them is another veteran, Mrs. E. A. Smith, aged 81, who has cared for them for nearly forty years. Until recently she has cared for her brother Edwin Rider, another veteran. Yesterday the three honored the memory of Mr. Rider. Mrs. Smith's husband was also a veteran and died in 1885.

Mr. McDowell is 86 years old and is the last member of Company I, Fifty-eighth regiment, O. V. I. He was wounded at the battle of Shiloh in 1862 and later received honorable discharge. He is a member of the Old Guard.

Huff is 78 years old. He served with Company I, of the First, Ohio Cavalry. He enlisted in 1861 and saw four years of service with the Army of the Cumberland without a scratch.

Mr. Clements lives at 427 S. Hague Ave. He is 81 years old. At the age of 16 he enlisted in Company H, 141st O. V. I. He served two complete enlistments. "It was a great mistake," he says in regard to the early age at which he enlisted. He was in several battles in Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Brown who lives at 341 S. Richardson Ave., is 84 years old and in good health and very active. He enlisted here at Camp Chase in 1863. Soon after he went into the Cumberland Gap where they captured 3000 prisoners and sent them back to Camp Chase. He was in Company K, 120th O. V. I. Other old soldiers stated that Brown was an expert milker and was able to milk a cow in a canteen while she was on the trot.

When Lincoln called for 75,000 men in the first call Mr. Cartwright was among those who enlisted. He was in the 92nd O. V. I. and served most of his time in Tennessee. He is at present 86 years old. During the war he lost the sight of an eye. After he received his discharge he went to Indianapolis and served as a prison guard in the Veteran's Reserve.

The Record would be glad to have the names of any other veterans living on the Hilltop.

Hilltop Students Get "Y" Awards

Honors Given at Annual Parent-Son Banquet at "Y" School.

Awarding of honors at the second annual Parent-Son banquet at the Columbus Y. M. C. A. Day school for boys included recognition of boys who have served on the staff of the school magazine, the YbydaY this year. Among those cited for meritorious service were Walden Dupuis, 168 S. Burgess Ave., who was awarded a YbydaY pin as business manager during the past year, and Justin Pinney, 240 N. Ogden Ave., whose work on the business staff puts him in line for a pin next year. Pins are awarded only to upperclassmen for particularly outstanding work.

Other Hilltop students attending the banquet with their parents were Irvin Baldwin, 156 N. Eureka Ave.; Lynn Dupuis, 168 S. Burgess Ave.; Howard Graham, 237 N. Ogden Ave.; Edgar Hancock, 2440 Perdue Ave., and Lisle Kauffman, 284 Wrexham Ave.

Representatives of the various schools serving on the student committee in charge of the annual All-Schools Commencement banquet of the Columbus Y. M. C. A. schools Tuesday evening, June 5, include Clarence Z. Barker, 23 N. Park Ave., chairman of the commerce group in which are Paul Knoepe, 108 S. Princeton Ave., and Paul C. Bell, 203 Midland Ave.; and Charles Owings, 2589 W. Broad St., from the Trade and Engineering school.

Honor Principal

To honor their principal, Miss Daisy Charters, the teachers of John Burroughs school entertained on Thursday with a luncheon at the Matsonia.

Those present were: Miss Daisy Charters, Miss Mary Watts, Miss Mary Phelan, Miss Stella Schart, Miss Marion Kane, Miss Grace Smith, Miss Juliette Alspach, Miss Pearl Hoffman, Miss Rosanna Jones, Miss Bessie Jones, Mrs. Effie Rogers, Mrs. Rebecca Wilhelm, Miss Florence Jones, Mrs. Daisy Sheets, Mrs. Clara Strassheim, Miss Nelle Andrix, Miss Marion Lacks, Miss Vivian Barnes, Miss Irene Taylor, Miss Mayme Trebor, Miss Loretta Burns, Miss Linda Wahl, Miss Alma Boyd, Miss Mary Canon, Miss Jane Ambrose, Miss Donna Van Dorne and Mrs. Edna Lamb.

Girl Hit By Auto

Helen Carr, 5, 150 S. Westgate Ave., received bruises about the body on Wednesday when she was struck by the car driven by J. G. Morris, 146 S. Roys Ave. The accident occurred at Crescent drive and Roys avenue.

Error

The West High Alumni association party will be held at the Elk's club on June 15 instead of West High school as announced last week.

B. M. Association to Meet Tuesday

Picnic Date to Be Set and Committees to Report Plans.

The date and complete plans for the Hilltop picnic will be announced at the meeting of the Hilltop Business Men's association at the Matsonia on Tuesday, June 5, at 6:30.

Committee heads have been appointed by H. G. Deems, general chairman and will be expected to have reports ready at the meeting.

Plans are being made to make the picnic this year surpass all others. Many new features are planned.

Other members of the general committee in charge of the picnic are G. W. Matson and C. R. Pepple.

All members of the association are urged to be present at the meeting on Tuesday.

Hilltop Boys on State Champion Ball Team

Once more the boys from the Hilltop are setting the pace in our sports of the city. Two of the champion Aquinas baseball team, state champions, are graduates of St. Aloysius school on West Broad street and Midland avenue. Micky McPhail playing third base and Skeets Seales, catcher.

These two boys along with Allan Sweeney, George Grober, Joe Ridgway, Harry Owens, Charles Weiland and Ed Tonti, comprised the St. Aloysius intermediate basket ball team which won the city championship this last season.

Mrs. Nola Thorp and daughter Margaret of 2827 Steele Ave., and Mrs. J. C. Raub and son Melvin of 56 S. Roys Ave., left Tuesday to visit with relatives and friends in Cincinnati, Ohio, Lawrenceburg, Aurora and Rising Sun, Indiana.

Church League Awards Trophies

Hoge Memorial Bowlers Receive Silver Cup at Annual Banquet.

A silver bowling trophy was awarded to the Hoge Memorial church team at the post-season banquet of the West Church league held at the Burgess Avenue U. B. church on Monday night. The winning team consists of L. A. Persons, captain, M. L. Ward, Harvey Carter, R. M. Day, L. M. Warner and John Orebaugh.

High individual awards were as follows: High individual average, gold medal, F. H. Wilhelm, 82 games, 182-4; second high individual average, silver medal, L. A. Persons, 85 games, 180-28; third high individual average, silver medal, Fred Wolf, 105 games, 171-84; high individual three game score, gold medal, Robert M. Day, 70 games, 641; high individual single game, gold medal, H. H. Young, 95 games, 200. This score was also high for one game in any church league in the United States during the past season.

St. Aloysius was second in the race and Burgess U. B. came third. The high team score went to Hoge Memorial. They had 1043 for one game. Persons led the field in games of 200 or over with 10 games to his credit. Wilhelm was second with 18 games.

E. J. Swigert of Glenwood M. E. was elected president of the league for next year. Persons was elected secretary-treasurer.

Hon. C. T. Warner was principal speaker at the banquet. The invocation was led by Rev. C. E. Miller. Entertainment was furnished by "Micky" Barrett, "Billy" Leonard, Aura Leonard, and Lorraine Busic.

Memorial Services

Joint memorial services of all Odd Fellow and Rebecca lodges of Franklin county will be held Sunday, June 3rd, at Green Lawn cemetery.

Meeting place will be at I. O. O. F. Temple, 198 S. High St., from which place the line of march will be to Mound street at High and take street cars to the cemetery. The committee has arranged to have automobiles to take care of the many who on account of the weight of years feel unable to walk to street cars.

Parade will be led by the Fort Hayes band and services at the cemetery will be conducted by Rev. C. L. Ashton.

To Give Degree

The Esquire rank will be exemplified at West wood K. of P. lodge on Tuesday evening at 7:30.

The Capital University Conservatory of Music will present Miss Betty Munyan, 171 S. Warren Ave., in an organ recital at the First Methodist Episcopal church on June 3 at 8 p. m. She will be assisted by Esther Folsom, violinist and Helen Farnlocker, contralto. Miss Munyan is a pupil of Lelia Brown Glenn.

NEW ALLOTMENT ON THE MARKET

The Eureka Development Corporation has just opened an allotment extending south from the Aiken road to the Briggsdale pike. The main thoroughfare through the allotment will be Eureka Boulevard, which has been laid out as a winding drive through the tract.

This boulevard will connect with the Three C's Highway at Briggsdale, and will save much time for residents of this section wishing to go to the territory south-east of the Hilltop.

Buy Orthophonic

DUSTY MILLER HITS EXCUSES

"Do the Thing in Time it Takes to Explain," Says Noted Philosopher and Humorist.

Columbus was blessed with notables on Tuesday—Lindbergh, Billy Sunday, Ruth Elder and Dusty Miller. This last personage was a guest and speaker on the Hilltop. Miller, nationally known philosopher and humorist talked on his "Daily Dozen" at the Hillcrest Baptist church on Tuesday night.

Says Dusty, "The time people take to explain things is enough to do the thing they are trying to get out of. You can like your job so well you won't know it is work. But I have no sympathy with the man who works himself to death.

"I don't want 'At Rest' on my casket. I'd rather have 'Promoted'.

"The best kind of play is to sing. In that way you are forgetting about yourself and getting into the thing that is being done.

"Your day and mine is not complete without a word of prayer. The Pharisee was the original broadcaster from station ME. I've never understood long prayers. We should get down on our knees for prayer but up on our toes for activity.

"The world will make way for anyone who knows where he is going. Don't turn back when you have fallen down on something.

"Other people can very well do without us but we can't do without them.

"A wife is a person who has just seen a good parking place a little way back.

"Love is the only thing we ever have that the more you have the more you have room for. Hate is the greatest world problem.

"We should laugh every day. A grouch is excess baggage."

Meeting Postponed

The regular monthly meeting of St. John's Brotherhood has been postponed one week and will convene Tuesday evening, June 12.

The regular meeting of the church council will be held at the church Wednesday evening, June 6, at 8 p. m.

Y. W. Cornerstone To Be Laid Sunday

New Building Will Contain Complete Equipment for Women's Activities.

The cornerstone of the new Griswold Memorial Y. W. C. A. building, 65 S. Fourth St., will be laid at 3:30 p. m. Sunday, June 3.

Articles to be preserved will be placed in the cornerstone box by Mrs. C. F. Handberger, 780 Bryden Rd., for many years a board member, and president of the Association from 1914 to 1919.

The address will be made by Rev. Ralph Emerson Davis, and prayer offered by Rev. Sidney E. Sweet. A chorus of Girl Reserves in uniform will lead in singing. "Follow the Gleam." Mrs. William Sexton Brown, president of the Y. W. C. A. will preside at the ceremony.

Completely equipped for women's activities, the Griswold Y. W. C. A. will be of interest to all Columbus women. It will include rooming accommodations for 140 women, permanent and transient. Its club rooms for girls and women will be available for outside groups as well as Y. W. C. A. groups.

Its swimming pool, gymnasium, and bowling alleys will be the first in Columbus, exclusively for women.

A banquet hall and auditorium with stage, tea room, private dining rooms, and soda grill will be included, and beautiful memorial chapel for all who desire to use them.

The building was started in October and is expected to be ready for occupancy next winter.

P.-T. A. PICNIC ON JUNE 15th AT OLENTANGY

Children and Parents to Celebrate at Annual Event on Last Day of School.

Friday, June 15, will be a Red Letter day for Columbus school children because of two good reasons—first it is the last day of school—second, every pupil will be given a free ticket admitting him or her to the Parent-Teacher picnic at Olentangy park. This is a big annual event on the closing day of school where 40,000 pupils and parents gather at the park to "make merry." It will start at 10 a. m. and close at 10 p. m.

A pony, bicycle, roller skates and other prizes will be given away free to some lucky boy or girl.

There will be novelty contests and races in the afternoon for children of all ages. Prizes will be awarded to the first three winners in each event.

A special water carnival of swimming events will be staged at 2:30 p. m. in the Olentangy park pool under the direction of Wm. B. McCorkle, expert swimming instructor from the Central Y. M. C. A.

Entry blanks have been provided each school for the various swimming events and pupils should see the directors of physical education or the principals of their schools if they desire to enter these contests.

Silver cups will be awarded to the respective school winning the events.

For the elementary schools there will be a 4-boy 160 yard relay race, a 40 yard free style race and one event of diving.

For the girls in the senior and junior high schools there will be 40 yard free style race and 4-girl 160 yard relay race.

For the boys in the senior and junior divisions the contests will be 40 yard back stroke, 40 yard free style, fancy diving, 4-boy 160 yard relay and a balloon race.

Entries for the swimming contests must be made through the schools to Mr. McKorkle at the Central Y. M. C. A. not later than Monday, June 11.

Mr. W. C. Dyer, principal of Resh Avenue school is general chairman of all contests and races for the picnic.

Drive Ends

Clean-Up Campaign to End on Saturday.

A last opportunity is being offered for a general clean up during the clean-up, paint-up and fire prevention campaign which will end on Saturday. That day will mark the close of a very successful campaign.

Heads of the clean-up drive urge residents to make a survey of their property and ascertain if everything has been properly treated during the clean up. They also wish to remind people that the vacant lots should be kept mowed during the summer months.

It is the opinion of the heads of the chamber of commerce that this campaign has been heartily accepted by residents of the city and hearty co-operation and response have been received.

Change of Ownership

The Metropolitan Drug Co., corner of Warren avenue and West Broad street is now being operated by O. J. Roberts.

Mr. Roberts is a local Hilltop man. He has been in the drug business for several years.

He announces that the store will continue to carry a full line of well known drugs and sundries and operate an up-to-date soda fountain.

HOW I MAKE
By Readers of the Hilltop Record

Chocolate Cornstarch Pudding

1 pint milk,
1-3 cup sugar,
4 tablespoons cornstarch,
½ square chocolate,
½teaspoon vanilla,
Pinch of salt.

Heat the milk, add the melted chocolate and sugar, moisten the cornstarch in a little cold milk, add to hot mixture and cook until thoroughly done. Remove from the fire and add vanilla. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

Sea Foam

2 cups sugar,
⅔ cup water,
2 tablespoons corn syrup,
2 egg whites.

Put sugar, corn syrup and water in a pan, place over fire and stir until sugar is dissolved. Do not stir after it begins to boil. Wipe sides of pan with a dampened cloth to remove crystals. Remove from fire when it will form a hard ball when dropped into water. Beat eggs until stiff and gradually pour in the hot mixture as soon as removed from the fire. Beat until it will retain its form when dropped from a spoon. Pour into a greased pan and cut into squares or drop from a spoon into desired sizes.

This is very good with the addition of a cup of nuts chopped fine or half cup of candied cherries.

...a Successful Six now winning Even Greater Success

200,000

Buyers Can't Be Wrong

When the Pontiac Six was first introduced less than two and a half years ago, immediate buying enthusiasm was aroused. The public accepted the statement of General Motors and Oakland that here was a new car offering six-cylinder value never before enjoyed at such low price. 75,000 Pontiac Sixes sold in 1926 established a world's record for a new make of car. Sales for 1927 carried the total of satisfied Pontiac owners beyond the 200,000 mark.

And now, even if its unrivaled value could not be proved by comparison with other cars in its field—even if its superiority could not be demonstrated by scores of advanced features combined in no other low-priced six—even if all its claims to leadership were based on generalities—you could still buy the Pontiac Six with confidence . . . for 200,000 buyers can't be wrong!

If you want to know the truth about the Pontiac Six, go to any owner in town. And if you hear praise almost too enthusiastic to believe, remember that 200,000 owners will tell you substantially the same story!

WHEN ROBERT WAS TWENTY-ONE

When the wealthy building contractor, Alexander Ware, was killed in an automobile accident, and then, when his widow, one short month after the funeral, married Silas Bartlett, the residents of Shipleyville were astounded. A report gained currency that Silas had been her first love that she had jilted him in a moment of pique and married Ware, and had always regretted it. This explained but did not excuse her shameful precipitancy. Her neighbors conceded, however, that Ware's sixteen-year-old son had acquired a kind and gentle stepfather. But if the son, Robert, had been less of a stoic he might have disillusioned them. Bartlett, the stepfather, soft spoken and suave in public, became to Robert in the home a monster of unceasing petty tyranny; and, curiously, the wife made no effort to protect her son from Martlett's calculated persecutions. One summer afternoon Bartlett called Robert into the library.

"I've heard you talking about going to college," Bartlett began, with brutal abruptness. "Well, put it out of your head. You can't afford it. I've tried you in my office—and you're no earthly good. Your father was a carpenter; maybe you'll take to tools. I've got you a job in Allen Hinchey's garage. And get to bed early, for you start in the morning. Your work will keep you out of mischief and away from that pauper next door."

"What did little Irene ever do to you?" cried the crushed boy, goaded at last to angry speech by the unmerited slur.

"No temper, young man," warned Bartlett. "Now I'll tell you this, and you can inform your friend and her mother. I'm going to give them notice to move; and I'm going to tear down their shack and put up a bungalow. That's all."

Robert turned away, bitter but hopeless. The Widow Sanderson, a weak and delicate woman, who worked in Mrs. Vogelsang's bakery, and her nine-year-old daughter, Irene, occupied a small rented cottage on the grounds. Irene Sanderson, a beautiful elflike little creature, was the only friend Robert had left; and now she was to be sent away from him.

Two nights after Robert's one-sided interview with his stepfather, Irene Sanderson saw her mother ascending the front stairs with especial difficulty and ran to help her. When the mother began to talk of colored lights and golden angels, and then when she tried to cough, and flecks of blood appeared on her lips, Irene became terrified. She dashed out of the house and across the street, to summon old Doctor Godfree.

"Dying on her feet," the kind old doctor later told some neighbors who had gathered. "Last stages of pneumonia. She'll hardly last the night." And the doctor was right; in the morning Mrs. Sanderson was dead.

Fate now grudgingly bestowed one kindness on the two troubled youngsters, Robert and Irene. Irene was taken into the home of kind-hearted Mrs. Vogelsang, and the Vogelsang home and bakery was located on Main street exactly opposite Hinchey's garage, where Robert was employed. Robert and Irene were enabled to meet and converse daily.

On day when business was slack, Robert had spent an hour in the store with Irene. He came back wearing a long face, and his employer, Allen Hinchey, joked him about his love-making. Good-natured Robert for once, did not respond to Hinchey's humor; instead, he suddenly became desperately frank and unburdened his mind of the whole story of persecution.

"So ho!" exclaimed the amazed Hinchey, at the end. "I always thought that angel of a Silas Bartlett was too good to be true. And he was in here last night asking me to raise your pay and every cent of it goes into his pocket, eh?" He paused, thoughtfully. "You're eighteen now, Robert, and I'm paying you fifteen a week. Candidly you're worth thirty, and you'll soon be worth fifty. But, seeing how the land lies, I'll not raise your pay. Instead, I'll make a bargain."

He pointed through the great open rear door of the garage, to a cottage facing on the next street.

"I took that property for a debt," he explained. "It's falling apart from neglect. If you spend a few minutes a day on it, painting and patching, you can turn it into a palace in three years. You'll be twenty-one then, and I'll make you a gift of the house. And I'm getting along in years, Robert. When you're twenty-one I'll need a partner." He held out his hand. "Is it a go?"

Robert was too overcome for speech. Tears welled in his eyes. He could only reach for the hand and grasp it warmly.

"And now," said Hinchey, "don't tell a soul except the little girl. And warn her to keep it under her curly yellow wig."

Life took on a different coloring at once for Robert and Irene. At length came the day when Robert was twenty-one.

And Silas Bartlett and his wife remembered this fateful date. To show their parental interest in the boy, secretly they planned a "coming of age" celebration—a surprise party.

Robert went to work as usual that morning, but at 6:30 in the evening he had not returned. At seven Silas telephoned the garage and was informed that Robert and Hinchey were out on a repair job. At eight guests were arriving; nine o'clock came, then ten, and the hero of the affair was still absent. Then young Ben Lothian, excited and breathless, burst in upon the merrymakers.

"A surprise party—I'll say there is," he exploded, "Bob's married. To that little jane in the bakery. Judge Billow tied the knot. They're having supper now, in the new home—and they wouldn't invite me in."

The party was at an end. A raging mother and stepfather hurried to their automobile. With Ben Lothian to direct them and followed by all their late guests in crowded cars they raced toward the little love nest.

Robert Ware, very handsome, and his extremely pretty bride, along with Judge Billow and Allen Hinchey, were just finishing the meal that Mrs. Vogelsang had served. The door was flung wide and a furious woman with her husband behind her, pushed into the room and faced her son.

"You ingrate!" she shrieked, in hysterical madness. "I had my house filled with guests in your honor, but you've made a mockery of my kindness! You'll never darken my door again. And you'll never get a penny of my money. Your calculating pauper wife will have to be satisfied with a pauper husband."

Silas Bartlett stepped forward, to add his denunciation, but Judge Billow waved a large silencing hand, and then rose to his feet slowly and impressively.

"You need not speak now, Silas," he said. "And when I finish, you won't want to. Ten years ago, Alexander Ware came to me and I drew his will. The information has only come to me tonight that that will has never been probated. But, no matter. A signed copy is in my office safe. That will leaves the bulk of his estate to his son. And I have learned that this boy, heir to $100,000, was to put to menial work and denied the college education he craved."

"Mother—mother," asked the horrified son, in unbelief, "can this be true?"

But the chagrined, ashen-faced woman could not speak, and Silas Bartlett, exposed in his perfidy, did not dare.

"Robert, I have not finished," reproved Judge Billow mildly. "Ware's first wife had died shortly after the birth of her son. That may account for many things, Robert," the judge concluded, gravely nodding his head "Mrs. Bartlett is not your mother."

A tense silence prevailed as Judge Billow resumed is seat. Robert was speechless and saddened. With the thought of consoling him Irene had come to his side. But her own face clouded.

"Oh, Robert," she asked him in a troubled little voice, "do you think it will make any difference? You are so rich."

He put his arm lovingly about the dainty girlish form of his bride, and bending down, kissed her, for all to see.

"You bet I'm rich, he told her. "I was rich before I heard of the money. Because I had you, dear."

NATURE STUDY PROGRAM AT SCOUT CAMP

Best Naturalist Obtainable Will Instruct Boys—Many Other Features.

The Nature Study Program planned for the summer session of Camp Ro-Fre-La, the Boy Scout reservation, has no equal in any boys' camp in America, according to Phil E. Weaver, local Scout Leader and Camp Director. Under the supervision of the best naturalists obtainable, the campers will be inducted into all of the mysteries of woodslore and will learn innumerable secrets of the out-of-doors.

Professor J. C. Hambleton, director of Nature Study in the Columbus Public schools, South American explorer and for many years prominent in activities of the Audubon society, will be at the head of the department. Assisting him will be Grant C. Graves, a graduate of Ohio State university and an advanced student of botany and zoology. Several junior leaders will also assist.

Nature trails, developed at Ro-Fre-La, have become extremely popular in the teaching of trees and wild flowers. The special "Visitors' Trail" running from the entrance to the campus is a sample of the teaching trails used by the boys.

Bird hikes led by experts are held every day. These trips the boys learn about the habits, nests and eggs of the land birds and watch the activities of the water birds on the Olentangy river.

Butterfly and moth collecting is popular also. Ro-Fre-La, situated in the midst of the greatest luna moth region in the middle west affords wonderful opportunities for such study.

Geology hikes, bee-keeping, tree and wildflower study, and conservation will also be taught.

Each period campers take a trip to the Ohio Wesleyan observatory where they are given an opportunity to examine the third largest telescope in the world. Nightly star-study classes and astronomy merit badge go over big.

Professor N. W. Scherer of Ohio State university is to lead in tree identification work. There are more than 75 different kinds of trees on the reservation.

E. F. McCarthy, United State National Forester will teach fire protection, conservation and trail building. He is in charge of the reforestation program. More than 45,000 hardwood and conifer trees have been planted on the reservation in the past two years.

Edward S. Thomas, local attorney, naturalist, and authority on bird migration is to present a series of illustrated lectures during the summer.

The 300 volume Nature library includes among others Ernest Thompson Seton's 10 volumes "Woodcraft Library" nature monthlies from the American Natural History Museum, and the 2 volume illustrated work, "Birds of Ohio."

Although athletics, handicraft and water sports are featured at Ro-Fre-La, it is the only camp in Central Ohio which offers an extensive nature program under expert leaders.

NEW CAR SERVICE

A much needed and long expected service for the Westgate section of he Hilltop is finally being realized after a period of several years. We have reference to the extension of the street car service in West Broad street to the Big Four tracks.

The feeder busses that have been operating in that section for the past few months have been recalled and the street cars are now on a twenty minute schedule. This may appear to be better than no service of the nature but yet there probably will be a call from the residents there for speedier service.

Speed-up and skip-stop service on the main lines could very ably be extended to this additional section with more cars, giving a shorter schedule.

PLAYTIME SOON

With the close of school in sight every mother is more or less concerned about how her children will pass away their time during the summer months.

This problem ceases to be a very serious one if the mothers will stop to consider the facilities being offered by the city recreational department for the care of the children during these months.

There are three playgrounds of major importance on the Hilltop. These will be opened soon after the close of school and able instructors for each one will be provided by the city. Every mother should be willing and happy that her child has such a place of recreation out in the sunshine and fresh air.

A visit to any of the Hilltop playgrounds after they have been officially opened will be enough to convince every mother that it is a safe place for her youngsters.

CLOSED! CLOSED!

This sign appears on the Glenwood tourist camp and thus are motorists greeted as they look for a camping place in Columbus.

Columbus, the capital city, attempts to make itself a pleasant memory for the summer tourists that travel the highways through here. Instead in many cases the traveller goes beyond the lights of the city and Columbus fades from his memory. A tourist camp is needed and should be provided.

Much fuss is made over the cutting of a single tree on a golf course of the city but no attention is given to the necessity of providing a tourist camp.

"Newspaper advertising is free," said Fred P. Mann, "wizard retailer" of Devil's Lake, N. D., in addressing the Chamber of Commerce Forum luncheon at the Chittenden recently.

Mann, whose phenomenal business success has attracted the attention of such magazines as Success, Country Gentleman and the Saturday Evening Post, pointed out that newspaper ads pay for themselves b ythe increased sales they encourage.

Mann's store in Devil's Lake spends $4000 annually for advertising in the local newspaper which has a circulation of but 2200.

"If you want to build up Columbus, do it with aggressive advertising," Mann told Forum members.

NEW WORLDS.

Navigation and now aviation have played their part in conquering the world to the extent that there are no more lands that have not been discovered or explored. The knowledge of the world is such that all sections are well known. For the would-be navigator or discoverer there is a need of new worlds to conquer.

These new worlds are not to be found within a radius of a few thousand miles. It appears that explorers will have to leave old mother earth or devote their energies to some other creative work here.

A glance at a history book telling of the early world discoverers and their ideas of what was beyond their immediate horizon seems out of place today. Instead explorers must cast their adventurous spirit beyond the rim of the sky. The Pinta, Nina and Santa Marie have given away to the Spirit of St. Louis and the Bremen.

WHO WAS WHAT AND WHY.

The great inequality of wealth throughout the world and especially in the United States causes us all to wonder who has what and why.

So far as the matter of ownership goes it is easy to see that a very few people own the great bulk of the wealth. The wealth of the world has doubled and redoubled. The population has doubled and redoubled. The distribution of wealth has remained in the hands of a relatively few.

Things are as they are and no program of redistribution can be established to carry out the wishes of many that their wealth be increased at the expense of the rich. It is just a matter of rising above the masses in financial matters. And even this must be accomplished by starting at the bottom and working up.

For the most part the richest families of today have risen to that stage through persistent toil.

BEAUTY CONTESTS.

Once upon a time there was a town that didn't have more than three beauty contests in its whole existence. That may have been the reason why it isn't in existence today.

Beauty contests may have started in the Garden of Eden but their popularity has never been at the present level before. The whole matter appears to be that the cup is about to run over.

Where strength may be giving away to brains it seems that brains may have to give up the reins to beauty.

INDUSTRY OFF.

One of the latest movements of the fascisti party in Italy is to the effect that all university students must wear straw hats. This is to relieve the condition of the straw hat business.

CHANGED DAYS

She—"Love-making is the same as it always was."

Recently there was a distinct earthquake shock which disturbed a small western city and rocked the municipal building so that the councilmen, then in session, left without the usual ceremonies. The clerk, a man of rules and regulations, was hard put to give his minutes the proper official tone. Finally he evolved this masterpiece: "On motion of city hall, the council adjourned."

SOLVED RIDDLE

After six years of research it has been discovered that nebullium, a gas supposed to exist in various nebulae, really is nothing more than an unusual combination of oxygen and nitrogen.

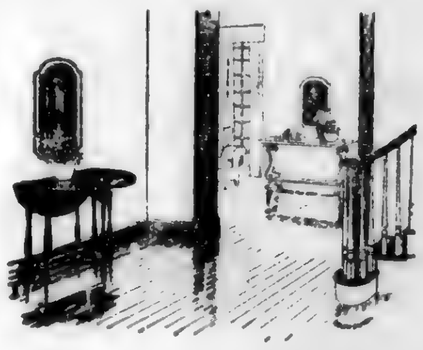
Home-Spent Dollars Help Everyone

Start Your Dollars to Building Up This Community

Home-spent dollars work for the home folks.

Home-spent dollars grow and grow and grow.

Home-spent dollars bring happiness, pleasure and profit to you and your neighbors.



Home-spent dollars help to pay home-employed labor.

Home-spent dollars build homes, schools and churches.

Home-spent dollars work for you and for me every hour of every day that we keep them here. They make this community a better place in which to live, a better market place for your buying and your selling.

Home-spent dollars build up the community—make it prosper, and as the community prospers, so do the people who live and work in that community prosper.

Pajamas Of Gorgeous Prints Are In A Sleeveless Mood

Enthusiasm for gay color knows no bounds these days. Even our homes are done in bright lacquer shades Colorful kitchens, including the 'utensils therein, colorful bathrooms, colorful living rooms, says the modernistic interior decorator.

What has all this to do with women's fashions? Just this, the spirit of color has so taken possession of milady that she dresses up to her environment, becoming, as it were, a part of the picture. Every one will agree that the young woman photographed here, posing in so gorgeously gay a pajama ensemble, would be an ornament to any home, fitting into the color scheme most decoratively. Note we say "ensemble," because no doubt if one were to peep into the boudoir of this young modern, one would discover there a matching coolie coat, for most pajamas nowadays are styled in three-piece sets. Especially does the sleeveless pajama blouse depend upon a picturesque coat to lend to it a more formal aspect, should occasion demand.

The entrancing lounging pajama costume in the picture indeed tells a colorful story, for it is vivid both as to line and design. For those dreamy afternoons when summer hums a happy tune and "all's well with the world," what so apropos for a lounging robe as this one in the illustration whose joyous silk print seems to have gathered nature's most beautiful tones and tints of fruit and flower into its patterning?

It's stylish to be sleeveless this season. Simple daytime frocks, sports clothes, pajama ensemble, all emphasize the mode of sleevelessness. Of course if milady is entertaining a chic and modern guest, she will don the ever-ready graceful flowing-sleeved coat afore mentioned, but for solid home comfort on torrid days she will find her sleeveless pajama blouse much to her liking.

The fact that this ensemble is of printed design bespeaks the importance of prints in the mode. The world of fashion is reveling in prints—prints for every occasion. Not only is the printed ensemble a factor in the some but coats, hats, scarfs and even he pocketbooks we carry are now made of flamboyant prints—parasols, too, if you please.

See Seiller's ad on last page.

In primitive times the headdress was a distinctive mark, representing the organization of groups of men.

Much of the drudgery of learning to play the piano is overcome by the entrance of electrical science into this field of art. Instead of having the beginner master the printed page—lines, spaces, expression marks, names of notes and keys, and so forth—the sign language is used and he has nothing to do but follow his sight, hearing, and touch. The learners' pianos have a small electric bulb over each key the wires from which are connected to the corresponding keys on the instructor's piano. When the teacher strikes a group of keys the electric lights flash on the children's keyboards and show them where to put their fingers. In this way the child learns the joy of music without having to master musical grammer. By using this method classes in piano instruction supplant individual teaching.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

SECOND WIND

There is nothing easier than convincing yourself that you have worked so long your brain has begun to fag.

Then you postpone the job till another day, and must spend perhaps an hour getting back to the mental stage in which you left it off.

And the chances are then you will never get exactly back into the same swing you had when you quit.

Quitting a thing when it is half finished is, of course, due to the natural laziness in all of us, and which is the hardest thing we have to overcome.

We can all work twice as hard, mentally, as most of us do.

Only a terrific and overpowering interest in what we are doing will keep us at a task till our minds are so wide awake that they can bring all their powers to bear on it.

Men who do big things keep at them and at them—and they find that they can often get a second mental wind, which will make continuing as easy or easier than the work was before.

When James Russell Lowell wrote "The Vision of Sir Launfal" he shut himself up in a room and stayed there for two days till the job was done. And he was not exhausted when he got through.

The chances are that if he had tried to write the poem by fits and starts he could never have got it done.

* * *

If you were shut into a room, and knew that the only way you could ever reach sunlight and food again was to find a secret passage out, you would find the secret passage.

The passage to many sorts of success are secret, and have to be hunted out by the reason.

The fact that men accomplish great things proves that it can be done.

There are differences in minds, of course, but the commonplace mind, by grim determination, will often accomplish more than the brilliant one which is always ready to take a rest.

Just to "keep plugging" will not accomplish much. But to keep plugging with all the power of the mind will, and must, accomplish a great deal.

The difficult task of measuring raindrops has been performed at University college, Dublin, Ireland. It was found that 312 raindrops of average size laid side by side measure one inch. Some few drops reached ten times this size. In the experiment more than 2000 drops were measured.

Liquid coal is being used in Germany. The process was developed several years ago, and has rapidly become commercialized. Delivery wagons supply the liquid coal in bottles and jars to the homes. There are also service stations where people can go with their pails to get their coal supply. In burning coal ordinarily, it is said that only ten per cent of the heat energy in it is utilized. The rest is lost in shock, smoke, and ashes. By liquefying the coal, seventy per cent and more of the heat values is used. American interests have bought over the patents, and are attempting to improve the process.

PLAYGROUNDS TO BE OPENED ABOUT JUNE 18

Several Improvements and Additions Scheduled for Hilltop Parks.

Hilltop playgrounds, Westgate, Glenwood and Holton Park will be formally opened about June 18 according to A. W. Raymond, director of recreation

During the past few weeks several improvements and additions have been made. A new ocean wave has been installed at Glenwood park: A baseball diamond has been laid out and graded at Westgate park. Tennis courts have been planned for Westgate park and will be completed in the summer. Several improvements have been made on the tennis courts at Holton park. A new wading pool and rest room has been built on the McKinley playground.

Those in charge of the various grounds have not been announced as yet. Examinations were held last week.

One of the big additions for the summer season will be the Indian lore and woodcraft. An Indian village has been constructed on the Scioto to be used as a camp by the recreation department. Directors of this work at the playgrounds during the simmer have been attending the classes of Ernest Thompson Seton, naturalist and woodsman, at Ohio State university.

Classes in Indian lore will be established at the playgrounds and groups will be organized to spend two-day periods at the Indian camp where Mr. Seton will supervise the construction work.

The meeting of the Hilltop W. C. T. U. has been changed to Friday, June 15. The meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Richard Case, 146 S. Warren Ave. The business session in the morning, a pot-luck luncheon at noon and in the afternoon the evangelistic department of Bethany Bible class will have their lesson study.

Writing Honors Traded But Remain on Hilltop

WEST BROAD ST. SCHOOL FIRST PRIZE SCHOOL

JOHN G. BURROUGHS SCHOOL SECOND PRIZE

Courtesy Columbus Citizen

"Turn about is fair play."

The old adage seemed to work out last week when the winners of the annual school Penmanship Contest sponsored by the Citizen were announced. First place went to West Broad Street school and second place to John Burroughs school. The winners of the contest last year were just in the opposite order, John Burroughs being first and West Broad second.

But at any rate the winners continue to be Hilltop schools and furthermore the individual winner was a Hilltop girl.

Virginia Hohenstine, 6A pupil at West Broad Street school won first place among school groups of five. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Hohenstine, 151 N. Eldon Ave.

The winners from West Broad Street school are from left to right, Charlotte Freshour, George Hudson, Margaret Byerly, Virginia Hohenstine and Wilma Harlow.

Silk flags were awarded for the winning schools and the individual winner received a pen and pencil set. They were presented on Tuesday at a pupil's meeting at the board of education building.

Judges for the contest were: Cecil J. Randall, president of the board of education, Mrs. H. G. Watson, president of the Columbus and Franklin county Parent-Teacher association, and Earl A. Lupfer principal of the Zanerian School of Penmanship.

Miss Olive Hicks, writing instructor at West Broad school deserves much credit for her work according to Miss Harriet Judd, principal. "We have never had as good writing as this year. Children have been very interested in the work," says Miss Judd.

EXPECT $1500 FROM PICNIC

Money to Be Used by P.-T. A. to Finance Dental Clinics and Student Aid Fund.

The picnic which is being held for the school children of the city by the Columbus and Franklin County Parent-Teachers association will be on the last day of school, June 15, at Olentangy Park. The members expect to raise $1500 on that day.

Proceeds from the picnic will be used to finance the nine dental clinics which the association operates and the Therese E. Poston student aid fund, maintained by the Parent-Teacher workers and which this year is aiding 15 youths through school.

There will be contests for the children and the prizes will include a Shetland pony, bicycles, watches, fountain pens, bands and roller skates and such other gifts as will especially appeal to youngsters. One contest offers cash prizes to the one who can determine the largest number of words that can be spelled with the letters of the three words "Parent-Teachers Association." First prize will be $15; second prize, $10; third prize, $5; and the next 10 prizes $1 each.

Mrs. H. G. Watson, president of the association and Mrs. H. O. Caldwell, general chairman for the picnic are directing plans for the day.

Mr. W. C. Dyer is chairman of the contests and novelty stunts.

Funeral Today for Man Gored by Steer

Funeral services will be held today at 8:30 for Joseph Kasper, 53, of 505 S. Warren Ave., who died in St. Francis hospital Tuesday night from injuries received when he was gored by a steer on the Hartman Farm on Monday.

Kasper was found unconscious by employees at the farm. Five ribs were fractured and he was crushed about the chest. Funeral services will be held in St. Aloysius church and burial will be in St. Joseph's cemetery.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS TO SPONSOR MOVIE

On June 12 and 13, afternoon and evening, the Rivoli Theater will give a benefit performance for the Highland Ave. Camp Fire Girls. All three groups will share in the proceeds of the show. The money is to be used to pay their share toward the new Camp Fire camp which has been purchased at Clear Creek valley near Lancaster.

The picture to be shown is "Fast and Furious" starring Barbara Worth, formerly Verna Dooley of the Hilltop. Miss Worth was starred in the picture at Keiths last week.

AID MEETING NOTICE

The Ladies' Aid society of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church will conduct their business meeting at one o'clock Thursday, June 7, instead of the regular time, because of the death of Mrs. Charles Frederick, whose funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock that day.

INTERURBAN CAR AND AUTO CRASH

While travelling east on West Broad street near Westgate avenue on Tuesday night the car driven by Dr. H. Riley Spittler of Eaton, O., ran head on into the west bound traction car of the I. C. & E.

Spittler was cut about the face from the flying glass but was not seriously injured. A friend riding with him in the car was not injured.

The car, a new Dodge Victory coach, was probably damaged beyond repair. The front wheels were broken off and the steering rod broken. The body of the car was demolished.

It is believed that Spittler was blinded by the rain and did not see the approaching car.

K. OF P. OFFICERS NAMED TUESDAY

Knight Rank to Be Given June 12—Dokkies to Drill.

Officers of the Westwood Lodge, No. 770, K. of P., were elected at their meeting on Tuesday night at the K. of P. hall, Burgess avenue and West Broad street.

The following officers were named: Ira Hunter, Chancellor Commander; Albert Angle, Vice Chancellor; D. S. McDaniel, Prelate; George Barnhart, Master of Work; William Birle, Master at Arms; C. S. Van Meter, Inner Guard, and Charles Berraw, Outer Guard.

The Knight rank will be given a class on next Tuesday night at the hall. The Dokkie drill team will also drill.

Scouts Picnic

An outing was sponsored by the Mother's Council of Troop 21, Boy Scouts on Sunday at the scout cabin near Glenmary Park.

Following the picnic dinner a recreational ball game was played by the scouts and their dads.

Troop 21 is represented in the graduating class at West High school this year by Charles Davis, Ralph Hill, Russel Kadel, Lawrence Minshall, Staley Shanely, Elmer Smith and Lawrence Tracy.

Trap Shooting

Rain kept the attendance down at the Hilltop trapp Tuesday evening, but several were out to get a little practice for the "State Shoot" being held at Vandalia, Ohio, on the national ground, the 6th, 7th and 8th of this month.

Following is a list of the shooters and their scores. Atwood scored 25 straight in one event and Herron broke his 50 straight.

Atwood broke	95—100
Thompson broke	89—100
A. L. Richards broke	89—100
Groff broke	80—100
Mellon broke	78—100
Herron broke	50— 50
Davis broke	43— 45
Webster broke	32— 35
Horton broke	23— 25
Richards Jr. broke	21— 25

The many Hilltop shooting friends of W. W. (Dad) Coffman of Dublin, will be sorry to learn that he is in White Cross hospital suffering serious injury from stepping on a tack. He has been a visitor to the Hilltop club many times and it is hoped we may hear of his speedy recovery.

BIBLE SCHOOL TO OPEN SOON

Daily Vacation Classes to Be Conducted Again This Year by Hilltop Churches.

Daily Vacation Bible school will be conducted by the Hilltop churches again this year according to Rev. H. C. Hutchison, chairman of the Bible School committee, from the Hilltop Daily Vacation Bible School association.

The classes will begin about the first of July. The exact date will be announced later. The place of the meetings has not yet been decided upon.

When the association met recently the following officers were elected: chairman, Rev. Hutchison; secretary, E. A. Garrison, and treasurer, Miss Margaret Huffman.

The Finance committee will consist of D. F. Baker, E. H. Epperson, C. E. Brether, L. E. Saunders, M. W. Legg and Lawrence Frick.

On the curriculum and teachers committee are Harry Maupin, Willard Hefford, Rev. Henry E. Koch, A. W. Jordan and C. W. Walton.

The latter committee will pick teachers from the Hilltop churches to conduct the Bible classes.

Students Take Part In Spelling Contest

In the all-city spelling contest held at Central high school on Saturday the 6A classes from John Burroughs and West Broad Street schools were represented. The contest was sponsored by the Columbus Dispatch. The results have not been announced yet.

The following students represented West Broad at the contest: George Hudson, Ruth Myers, Francis Moody, Wilma Harlow, Volena Roush, Elma Postle, Winifred Keller and Olive Eagan.

John Burroughs was represented by the following: Jack Lamneck, Harlan Rainier, Arthur Wertz, Dorothy Brown, Kathryn Davis, Dorothy Miller, Eleanor Patton and Ruth Ralph.

These students were in the upper ten per cent of their classes.

To Broadcast

The Hilltop Trio consisting of Miss Edith L. Robbins, violinist; Miss Ethel Greiser, pianist, and Mr. Eugene Schneider, cellist, will be assisted by Miss Helen Blair during the Ionaco Hour from radio station WCAH next Monday night at 7 o'clock. At that time a program of compositions and Ethelbert Nevin, both as solos and quartets will be presented.

CLASS MEETING

The Personal Workers' class of Hoge Memorial church met at the home of Mrs. H. A. Lear, 66 S. Burgess Ave., on Monday evening. Hostesses were Mrs. S. M. Kingery, Mrs. W. G. Davis and Mrs. Lisle Smith.

The J. S. B. class meeting will be a June party held at the church June 12, with Mrs. Mossman, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Scoles, Mrs. Barnes, Mrs. Merritt, Mrs. Cannon, Mrs. Kolfer, Mrs. McLaughlin, Mrs. Dysart and Mrs. Chenoweth as hostesses.

Cash Prizes to Be Given At Annual Hilltop Picnic

Old Fashioned Basket Picnic to Take Place of Ox Roast.

A completely new plan for the annual Hilltop picnic was announced on Tuesday night at the meeting of the Hilltop Business Men's association at the Matsonia.

Breaking away from the old custom of having an ox roast and free food the plans are to have the picnic this year in the form of an old fashioned basket picnic on the grounds. Contests, games and the baby contest will be held this year as usual in the afternoon.

Probably one of the biggest features of the whole picnic will be the awarding of several cash prizes. According to the plans of the committee in charge there will be about four cash prizes awarded each Saturday night for about five weeks in advance of the time set for the picnic.

Hilltop business men who are members of the association will give tickets with each 50c purchase in their store during the weeks preceeding the picnic. Receivers of the tickets will deposit their stubs at a given place in advance of the drawing to be held each Saturday night.

The lucky numbers will be posted on large cards in every Hilltop store. Holders of the lucky numbers will report their numbers to a receiving committee. (Place will be announced later.) No prizes will be awarded until the night of the picnic.

A grand drawing will be held on the picnic grounds and a capital prize and several additional small prizes will be given out that night. Holders of the lucky numbers on the Saturday nights preceeding the picnic will also be eligible for the drawing on the night of the picnic. Their stubs will be placed back in the barrel after they have been recorded as winners of the Saturday night drawings.

The exact amount of the prizes to be given out has not been decided but the committee in charge announced that all the awards will be worthy of consideration. The Saturday night awards may run from $5 to $15 and the capital prize will be about $50 or $75. The exact amounts will be announced within the next few weeks.

The date of the picnic has not been set yet. It will be sometime in the month of August.

Brother Comes Here

Major Samuel J. Randall, brother of Cecil J. Randall, president of the city school board has been transferred from Fort Myer, Va., to the Ohio State university as instructor in military science in the dental unit of the R. O. T. C. He is a graduate of Ohio State university.

Randall Files For Candidacy

Enters Race for Judge of Court of Domestic Relations of Franklin County.

Cecil J. Randall, 1869 W. Broad St., attorney and president of the board of education filed his declaration of candidacy in the Republican primaries for Judge of the Court of Domestic Relations on Saturday.

The following signed his declaration: George W. Rightmire, president of Ohio State university; Frank Horn, foreman of the Pennsylvania Railroad shops; Benson W. Hough, judge of the Federal District Court; Elizabeth Wright, president of the Third Ward Republican club; John K. Kennedy, attorney and former president of the Columbus Bar association, and B. F. Hughes, attorney and vice chairman of the board of managers of the Spring Street Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Randall is a graduate of the College of Liberal Arts and the Law College of Ohio State university. He is a member of the Glenwood M. E. church and has resided on the Hilltop for several years.

Returns Home

SOME BRIDES CHOOSE TO WEAR STATELY SATIN, OTHERS CHIC TULLE

And the bride wore—there's more of a thrill in these words than ever, seeing that nowadays it is not always the traditional "gleaming white satin" which the modernistic bride chooses for her wedding gown.

According to fashion's latest program, many June brides-to-be will be looking their loveliest in girlish frocks of tulle. At least there is flounce after flounce of tulle on the skirt of crepe satin and the hemline is short in front and long at the back exactly as fashion would have it. The semi-fitting sleeveless bodice of satin slenderizes the figure in most youthful manner. Orange blossoms knotted in at the front waistline with a hip-swathing girdle of the satin and a few orange blossoms prettily scattered in the billowy folds of the tulle flounces add the final charm.

One fashionable bride is succeeding in accomplishing the unusual by introducing a subtle effect in the way of a flesh-satin lining in the train of her white satin gown, further lending enchantment to the exquisite color scheme with an embroidery on the bodice done in flesh pink pearls.

This being a "lace season" it follows that lace enters very conspicuously into the designing of the bride's gown. A distinctive bride's dress which will enrobe one of the elect has been styled of handsome all-over lace along princess lines with long close-fitting sleeves.

Some of the most beautiful wedding gowns are cut in extraordinary lines, especially if it is to be a "period" wedding. A most elegant gown of this kind was designed of ivory moire, the quaint voluminous skirt opening at the front to reveal a slip flounced with rare alencon lace.

A very beautiful bride's costume is shown in the picture. The entire upper portion of this sumptuous satin gown is heavily worked with pearls and silver thread, as is also the magnificent train. A girdle of crushed satin swathes the hips, coming to the front, where long pearl-fringed streamers tie with infinite grace. A coronet of superb lace together with orange blossoms frame the face. Exquisite real lace borders the imposing veil.

The foregoing serves to show that brides of the now are more and more dressing with a view to becomingness and "self-expression."

The Connecting Link

Home trade is the connecting link that joins our community to greater prosperity.

How strong, how effective, how binding this link, depends upon the men, women and children who call this community HOME.

Every dollar spent with local Hilltop merchant adds to the value which you can get for future dollars.

Increased business means increased buying facilities both for the buyer and the merchant.

Let's all work together to so strengthen the vitally important Link of Home Trade that the passing years will join ever more stanchly Our Community with Greater Prosperity.

WHAT ABOUT THE DOGS?

Last week two children on the Hilltop were bitten by dogs. So far as is known their injuries were not very serious. But the fact that biting dogs are straying around through the community presents a situation to be seriously considered.

It happens that both of the above mentioned dogs were pets but were not friendly with outsiders. Such dogs are hard to keep tied or confined inside a back lot or house. Small children are not able to ward them off when they are loose.

The fact that the dogs have license is no reason why they should be allowed out on the streets where they may do harm to children or even adults.

CIVIC GROUPS

Recently a new civic improvement association was organized in this section of the city for the purpose of bringing about improvements in their parks, streets, etc.

This spirit of community betterment through organization is to be lauded. Such organizations are to be considered an asset to the community.

There should be special efforts however to gain strength as time progresses instead of making the organization a standstill job. To do this there must be some incentive to get the members out to meetings and to hold their interest. An association that continues to attempt anything without a definite program will soon die. If the original improvements are completed the association should use their knowledge to make more improvements.

THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

"If you see a tall fellow ahead of a crowd,
A leader of men, marching fearless and proud,
And you know of a tale whose mere telling aloud,
Would cause his proud head to in anguish be bowed,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

"If you know of a skeleton hidden away,
In a closet, and guarded, and kept from the day
In the dark; and whose showing, whose sudden display
Would cause grief and sorrow and lifelong dismay,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

"If you know of a thing that will darken the joy
Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy,
That will wipe out a smile, or the least will annoy
A fellow, or cause any gladness to cloy,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it

LIBERTY BELLS

Exact figures have never been made available but we judge there are about as many Liberty bells as there are Fords and other automobiles. Yes, Liberty bells . . . and cracked.

We even go as far as to say we may appear that way ourself sometimes. But understand we will not have such a label attached to our name all of the time. We have our ups and downs you see. The downs are when the Liberty bell appears cracked.

But getting back to the real reason why we want to call some people Liberty bells (instead of dumb bells) is because they are always dragging someone down or forever complaining about something you do. They ring out such wierd noises until they become cracked and have no sound left. People soon ignore them in toto.

And furthermore the liberty bell type doesn't belong in this age. Instead they belong back in the "days beyond recall."

STEPPING ON IT

Dusty Miller states that he saw a headline in a scientific magazine a few days ago which read "Can man live while going 1000 miles per hour?" He immediately made up his mind that such would be impossible because the man would be dying to go 1100.

On the Indianapolis speedway on Memorial Day the winner of the big race across a track of 500 miles for $25,000 and fame averaged 99.482 miles per hour. Others have gone faster in automobiles. Some have met their fate in such speed.

Now capital has come to the rescue of an idea and the newly proposed air-rail routes across the continent will make it possible to go from New York to San Francisco in 52 hours.

Where months were used in crossing the Atlantic ocean just a very few hundred years ago it is only a matter of hours now to cross in an airplane—if successful.

Futhermore the speedways of the large cities make it possible to have a country home and yet go to work in the center of the city in a few minutes in high powered cars. In the rural districts the horse has given way to the tractor and even the sod is turned in a much more rapid fashion.

Yes, we are quite speedy these days. But you can't be one who will prefer to walk or ride in a buggy drawn by old dobbin if you expect to get your share of the ice cream and cake. Come on let's step on it. We can't be satisfied with a dish of cold greasy potatoes.

EDUCATION

This is the season when the world is filled with wisdom. Colleges and schools everywhere are turning out "finished products" to take their places in line and look for jobs.

It is graduation time and that spirit of "I'm Educated Now" prevails.

But it doesn't for the most part last very long. Instead we are told that graduation only means that the vacation has ended and the time for work is staring the grad in the face.

However, there must be due credit to those who have been exposed to college life and who may have absorbed some of the words of wisdom that were supposed to be taught there. They must for some reason be a little better able to cope with the world. Most of all we would say they have accomplished a thing that is most lacking with the great outside. They are broad minded. They have been subjected to the arguments of both sides and do not conform to the old ideas of their fathers.

COW WORSHIP

Because the Hindu worships the cow and holds that animal to be sacred is no reason why we will never be able to advance in culture.

Americans in some instances have become the sharpest, slickest and wittiest people in the world and they have never been appreciably backward because they held the oil can upon a pedestal as a symbol of their success.

BODIES OF PREHISTORIC RACE LONG PRESERVED

Mummies of America's oldest inhabitants have been dissected by Gale E. Wilson, anatomist of the Harvard Medical school.

The mummies belong to the basket-maker Indians, who lived in the Southwest before the time of Christ, 3,000 B. C. or possibly much earlier, Mr. Wilson states, in reporting his investigations to the American Naturalist. The bodies, which were found in Arizona, are at least as old as most of the early Egyptian mummies, the anatomist states.

Repeated tests have failed to reveal traces of blood in Egyptian mummies, but in the American specimens were found red blood cells, shrunken and dried, but perfectly preserved.

An immense quantity of fine soot and sand was found throughout the lung material of the Indians. This is attributed to their breathing the dry and dusty atmosphere of the region where they lived. It indicates that these prehistoric people suffered from the same lung diseases, silicosis, that affects miners today.

Unlike the Egyptian mummies, which were prepared by elaborate processes, these bodies were not embalmed at all. They were simply buried and their preservation is due to the unusual drying qualities of hot sand and warm, dry climate.

The Sandman Story

THE FOX FAMILY

"Now, children," said Mother Gray Fox to her little babies, "you must learn many lessons.

"For the past few weeks I have held you close to me so you could feel my comforting warm furry body, and so you need not be afraid in the great dark world.

"But now the world is no longer dark, for you have opened your eyes at last, and you see the light.

"Your daddy is proud of you, too! He stayed away while you were so very tiny.

"It is best that way. Mother Fox wants to be all, all alone with her babies when they are so very tiny.

"And all alone in her three-room ground apartment she stayed with you.

"Daddy Fox will teach you lessons, too. He will also show you how you must hunt and do the marketing. You will learn just a little at a time.

"That will be enough to do. No little fox should learn too much at a time, for we do not want you to adventure far.

"A very little hunting at a time will do.

"You must beware of Great Horned Owl. He's a wild fellow and he doesn't care in the least for a darling little baby fox.

"Perhaps I should say he cares for a little baby fox too much. Much too much.

"He doesn't really care for a baby fox or he couldn't catch the little darling and put an end to its sweet fox life.

"You must stay most of the time safely in your soft grassy bed in the Home Den.

"You must beware of the strong Weasel who loves little foxes in the same cruel way that Great Horned Owl does.

"The Weasel knows how to hunt too. He knows how to take short cuts, and he is tireless.

"Once a darling little fox was saved from a Weasel because old Rattlesnake saw him in time. Old Rattle didn't want to protect the baby fox, oh, no, you must watch out for Old Rattle and his family.

"But Old Rattle wanted that Weasel and fight they did so that the baby fox got home to safety.

"You must be careful of men—and guns and rattlesnakes. Copperheads you must beware of and field mice you must smile at. For you are an enemy to field mice. You can catch them!

"Beware, too, of the Goshawk. He is an enemy."

"All that your mother tells you is true," said Daddy Fox. And then Daddy Fox began to give lessons in what they must beware of and what they must learn.

"In a year's time you will be old enough and wise enough to choose your own mates and start out housekeeping and homemaking for yourselves.

"Mother and Daddy Fox will not be lonely, for that is the way you should do, and Mother and Daddy Fox have each other and they love each other and are always happy with each other.

"Aren't we, Mother Gray Fox?"

Mother Gray Fox looked at Daddy Gray Fox and smiled and her eyes were tender and loving.

"I've always been thankful you were my mate, and proud that you were my mate and glad that you were my mate."

"You're the most handsome fox that ever lived!" said Daddy Fox.

And the little foxes looked at each other and grinned and said:

"We will not feel that Mother and Daddy will be lonely when we leave them, for they love each other so much, so much."

Then Daddy Fox suggested a good game, and they all had a most wonderful Fox frolic for all of them loved to play!

And Mother and Daddy Fox said that play was a most important part of life!

SHE WAS UNCLE ED'S WIDOW

Hally had inherited her from her mother, who had first possessed Aunt Lulu. Poor, fretted little Mrs. Marsh had loved to talk about her Uncle Ed's widow, how rich she was and how possible it was that a part at least of those riches would come to Hally ultimately. Uncle Ed had made his money in some sort of mine—silver or copper; Mrs. Marsh had never been sure which. She strove to keep up friendly relations with Uncle Ed's widow, writing her and sending her little gifts. Once a year or so, Aunt Lulu wrote the briefest letter. Other wise she remained impenetrable.

When her mother died, Hally took up the correspondence with Aunt Lulu. It was likely to prove a burden, for Hally was beset with anxiety. Her mother's prolonged sickness had taken the last of their money be sides leaving a few debts which Hally must pay. The girl was obliged to leave school and take a position in a store, giving up her dreams of success or hard reality. She did not ask Aunt Lulu for help; she told her nothing save that her mother had died. It was four months before Aunt Lulu answered and then her letter was little more than a note of correspondence.

By that time Dick had appeared in Hally's life. Dick worked in the same store and studied evenings. He was found to be a draftsmen and when Hally looked into his clear gray eyes she knew that he had will enough and courage enough and brains enough to attain his goal. It seemed impossible that anybody so fine as Dick could come to her. But he did. And she adored him. Why, the first moment she saw him she knew that a great window had opened to her vision which was never to close. Dick's personality produced just that effect of emerging vista, freedom and generous light in her gray existence.

One summer afternoon she and Dick walked out to the lake's edge and sat on a bench gazing upon that misty blue. The breeze stirred her recovered fair hair and whipped the color into her cheeks. She was too happy, just sitting there beside Dick.

A moment later this happiness blew away as before a mighty wind upon which, as upon wings, rushed a new joy so marvelous that she wept lest it find her unworthy. Dick had asked her to be his wife.

It was not until some three months later that Hally remembered Aunt Lulu. She and Dick were married, living in a tiny apartment. Evenings he worked at his lessons while she sat embroidering beside him. They were so happy in thir love and companionship that Hally came near forgetting all else. When at last she thought of Aunt Lulu, compunction stabbed her. Straightway she wrote the nicest letter of which she was capable, sending snapshots of "the family" as she called herself and Dick.

A few weeks following Hally received a special delivery letter from Aunt Lulu! She was coming East, coming to visit her young folks, coming at once.

A cloud passed over the sun for Hally. She did not know anything about Aunt Lulu save what her mother had been able to gather from those brief infrequent letetrs; she had a vague idea without knowing how she had come by it, that Aunt Lulu was big and course. Where would she put a big woman in an apartment which was barely large enough for the two of them as it was?

Dick laughed when Hally told him what they must expect.

"Well," he said, "we'll just have to make the best of it, dear. Give her our room. Make her comfortable."

"I will, but, Dick isn't it odd, her coming to us? She never saw me, she never saw mother even. In a way she hasn't the slightest claim on us. Uncle Ed was dad's uncle, you know, not his brother."

"I see. Yes, it is odd, but old people do queer things sometimes. There was my grandfather. He had money and my brother was named after him. We used to think Joey pretty lucky, but poor Joe never saw a penny of grandfather's money." He chuckled. "Grandfather got married again when he was past eighty and willed everything to his bride of fifty-one."

Hally drew a deep breath.

"Do you know what I think, Dick? I think Aunt Lulu hasn't any money at all. I think she's poor and—and wants somebody to look after her in her old age."

"That's what I think," Dick acknowledged. "Well—let's forget her until she actually arrives. Time to worry then."

Hally made all the preparations possible for the approaching guest. At least it was cold weather and one could bear a bit of crowding better now than when it was torrid. The only trouble was that Aunt Lulu did not announce the time of her arrival.

One afternoon the doorbell rang, and when Hally opened the door she found herself looking into the fresh round face of a plump little woman stylishly clad from toe to toe in dusky brown.

"You are Hally, I suppose?" the woman said. Her pretty eyes laughed. How do you do? I am your Aunt Lulu."

It couldn't be possible. Somehow Hally managed to keep sufficient composure to dispense the customary hospitality. She led Aunt Lulu within, pulled forward the winged chair and asked her to take off her things. But Aunt Lulu shook her head.

"Not this time. I can stay only a short time. I'm really very tired after my journey—the longest I have ever taken. I got in at three last night—"

"But why didn't you wire us?" Hally asked. "We would have met you."

"Not at the unearthly hour. I've so much respect for people's slumber to haul them out of bed in the middle of the night. Besides I am going to the hotel anyway. It's the Kingston, a very nice place. I have the nicest suite. But you will see it tomorrow. You and your husband must come to take Sunday luncheon with me."

Hally, fluttered, tried incoherently to say that they had expected her to stay with them. Aunt Lulu laughed.

"You must have misunderstood my meaning, dear, but no wonder. I'm a very poor letter writer. How cozy it looks here. And how pretty you are!"

It was all very bewildering. Hally could scarcely make Dick believe it when she told him. Aunt Lulu was not old: she was only middle-aged. Uncle Ed had been her guardian and had married her when she was sixteen as the easiest way of looking after her.

Next day Hally and Dick found that instead of entertaining Aunt Lulu, she was determined that she should entertain them. There was no doubt she had money, plenty of it. And she knew how to spend it.

Within a week she and Hally were fast friends. Hally found great enjoyment in Aunt Lulu's society. Sometimes she seemed almost as young as Hally was, and they laughed together like two school girls, especially when Hally presented the portrait of the Aunt Lulu she had expected.

"I haven't any real folks of my own since Ed died," Aunt Lulu said. "That was why I was suddenly taken with a desire to see you. Ed always planned to bring me back home, as he called it, but after he got so old and tired he felt that he could be more comfortable where he was. Then, too, his copper mine turned out to be a dead failure. I sometimes think it hastened his death. But I had a little money of my own. It was a good thing that I had, and that I kept it."

Gradually Hally pieced out the story of Aunt Lulu's lonely life. Bereft, she had married too young an old man who had been kind to her, the only friend she had. She had been denied everything—romance, love, happiness. In her middle age she was settling down into a dull existence.

Hally could not have it so. One night she gave a dinner party for four and invited Mr. Hallman—Mr. Hallman of the silk department. He was About Aunt Lulu's age, a fine, genial gentleman and a widower, who sadly needed a wife. Hally, you see, was trying her hand at match-making.

And she succeeded. With fluttering deep bow and disappears behind a those dear people. Aunt Lulu was to stay until spring, but Hally was not surprised when a little later she announced her intention of staying altogether as Mr. Hallman's wife.

When Dick finally went to Tech Hally went to stay with the Hallmans. She stayed there until Dick returned a full-fledged draftsman. No one except her mother had ever been so good to Hally and so when the baby came Hally named her after Aunt Lulu. Not "Lulu" as it happened, but Louise Marie, which was the real name of the woman who had been Uncle Ed's widow.

CAR INSPECTION SHOULD PRECEDE LONG AUTO TOUR

Service Station Visit Good Precaution Before Starting Motor Trip.

A service station inspection of the car before starting off on a vacation tour constitutes the best assurance of a pleasant and untroubled trip, it is pointed out by R. A. Armstrong, service manager of the Oakland Motor Car company.

"Of course it is very probable that any car which has received fairly regular attention will serve perfectly during the vacation journey," said Mr. Armstrong. "Cars are built today so that they give more consistent service with less attention than formerly was necessary.

"But, just as a matter of precaution, it is well to visit your service station before a prolonged tour. If nothing else have the car tightened-up, thoroughly oiled and greased. Fill the crank case with fresh oil, check the lubricant in the transmission and differential. Sustained driving during warm weather is the most severe test of lubrication and this detail alone all should not be neglected.

"If the motorist has not already done so, he should have the generator-charging rate reduced lest the preponderance of day driving overcharge and damage the battery. It is well, too, to have the battery tested occasionally enroute.

"Another good tour precaution is to have the valves ground and carbon cleaned. This will assure maximum performance.

"And above all, be sure of your tires. Don't start away merely HOPING that your tires will stand up during the tour. The growing practice of carrying two spares is most excellent insurance. Then, if one tire fails the second spare enables the tourist to continue on with a margin of safety until such time as he conveniently can have the flat repaired."

LAST STUDENTS ARE GRADUATED FROM WEST HI

Class Day Exercises Held Monday; Baccalaureate on Sunday.

The last graduation services for the old West High school were held in the auditorium of the Hillcrest church on Monday night. The Class Day program was given by members of the graduating class. The next class will be graduated from the new West High school next June.

The honor of being class speakers went to Marye Krejci and Lucille Truman. Miss Krejci was salutatorian and Miss Truman was valedictorian.

The class history was given by Elizabeth Wirth, Louise Alford, Rebecca Carey and Lucille Raether.

The class prophecy was acted out by Verne DeVine, Ruth Dell, Donna Harmon, Helen Spear, Mary Jane Weagly, John Graham and Lawrence Marshall.

Miner Smith, Dorothy Fuller, Olive Munce and David Ballard were in charge of the class will.

Music was furnished by the Senior orchestra, Senior Girls' Glee club and a male quartet and the Boys' Glee club. The orchestra was composed of Frieda Steele, Wilbur Knecht, Emerson Reese, Paul Zellers, Margaret Combs, Ruth Dell, Herbert Currier, Frank Ansel, Delbert Walters, Marshall Hall and Leslie Bingham.

The class song was written by Frieda Steele.

Rev. H. C. Hutchison, pastor of Hoge Memorial church, delivered the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning. His sermon topic was "The Philosophy of Success." The church was decorated in the class colors. Music was furnished by the church choir and the class.

The commencement exercises for all the high schools and junior highs were held yesterday at the coliseum.

Miss Lydia Piper, of Mt. Gilead, spent last week with Mrs. Olive Kaufman, 47 N. Harris Ave.

HIGH GRADS HEAR RANDALL

"Need More Home and Family Life," Says President of School Board.

"Aside from your public duties of citizenship, society needs knowledge, efficiency, vision and idealism in industry, politics, commerce, the arts, philosophy, religion and most of all in the home and family life," said Cecil J. Randall, president of the Board of Education when he addressed the Columbus High school graduates in the Coliseum yesterday.

"At this moment there is far wider joy manifest than that which is yours individually. Many admiring citizens representing the great throbbing heart of our city are present and the spirit of Columbus is breathing upon you the boast of Cornelia of old: 'These are my jewels.'"

Mr. Randall pointed out the expense of the public school system to the graduates. He stated that education was a public enterprise whose function is not to prepare one to make a living alone but to prepare him for complete living in all the complex social relationships of the present day.

In closing he asked each graduate to consecrate himself to the ideal of service and progress.

Gets High Grade

Lorena Crawford, 381 S. Richardson Ave., received the third highest grade for typists in the county service in the examination of the state civil service commission on Saturday.

Hilltop Grocers Active in Picnic

Annual Outing to Be Given by Retail Grocers on June 27th.

Grocers of the Hilltop are issuing tickets with purchases advertising the annual picnic of the Columbus Retail Grocers' association, which takes place Wednesday, June 27, at Olentangy park. Headquarters for these tickets in the Hilltop district are: P. J. Griffin, 2047 Steele Ave., and Ray G. Haunts, 2761 W. Broad St.

The capital prize to be given away at the Grocers' picnic this year is a Nash sedan. Second prize is a suite of living room furniture. Third prize is a Frigidaire and fourth is a Haag washer. There will be a bathing girl revue for cash prizes, a Country Store at which many sorts of merchandise may be purchased at less-than-retail prices, and many other features.

Hungleman to Leave

Oscar Hungleman, 2730 Steele Ave., will leave Columbus soon to take up his new duties as store manager for the F. & R. Lazarus Co., in the Shillito store at Cincinnatti, recently purchased by the Lazarus firm. Mr. Hungleman has been connected with the firm for several years. He will move his family to Cincinnatti.

DAD TO HAVE HIS DAY THIS SUNDAY

Sunday is Dad's Day.

This newly institutionalized day will be celebrated again on this Sunday morning and fathers all over the land will be honored by their children.

The day was first celebrated a few years ago in hopes of giving Dads some particular attention and a day to be called his own as well as one for Mother.

Sunday being Dad's own day there should be nothing in the way of allowing him to enjoy it as he sees fit. If he should so desire to sit in the front room with his shoes off and smoke his cigar with the ashes falling on the floor no one would be so unkind as to remind him that it isn't the proper thing to do.

More power to Dad!

Glenwood Church to Be Decorated

During the re-decoration of Glenwood church, which will begin this week, the church services and adult Sunday school will be held in the social rooms of the church. The morning service will begin at 10:30. Dr. E. J. Moore, Supt. of the Ohio Anti-Saloon league will be the preacher next Sunday. In the evening at 8:0. Rev. Donald Timmerman, student pastor of King Methodist church will be the preacher.

The adult department will meet in the social rooms of the church at 9:15 for their Sunday school. The Primary department will meet in the kitchen and the other departments in their usual places.

The Baracas will meet at 9:15 at the school house for the entire service.

Bruce R. Scott Buys Donehue Shoe Store

The sale of the Donehue's Brownbilt Shoe store at 2416 W. Broad St., to Bruce R. Scott was transacted through the office of Shank and Saunders, real estate agents on Monday afternoon.

Scott will take possession at once. He will run the store in conjunction with his other store in the Ritz Theatre building on Sullivant avenue.

Mr. Donehue has not announced his plans for the future.

Highland Pupils Win Citizenship Medals

Courtesy Columbus Citizen

The above four students of Highland Junior High school received Citizenship medals from the Columbus chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution last Wednesday afternoon in the auditorium of Central High school.

The medals were awarded on the basis of dependability, co-operation, leadership and patriotism. Two boys and two girls from each junior high school in the city received the awards.

In the contest of the medal winners to determine the author of the best essay among them, Virginia Randall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil J. Randall, 1989 W. Broad St., was the winner. David Reese, also of Highland, won honorable mention.

Man Killed By Electric Shock

Clarence D. Denny Electrocuted While Installing Fixtures Last Saturday.

Clarence Daniel Denny, 25, of 548 S. Wheatland Ave., died in Mt. Carmel hospital Thursday after being knocked unconscious when he came in contact with the high tension wire while installing electrical fixtures at the plant of the Franklin Laundry Co. at 1074 W. Broad St.

Denny was on a scaffold inside the building when he was removed by Fireman C. C. Rea of No. 10 engine house. He applied artificial respiration until the arrival of the ambulance.

A breathing machine was also used on him at the hospital. The voltage which he came in contact with was 220 volts. Hospital attendants said they believed the shock was fatal due to weakness of the heart.

Funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Glenwood M. E. church conducted by Rev. P. W. Drumm. Burial was made in Union cemetery.

Miss Margaret Burnside and sisters, 92 North Powell avenue, entertained with a six o'clock dinner honor of Miss Pegg Faulk, Curtis Nuhaner and Eugene Hall, members of 1928 graduating of O. S. U., the following: Miss Mildred Faulk, of East Liverpool, Miss Pegg Faulk, Miss Verta Casto, Horwitz Hartford, Eugene Hall, Curtis Nuhaner, Paul Churton.

Gets Appointment

James G. Harkins, 131 Nashoba Ave. will be the first traffic light repairman of Columbus according to the announcement of Safety Director McCune, Saturday. His job will be to keep the faces of the lights clean and to keep them repaired.

The regular meeting of the Elite Embroidery club was held at the home of Mrs. William Spangler, 1753 Andover road on last Thursday. At this time Mrs. Oscar Hungleman resigned as treasurre on account of moving to Cincinnatti. Mr. Hungleman has been appointed store manager of the Shillito store recently purchased by the F. & R. Lazarus Co. The club was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Spencer, 140 N. Burgess Ave., on Saturday evening, June 2, honoring the birthday of Mrs. Elmer Houdashelt of Cincinnatti.

HILLTOP MEN SEEK OFFICES

Wyatt L. Millikin for Legislature; King for Clerk of Courts.

Four Hilltoppers have filed petitions for nominations in the coming political race.

Wyatt L. Millikin, 53 N. Warren Ave., local Hilltop hardware dealer, filed his petition for the Democratic nomination for the Legislature on Tuesday. Mr. Millikin served as city councilman during 1920-21-22-23 and ran for mayor in 1924. His petition was signed by County Auditor Thatcher, G. P. McCarty, W. H. Palmer, H. W. Schultz and G. C. Amrine.

Adam Ehmann, Jr., 76 N. Ogden Ave., filed his declaration of candidacy for the Republican nomination for sheriff Tuesday. He had five signers.

George Trabue, near Camp Chase, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for county commissioner.

Robbed of Toys

Two men of Straughn, Ind., told police they were robbed of a part of their stock of toys they were selling along the road when they were attacked by six men in a roadster near the Big Four R. R. in West Broad street. They were compensated for their toys with bruises and cuts.

Merchants Agree on Noon Closing

Many Hilltop Stores to Close at Noon Wednesday During July and August.

Hilltop merchants have agreed to continue the custom of closing their stores on Wednesday afternoons during the months of July and August. The purpose of the closing is to give the employees an afternoon off each week.

This custom has been followed several years on the Hilltop. A petition was circulated among the merchants getting their approval and co-operation in the closing.

The following Hilltop merchants signed the petition and have agreed to close their stores at noon on Wednesday: Charles E. Houx, Shank's, Burnside Millinery, Donehue Shoe store, Economy Variety store, Seiller's, People's Dry Cleaning, Mechem Shoe Co., Sater's Dry Cleaning Co., Hilltop Cleaning and Pressing Shop, Fred Sulzberger, Story Cleaners and Daugherty's.

Democratic Meet

MISSING TRUCK ISN'T MISSING AFTER ALL

All that is missing isn't always lost was the conclusion of Nelson Condon, 2548 Ferris Ave., after a strange happening on last Thursday.

It was this way; Condon parked the truck he was driving (belonging to the City Gas and Fuel Co.) in front of the C. J. Kohn funeral home while he crossed the street to Todd's Pharmacy. When he returned the truck was missing. He found it in Kohn's yard. It had turned around and run half way up the driveway. A flat tire helped to turn the machine.

Safe Proves Unsafe

A safe stolen from the filling station of Althen & Planck at Wheatland and Sullivant avenues was recovered by Constable John Guy of Grandview. It was found at Stimmel road and Greenlawn avenue. It had been opened and $55 worth of coupon books, $2.50 in cash and $44 in checks had been removed. It was stolen on Saturday night.

Dica Campbell, 68 N. Oakley Ave., reported to police that a diamond ring valued at $100 had been taken from a wash stand in a downtown theatre on Saturday night.

Miss Mabel Babb, 349 Midland Ave., graduated from the Bethesda School of Nurses May 20th. Miss Babb was a former student of West High school and is the daughter of Mrs. Nettie Babb.

Class Picnic

The Married People's Bible class of Hoge Memorial Sunday school will have their annual picnic at the Storage Dam on Saturday afternoon. The group will meet at the corner of Hague and Broad at 2 o'clock. Transportation will be furnished for those who do not have cars.

All those attending the picnic should bring a covered dish, sandwiches and table service.

Church Redecorated

Decoration of the main auditorium of the Hoge Memorial church was completed last week and services were held on Sunday in it.

The appearance of the church inside has been totally changed. The back of the pulpit is an all over design. The lights and darks blend to make up the colorscheme.

Church to Celebrate Seventh Anniversary

Sunday will mark the seventh anniversary of the opening of the new building of the Burgess Avenue United Brethren church on Sullivant and Burgess avenues. The event will be observed with special services in the morning, afternoon and evening.

Rev. P. E. Wright, pastor of the First U. B. church of Newark, O., will be the speaker. A basket picnic dinner in the church dining room is open to all members and their friends.

A program will be given in the afternoon by combined Sunday school orchestras of several U. B. churches. Several former pastors and visiting members will be present. Rev. Wright will also address the congregation in the afternoon. The evening services will be held at 8 o'clock.

Call Special Meeting

A special meeting of the parents, teachers and tax payers of the community was called for last night at John Burroughs school for the purpose of discussing the tentative proposal to establish a municipal playground on John Burroughs school property.

MANY EVENTS SCHEDULED FOR P.-T. A. PICNIC

Annual Get-together Set for Olentangy Park Tomorrow From 10 Till 10.

Plans are all completed to make the annual picnic of the Columbus and Franklin County Parent-Teacher associations the best yet. Parents and students will be present at Olentangy park tomorrow for the picnic which begins at 10 a. m. and closes at 10 p. m.

Hilltop Parent-Teacher groups are planning to take an active part in the program. Special tables will be arranged for the various schools. Any one interested in making a reservation with the West Broad street group should call Mrs. M. H. Harrison at RA. 0686M.

Contests of various kinds will be held in the afternoon beginning at 2:30. The events include a peanut contest for children under five years of age, balloon blowing contest, running race for boys and walking race for girls, for children from five to eight years of age; hopping race and four legged race for boys and balloon race and hopping race for the girls, for children from eight to eleven years of age.

Children from 11-15 may enter in the following races: four-legged race on hands and toes, and cracker eating contest for boys, balloon race and backward walking race for girls.

The women will have a chance to show their skill in the bean and soda straw race and in the estimating race.

Prizes for all the events will consist of tickets for the concessions at the park. An outdoor circus has been planned for 7:30 in the Gardens under the leadership of George E. Zimmerman of the Physical Education department of the Y. M. C. A. The acts will consist of group tumbling, pyramid building, hand balancing, springboard diving and illuminated Indian club swinging. This last event is said to be one of the most spectacular events of its kind ever staged in Columbus. Boys from Bexley High school will have charge of the event.

Flags Should Fly

"Hats off!
Along the street there comes
A blare of trumpets, a ruffle of drums,
A flash of color beneath the sky;
Hats off!
The flag is passing by!"

Today is the day when the flag should stand out prominent and every home should show the colors.

In a proclamation last week, Gov. Donahey set today as Flag Day. Says the governor: "Be it new or tattered and torn, it speaks the same word and portrays its same glorious thought. Our flag is the flag of one people, united in one cause, the key of which is freedom and happiness.

"Let us unite in celebrating this, Old Glory's birthday, by displaying it in every public place and by revering it more than ever.

"Ohio's manhood and womanhood have been given freely to help perpetuate it and we, the beneficiaries of these services, should all join in honoring it."

The flag was officially recognized 151 years ago.

The monthly meeting of the Luther League has been postponed from Thursday evening, June 21, to Thursday, June 28, because of the Lutheran Sunday School Convention being held on Thursday at the St. Luke Evangelical Lutheran church, 30 E. Norwich Ave.

Camp Wildwood Opens June 21st

Activities for First Two Weeks Planned for Senior High Girls.

Camp Wildwood with its outdoor sports, stunts, nature lore and all the things that go with camping will be ready to receive its first guests of the summer on Thursday, June 21, and many Columbus school girls are planning for their camp vacation.

Miss Dorothy P. Powell will be camp director and Miss Lucille Kramer, program director again this summer as they were last season.

Activities for the first two weeks at Wildwood are especially planned for senior high school girls and the second two weeks for junior high girls, but other girls who want to come for these periods will be included. Later periods at camp with a general program for all girls.

New features this year at Camp Wildwood will be horseback riding, archery and deck tennis. A new craft house and museum has been erected which will be used for handicraft and nature collections of all kinds. A new outdoor amphitheater will be the scene of pageants, stunts and playlets.

Other attractions include swimming and boating, hiking, baseball, volley ball, tennis, hay rides, story telling, interpretative dancing. There will be hobby groups in art, handcraft, music, nature lore and outdoor craft.

Camp Wildwood, located two miles south of Westerville, is owned and operated by the Y. W. C. A. as a vacation camp for girls. Campers may register at the Y. W. C. A. office, 60 S. Third St., at least a week before they desire to go to camp.

See Seiller's ad on last page.

Mrs. G. E. Larkin and sons Richard and Charles R. of Leesburg, Fla., who formerly lived at 195 Columbian Ave., are visiting with friends and relatives in the city.

The Amity Embroidery club met last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. O. G. Brant, 2537 Sullivant Ave. It will meet at the home of Mrs. Leo Ditrick, 125 N. Park Ave., on Friday.

CHAPTER I

Go Ahead Morton was christened George Ashmead, but the initials and the evident impulses of his being inevitably caused an early shift in his appellation. From childhood he invariably went ahead, leaving others to follow if they would. And they usually did follow, for Morton was the sort of man that other men trust on sight, long before they have been able to note his almost uncanny ability to get things done. Morton himself admitted that he was "lucky" and used to wonder over it.

"It's darned queer," he said one day to a westerner, who was visiting the little Virginia town near Washington where Go Ahead had his home, and who had commented on his nickname. "When a man gets a complimentary nickname he sort of feels that he's got to live up to it somehow; and then he tries, and things just naturally seem to come his way. My mother always called me Georgie and made me wear long golden curls; and I had them on when my father took me to public school when I was about seven years old. He told me that the boys would make fun of my curls and that if I stood for it he would give me a hiding when I got home—and that he'd make it extra hard if I didn't lick the other boy or bring home some marks showing I'd done my best.

"Well, Dad was a he-man; and I knew he meant exactly what he said. So when the other boy started proceedings I lit into him. That was most twenty years ago, but I'll bet that boy hasn't stopped running yet. And ever since that fight I've preferred to go ahead—too big a coward to wait, I guess. Pretty soon the boys began to call me Go Ahead; and after that of course I had to go ahead; and most always it seemed to pay."

Later, the westerner, who seemed to be rather inquisitive and whose stay in the town was beginning to seem a little mysterious, asked the hotel clerk about Go Ahead's nerve. "He looks a pretty good sort of a man," he observed; "but has he ever stacked up against another good man and showed nerve?

The clerk grinned. "Oh well," he said, "I don't know for sure what you they tell a story about something he—er—pulled off up in Wyoming last spring that you might consider was kind of nervy."

"Didn't know he'd been up in Wyoming."

"You wouldn't, for all he'd say about it. He's a Department of Justice operative, you know; he does the sort of work that most people credit to the Secret Service. Last spring he'd just finished up in Wyoming and was actually getting on the train for the East when the sheriff hurried up to him and told him he'd got five railway robbers bottled up in an old mine outside the town and that he didn't know how to get at them. 'All right,' says Go Ahead. 'I'll stop over to see if I can help you out.'

"They got off the train; and the sheriff explained the circumstances. 'We've gotten into the mine by another way,' he said; 'and we're within fifty feet of them. They're barricaded with lots of grub and lots of ammunition on the two-hundred-foot level; and we're on a cross-cut about fifteen feet higher. There's a sump connecting the two; and it's easy enough to jump down a ptheon; only it wouldn't get us anything but a through ticket to Paradise. Come along and I'll show you the lay-out.'

"So Go Ahead and the sheriff and three deputies go down in the mine and slip up mighty quiet, to the edge of the sump. They can hear the robbers talking. Go Ahead pulls out two big pistols; then he nods to the sheriff and jumps down. And of course the others follow; they couldn't do anything else. The minute Go Ahead lights he jumps to one side to make room for the others, crouches, and begins shooting. And there was merry h—l for a while—or so they say. When it was over Go Ahead and one deputy and one robber were the only ones alive; and they were shot all to pieces. But they all got well except the robber and he didn't have much chance, for the boys lynched him. Go Ahead had three bullets through him; and he's just about got over them. Maybe you'll think that kind of nervy, Mr. Green?"

Green nodded frowningly. Ten minutes later, he was loafing along toward Morton's home.

Morton was gardening in his front yard. "Hello!" he called, looking up, as Green was just opposite.

"Hello yourself," grinned Green in return. "Want to talk to you if you've got time."

"Got all the time there is." Go Ahead had reached the gate by this time and was pulling it open. "Come on up on the porch and sit down. You're from Arizona, aren't you?"

Green glanced at Go Ahead sharply. Then he followed him to the porch and sat down.

"You struck it the first time," he admitted, cheerfully. "Leastways, I reckon you did. I ain't nowways real sure myself whether I'm from Arizona or Nevada or yet California."

"Keep a-weaving to and fro across the line, eh? Well, they do say that some of the sheriffs down there do keep people moving all right. Sometimes they even persuade them to go East on a trip."

Green tautened in every muscle. His face darkened; and his hand dropped to where a revolver ought to hang—but did not. Then he met Go Ahead's eyes, steely but smiling, and relaxed.

"No use stalling, I guess," he decided. "The time to stall was before I came to see you. My name really is Jack Green; and I've brought you a letter from Tom Fair about your cousin, Stella Morton. Here 'tis." He held out an envelope.

Morton took it with a smile. "Glad to know you really are named Green since it seems to please you," he commented. "Otherwise, it's all the same to me. I never heard of any Tom Fair, so far as I can remember; and I'm pretty sure I never had a cousin Stella. Still, I'm always willing to own up when I'm wrong. So, if you still want me to open this letter—" He paused suggestively, looking at Green.

"Sure I do," replied that gentleman, instantly. "That's what I gave it to you for. As for knowing—well, Fair said he guessed you'd be surprised."

Go Ahead opened the envelope and read the letter. It seemed to afford him some cause for astonishment. He glanced at Green, then read the letter over, again, word by word, from the beginning. It read as follows:

"Mr. G. A. Morton,

"Mortonville, Va.

"My Dear Sir:

"I never had the pleasure of meeting you, even in the old days, thirty years ago, while I lived not so very far from you in Virginia. There is no doubt, therefore, that my writing at this late day will astonish you. I can only hope that you will receive my letter with less reluctance than that with which I write it.

"Some fifteen years ago, while ranching in California, my next-door neighbor, Jim ———, and myself quarreled with the agents of the Southern Pacific railway and shot two of them. We shot in self-defense, but we couldn't prove it; and as the railway was all-powerful in those days we had to run.

"As you probably will remember, your cousin, Venable Morton, who had been farming in Missouri, left, about that time for California by wagon, with his wife and three-year-old daughter. He came expecting to join me; and a letter from him, arriving on the very day of the shooting, said that he was about to set out across the Mohave desert.

"So Jim and I tried to meet him to arrange for him to look out for our ranches till it was safe for us to come back.

"We did meet him, but only in time to see him die. He'd lost his way in the desert. His wife was dead when we found him; and he didn't live long. Before he died he handed over his three-year-old daughter to me and begged me to send her to you. She was in pretty good shape; I guess the parents had gone without to save her.

"I promised to send her; but for a long time I couldn't. The railroad detectives kept too close on my heels. At last Jim left, swearing that he wouldn't log a kid any farther. I kept her; I had gotten too fond of her by then to abandon her.

"That was fifteen years ago. Today—I blush to say it—I am head of a band of outlaws and the child is eighteen years old. She has been brought up in my household in the hiding place in the hills. Naturally her ideas are not those of the people to whom she rightly belongs; and her ways are not their ways. But she is good and sweet and true—and she is well educated and well trained in social customs. I love her very dearly, which explains why I kept her with me all these years.

"But now she is no longer a child. She is a woman—and I can no longer protect her.

"Jim, he who fled from California with me, had been in touch with me for some years. He now suddenly wants to marry Stella. But he is older even than I am—and Stella hates him. So I said No; and relations are strained. Jim is very powerful, both inside and outside my band, and he is conspiring to overthrow me and put another man in my place who will turn Stella over to him. They may strike any day.

"But I am trying to stave off a break till you can come or send for the girl. I cannot bring her myself. We are watched, and the moment we disappeared Jim would set the police on our track. Some one must come for her who is not under ban of the law.

"I have forced my confidence on you; and you must deal with it as you see fit. I have no rights—not even to ask you to hold this letter confidential. But I was once a Virginia gentleman myself! and I do ask you to see that Jack Green, who carries this letter, comes to no harm.

"Cordially yours,

"TOM 'FAIR.'"

After Go Ahead had ended his second reading he looked up at Green.

"Beyond a doubt this letter was meant for my father," he said. "But he and my mother are both in New York just now. Besides, they are old and I don't want to trouble them. And it's not necessary; I can speak for them. They'll both be delighted to welcome Cousin Stella as their own daughter; and I'll go for her at once, either with you or alone, whichever you say. What do you suggest? You and Fair have plans, of course."

Green nodded. He took Go Ahead's consent as a matter of course; and it was, indeed, only what he had expected it to be. "Yes, we've got some things fixed," he concurred. "We'll go on together. You dress as a cow puncher, like me; you can get away with it all right, I reckon?"

"Yes."

"All right. You get off at Mustin station, buy a horse and start to ride to Loboville, the next station to the west. I'll go on to Loboville by train, go up to the Roost, and get Stella and join you somewhere on your ride. You can loaf along the way, letting on you're looking for work. If you do have to go into Loboville be kind of careful, for Loboville sure is dangerous. But we can talk all that over later."

"Right . . . Now I'll leave you if you don't mind and run up to the city and fix things. Caeser can come up with you on the next trolley car and bring you to the station. He knows where to find me."

Green grinned. "Who's Caeser?" he asked.

"Eh . . . Oh, don't you know him? . . . Caeser!" Go Ahead raised his voice in a shout.

A startled cry answered. "Yessur, yessuh, Mr. George. Comin', suh!"

"Bet that nigger was stealing my cigars," Go Ahead observed. "However, he's worth it."

A likely looking chocolate-colored darky came out of the door and halted. "Yessur?" he said, interrogatively.

"Get ready to leave for Arizona by the 3:10 train, Caser. We'll travel light."

Caser's mouth dropped open. Incredulous delight shone in his eyes. "George, suh?" he quavered.

"Don't I generally mean what I say?" demanded Go Ahead frowningly.

"Yessuh! Yessuh! You sho' does, suh. But comin' so unexpected-like, when I was jus' a-bonin' to get away, I couldn't most skercely believe it, suh."

"You come in on the next car with Mr. Green here, Caser, and show him where to find me at the Union station. . . . So long Green. See you later."

Go Ahead shot away and caught his car—with two minutes to spare. Half an hour later he was sitting beside the desk of his chief in the Department of Justice, telling his tale.

"That's the situation," he ended, finally. "I'm going, of course; and it rests with you whether I go as a D. J. man or just as a private citizen. I've got to keep faith with Fair; and if you think—"

"Think nothing. Of course you'll go as a D. J. man. Keep faith with Fair by all means. Nobody's going to object if he gets away altogether if his gang is broken up?" There was an interrogative note in the Chief's voice.

But Go Ahead shook his head. "I don't know Fair personally," he said. "But from his letter I'd say he'll stick and suffer with his men. Virginians usually do, you know!"

"Oh, bosh! You and your Virginians!" The Chief laughed. Then he changed the subject. "You know anything about the country down there?" he asked.

"Only what everybody does. I've never been there."

"Neither have I. But I know a lot about it all the same. That Jim that Fair speaks about must be Jim Barker, sheriff of Loboville. We've had a lot of charges against him, but we haven't been able to get proof of any of them. He's the boss in his county; and the decent people don't seem able to throw him out. Generally speaking, he's charged with being in cahoots with Fair's gang and with whiskey and gun running across the Mexican border. If you can land on him, do so; there's no closed season on Barker—and if you get him I guess you would help Fair and that cousin of yours."

Go Ahead nodded. "It looks that way," he concurred.

"One thing more! The War department's got troops down there after Fair's gang. But they have orders to go slow till they get a chance to grab the whole shooting match. I'll see that the various commanders are notified that you're on the way there and are instructed to give you all the aid they can . . . Good luck."

CHAPTER II

Robbers' Roost was well concealed, as was fully proved by the fact that for many years none of the many officers of the law who had sought it had managed to find it. Even the complicity of the sheriff, strongly suspected (and timidly and secretly charged) could not otherwise have accounted altogether for its immunity.

Its name was not descriptive; the place was not a "roost" at all, in the general significance of the term: It was a cluster of huts in a narrow, sloping valley hemmed round by high cliffs in whose sides other dwellings had been half carved, half built by long vanished cliff-dwelling Indians.

Lowest of all the ridges that encircled the valley was that which ran across its lower end and through which the water from the springs had for many years finally escaped. Ages before, this water had not escaped at all, but had formed a lake in the closed valley—or bolsa, as such valleys are called in the Southwest. But in time the ever-pressing water had found a way, at first by mere seepage, later by a trickle, and finally by a stream beneath the ridge to the outer world, where, by the way, it was soon swallowed up in the sand or evaporated to the clouds.

When Fair and his early followers had chanced upon the place they had entered it on foot, through the narrow, tortuous passage cut by the subterranean stream. Later, they had enlarged this passage sufficiently to allow the passage of horses. Still later, they had built a short aqueduct along the side of the valley from the springs at a height that enabled them to "spill" the surplus water in a veil that completely masked the mouth of the exit to the passage.

Inside the valley, commanding the entrance, a machine gun had been placed under continuous charge of sentries. And, at the head of the valley, through one of the caves in the cliff, there was another exit, known only to Fair and two or three "trusties," through which, as a last resort in time of need, the bandits could escape.

Altogether, the place, besides being well concealed, was almost impregnable by anything short of a small army. Only treachery by one of its inmates seemed likely to put it in real peril; and until Fair and Jim Barker fell out there had been little danger of this.

But the split between Barker and Fair had changed all this. The older outlaws had known Stella (known to the whole band as "Bob") since she had been a wee child and were very fond of her.

All of these stood by Fair in his refusal to turn Stella over to Barker, even as a wife; and they were backed up by the small colony of women who had slowly accumulated in the valley, and who had been married to the men there by Padre Antonio, who made periodical visits to the place for the purpose. The padre felt that he could at least regularize and perhaps mitigate what he could not prevent.

But the younger and more recent additions to the gang differed from the earlier ones in regard to Stella as well as on other subjects. Absolutely boylike as Stella looked in her customary dress, her known sex prevented her from being regarded entirely as a boy by the newcomers. Moreover many of them had grown dissatisfied with Fair's leadership, which had in their opinion grown feeble and unenterprising. They wanted to substitute a younger man, one with more "pep," and they had almost unanimously decided on one Bill Wade, a husky young scoundrel, for the purpose.

So long, however, as Fair was sustained by Barker, who knew the feeling outside the Roost and who feared that any marked increase in the gang's activities would bring destruction on his whole system, the recalcitrants were helpless and could do little more than grumble. But when Fair and Barker split, Wade and his friends promptly used the fact as a means by which they might gain control.

SPEEDING CARS

Last week an interurban car and an automobile collided on West Broad street. Weather conditions may have been the cause of the accident. At any rate the automobile was damaged and the lives of those in the auto were endangered.

Whether the interurban car was going beyond the speed it should within the city limits is hard to tell. At any rate it appears that these cars travel too fast within the limits of the city.

A few weeks ago one of the cars on the same line jumped the track on Sullivant avenue when it went to clear the switch. The car ran off the track into an automobile parked along the side. A passer by might have been killed had he been present at the time of the accident. This accident was evidently caused by the speed which threw the car from the rails.

We contend that because of the excessive weight of the interurban cars they should be required to slow down while in the city limits.

FLAG DAY

If you would show your patriotism and let the world know of your allegiance we call to your attention your duty to display your flag today.

Today is Flag Day and has been proclaimed such by Governor Donahey.

One hundred and fifty-one years ago today the first flag was officially recognized. Through these years it has been subjected to progress, prosperity, panic and wars. Whether the grade be up or down there has been no difference in the appearance of the flag that stands for our nation.

Whereas this flag of ours is but a piece of bunting or silk or what ever cloth it may be made of it stands for the ideals of the lives of the American people. It has a lifelike character about it. Every man who stands in its shadow would give his life in its protection.

Where other nations may have their kings and rulers whom they may worship the United States has its flag.

Today is flag day. Give it your attention and display a flag.

WE'VE SOLD THE CAR

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

We've sold the car.
A good old friend,
The good old car
Is at an end.
Some other hand
Will have the fun,
And try to make
The old car run.

We've traded in
The good old car.,
For that's the way
That people are.
Old age had come,
And youth had gone,
And so we passed
The old car on.

It seems unkind,
It seems unfair,
But that's the way
That friendship's wear.
Yet none can say
We did not praise
It even in
Its saddest days.

Yes, if you think
We did not claim
We loved the old
Car still the same,
And swear it was
As good as new,
Then ask the man
We sold it to.

FLOWERS FOR THE LIVING

In all probability the dead can't get much kick out of the flowers that are strewn over their graves after they have seen the last light on earth. This of course brings up the subject of flowers for the living.

One particular thing is brought to mind at this season of the year at the suggestion of flowers for the living. We have in mind the hundreds of school children on their way to school at morning and noon with their arms full of flowers or at least some little sprig of blossoms for "dear teacher."

School days are nearly over for the year but if you have the opportunity glance about you and draw some conclusion as to who gets the flowers while living. Sweethearts may receive a corsage or spray while interest is most keen before the final knot is tied but the school teacher lives in a world of flowers from the time of the first bud to the end of school. If you like flowers it may be to your pleasure to become a school teacher.

RAINY DAYS

There was a man who was wondrous wise and prayed for rain when it was dry. And he got rain in abundance. And it followed that the rain did not cease when he believed it should and hence he was displeased with the weather. But his displeasure had nothing to do with the weather. It just doesn't happen that way.

Just a little bit more rain or a little bit more sunshine than pleases us should not give way for grumbling about the weather. Remember that someone is pleased with it. If it rains the umbrella man is profiting. If it is hot the bathing pools flourish. If it is cold the clothing man and the coal dealer is satisfied. So why grumble? Remember the words of the poet: Into each life some rain must fall.

FAITH IN HUMAN NATURE

When the United States Army man who ascended in a balloon to an altitude of forty-two thousand feet decided to start back to earth, he pulled the valve cord, and at once the bag began to drop. To check it, he began to attach parachutes to articles of equipment and drop them over the side.

The parachutes were designed to fall at sixteen feet a second, the same rate as the large chutes used by flyers, but the bag was falling so much more rapidly that when he dropped things over the side, they appeared to fly straight up in the air, because he went past them so fast. "It was queer to see twenty-five-pound steel bottles apparently flying upward," he said, as reported in Popular Mechanics.

At eight thousand feet he caught sight of a marsh beyond, and found that he would land in a swamp. The bag was falling at eighteen hundred feet a minute, which is twice the safe landing speed in a parachute; so he finally was forced to leave his ship. He jumped, pulled the rip cord of his parachute, and drifted downward. He landed more than one hundred and ten miles from the starting point.

Before the start, the flyer prepared a typewritten slip and an empty envelope, to be attached to each article that he had planned to drop, with instructions to the finders to fill in the slips and return them to him by mail. His faith in human nature was the cause of considerable amusement at the field. But within a few days after the flight, five of the seven articles—all but one oxygen cylinder and the oxygen-heater battery—had been found and notices returned to him.—Forward

"More than half of the plate glass used in the United States goes into the manufacture of automobiles," says Popular Mechanics.

We haven't as yet heard of any special services for the laying of the cornerstone of the new Hilltop bank building. This would afford a big display for the Hilltop. We hereby submit a plea for bigger and better cornerstone layings for Hilltop buildings in the future. An expedition under Herbert W. Krieger, ethnologist of the National Museum, has discovered certain types of stone implements through the region between the Yukon and southeastern Alaska, which indicate that there has been "uniform stone culture" in this country. In the interior, which is inhabited by Indians, signs of former Eskimo occupation were found, and there are current stories of battles between the Eskimos and Indians for the country in earlier times. Carved ivories were examined which are relics of a coast tribe with an art different from any other in Alaska. Mr. Krieger finds that the folklore of the Alaskan Indians is dying out, and that old ceremonies no longer have any meaning to the younger members of the tribes.

Have you ever thought of your local Hilltop merchants as business advisors? Have you ever realized that when you buy of them you get the benefit of their friendship and advice—that oftentimes they can and will protect your purchases by telling you the plain facts about merchandise?

When you buy out of your community you usually deal with strangers who are interested chiefly in getting your money. True, they give you something for it; but if they would talk it over with you as freely as your local dealer does, there are many times when your purchase would be differently and more economically made.

Just think it ovre and give your local Hilltop merchant a chance to be your friend. He'll thank you for the opportunity, and you will profit by it.

Very Neat and Very Smart Are Tailored Linens for Children

Much enthusiasm is expressed for linen this season. Both the sheer handkerchief quality and the heavier grades are sponsored. Of course, it is the latter which fashionists are using for playtime frocks.

Youngsters are looking very smart and very tailored and very neat in linens cut along simplest one-piece lines as shown in the picture. Clever little dresses, on the order of this one, showing a touch of handwork so as to individualize them, are the "last word" from Paris. They need not necessarily be of linen, although linen is first choice, for cotton poplin, wash broadcloth and pique are also highly regarded.

The linen frock illustrated emphasizes its claim to up-to-date style in that its unique zigzag seams, are fagoted as you see. There is a perfect craze for fagoting this season. Everybody's doing it. And it's being lavished on grownups' clothes as well as children's. It shows off its prettiest on solid-colored voiles, sheer linens and such, also in connection with the dresser chiffons and georgettes. Now that fagoting is so popular, mothers who make their childrens' clothes need not be in a quandry as to how to finish seams and hems, the answer is—fagot them. Do this either with self-colored or contrasting thread.

Perfectly charming are this season's linen ensemble costumes for little girls. A favorite model is a plaited skirt with a sewed-on-at-the-waistline sleeveless blouse top. This may be of any tone, gray, buff, white or colors. The jacket, also of linen, to be worn with it, is made either of gay print or of some contrasting color.

Many interesting trimmings decorate these heavier linens. There is rick-rack braid, for instance, it is being cunningly worked into flowers and motifs which are then appliqued to the linen. Soutache braiding on pique or heavy linen is used quite a little. Appliques are particularly favored. These appear in every shape and form, although it would seem as if geometric designs predominate.

Designers of children's apparel are taking every advantage of color and design that youth will allow. The brightest lacquer shades are combined, such as a green coat over a yellow frock, or perhaps a flowered cretonne jacket with a rose of French blue dress. The younger generation will also wear much navy with red this summer.

The Sandman Story

By Martha Martin

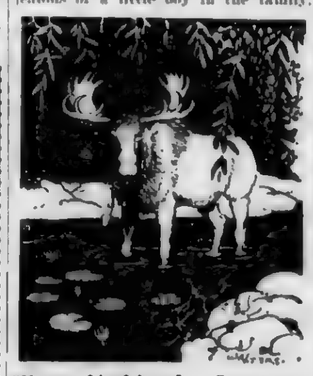
THE MIGHTY MOOSE

"Greatest of all the members of the deer family," said the Sandman, "is the moose. He is the most splendid of all the deer in the great wide world and he is splendid in looks and in strength and in brains.

"The moose is called Mooswa in Indian talk, which means wood eater. For the moose love strange things to eat, you see.

"Sometimes the timber wolves fight this mighty monarch, but oh, the moose is brave and few can win a victory over him.

"As you know, he loves the great northern parts of the country and he loves the woods and the quiet streams away from people.



"If he has been taught from a baby moose to be with people he is not afraid.

"But he is not anxious to take any chances if he has not been used to people. For to him people are creatures with guns and guns cannot be fought against.

"The moose is very tall when he is full grown. He is brownish gray in color and he runs very quickly. The baby moose is only seventy-five pounds in weight when born, which isn't much considering that later on a moose becomes so enormous.

"A mother moose keeps her little calf with her for some time, and he follows her about, walking everywhere after her, though once in a while she leaves him covered up in the thick woods while she goes off marketing by herself.

"If the baby moose is a boy she is very careful that his father shall not see him, for a father moose is very jealous of a little boy in the family, fearing the boy may become a greater moose than he is.

"Mooswa Lived in a Low Swamp near a Wooded River."

"It is when the boy is but a baby, too, that the father is so jealous, and so the mother keeps them seperated so that her darling baby moose will not be killed by its father.

"But the moose I'm going to tell you about was named Mooswa the Great.

"He had lived and roamed the woods where it was cold and wild, but still where people came, more and more every year, with great guns to hunt the moose family.

"Many members of his family had been moving farther and farther north. They were brave, but they did not want to take any chances and they did not consider guns fair enemies somehow.

"So they had left and Mooswa the Great had few companions or even few relatives in his neighborhood.

"Mooswa lived in a low swamp near a wooded river and there the willow twigs, which Mooswa loved so dearly, were delicious. These were fine in the winter time and in the autumn.

"Into the heart of the great king of animals had come love, and he wondered if the beautiful Miss Moose, whom he had seen and admired would become his mate.

"So he went, his great heart beating foolishly, to see Miss Moose and he told her of his love.

"'I so wish you would do me the great honor to become my mate,' he said.

"'It would make me so happy to wander with you through this winter which is now approaching. We could travel far, we could see so much. Perhaps we could go farther north, where the guns are fewer and yet where still there are willow swamps.

"'We could see so much of the great forest world and of the deep underbrush lands.'

"Miss Moose had for some time admired Mooswa the Great. She had admired every bit of his splendid twelve hundred pounds of moose strength and beauty and when she heard his splendid voice making love to her it was all she could do to keep from crying—so happy was she.

"So off went Mooswa the Great with his bride. He shed his shovel-like antlers in the early winter and began growing new ones, but all the time they wandered through the snow, farther north where guns would not put an end to their happiness."

Baked Rice

3 cups cooked rice,
2 cups tomatoes,
1 onion chopped fine,
2 tablespoons bacon drippings,
½ cup cheese cut fine,
Salt and pepper.

Brown onion and pepper in bacon drippings. Arrange in greased pan alternate layers of rice with cheese and seasoning. Pour tomatoes over and bake in moderate oven until heated through and cheese is melted. Left over mush may be used in place of rice.

Fudge

2 cups sugar,
2 tablespoons cocoa,
2 tablespoons corn syrup,
2-3 cup milk,
A pinch of salt,
2 tablespoons butter,
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Mix cocoa, sugar and salt, add corn syrup and milk. Place over fire, stir until sugar is dissolved. Do not stir after the mixture starts to boil. Remove from the fire when it will form a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Add butter after removing from fire, do not stir. When lukewarm add the vanilla and beat until it will hold its shape when dropped from a spoon. Pour into a greased pan and cut in squares.

Pineapple Upside Down Cake

1 large can of crushed or sliced pineapple drained,
2 tablespoons butter,
1 cup brown sugar.

The Cake

2 cups flour,
2 teaspoons baking powder,
½ teaspoon salt,
1 cup sugar,
½ cup butter or margarine,
2 eggs,
1 teaspoon vanilla,
½ cup milk.

Sift the flour with the baking powder and salt twice. Cream the butter and sugar thoroughly and stir in the well beaten egg yolks. Add the flour and milk alternately, mixing well. Then fold in lightly the stiffly beaten egg white and the flavoring.

Melt the butter in a large frying pan, cover with brown sugar and add pineapple. Pour in the cake batter and bake in a moderate oven for about three-quarters of an hour. Turn out upside down on a serving dish. The top may be decorated with candied or maraschino cherries or whipped cream or both, but it is good enough as it comes from the pan.

Applesauce

Wash apples, quarter and core, put in sauce pan and cover with water, cook until done. Mash through sieve Add sugar and cinnamon, to taste.

Annual Hilltop Picnic Wednesday, Aug. 22

STATE OF OHIO HAS BIG PAY DAY

It's pay day for the State of Ohio. Tax notices were sent out by State Treasurer Buckley to about 24,000 corporations in Ohio and outside the state covering the corporation franchise tax due for 1928. This is payable within thirty days following June 15.

But pay day for the Buckeye State is not just a matter of getting enough to pay the grocery bill and the over due installment on the gasoline buggy. Instead it amounts in this case to some $7,000,000.

And from all reports from the treasurer the funds were getting down to the bottom of the pit. But a few scheckles were left in the money bin. But, says the head of the finance system, the shifting of the payment of the corporation taxes to this time of the year will make a more even flow of cash into the treasury and furthermore he wishes to state he does not like to penalize any firm for delayed payments.

RITES FOR MRS. JONES TO BE HELD TODAY

Will Be Staged in Westgate Park, Near Last Year's Site.

Wednesday, August 22, is the tentative date set for the annual Hilltop picnic sponsored by the Hilltop Business Men's association. This time was decided upon by the members of the picnic committee at their meting on Tuesday night at the Matsonia.

The picnic will be held in Westgate park this year. This is just a short distance from the place where it was held last year. The park is in good condition and is well shaded by a large grove of trees. In addition there is a large cleared section that may be taken in by the picnicers.

There will be no ox roast at the picnic this year. The added feature of the cash prize drawings on the five Saturday nights before the picnic and the capital cash prizes to be given on the night of the picnic will take the place of the free ox roast sponsored by the association on former years.

It is the plan of the committee in charge to make the outing an old time basket picnic. Each family will bring its prepared picnic lunch. Plenty of entertainment will be furnished during the whole time on the picnic grounds.

SPEEDING CARS

Last week an interurban car and an automobile collided on West Broad street. Weather conditions may have been the cause of the accident. At any rate the automobile was damaged and the lives of those in the auto were endangered.

Whether the interurban car was going beyond the speed it should within the city limits is hard to tell. At any rate it appears that these cars travel too fast within the limits of the city.

A few weeks ago one of the cars on the same line jumped the track on Sullivant avenue when it went to clear the switch. The car ran off the track into an automobile parked along the side. A passer by might have been killed had he been present at the time of the accident. This accident was evidently caused by the speed which threw the car from the rails.

We contend that because of the excessive weight of the interurban cars they should be required to slow down while in the city limits.

FLOWERS FOR THE LIVING

In all probability the dead can't get much kick out of the flowers that are strewn over their graves after they have seen the last light on earth. This of course brings up the subject of flowers for the living.

One particular thing is brought to mind at this season of the year as the suggestion of flowers for the living. We have in mind the hundreds of school children on their way to school at morning and noon with their arms full of flowers or at least some little sprig of blossoms for "dear teacher."

School days are nearly over for the year but if you have the opportunity glance about you and draw some conclusion as to who gets the flowers while living. Sweethearts may receive a corsage or spray while interest is most keen before the final knot is tied but the school teacher lives in a world of flowers from the time of the first bud to the end of school. If you like flowers it may be to your pleasure to become a school teacher.

RAINY DAYS

There was a man who was wondrous wise and prayed for rain when it was dry. And he got rain in abundance. And it followed that the rain did not cease when he believed it should and hence he was displeased with the weather. But his displeasure had nothing to do with the weather. It just doesn't happen that way.

Just a little bit more rain or a little bit more sunshine than pleases us should not give way for grumbling about the weather. Remember that someone is pleased with it. If it rains the umbrella man is profiting. If it is hot the bathing pools flourish. If it is cold the clothing man and the coal dealer is satisfied. So why grumble?

The Hilltop Record

PLAYGROUNDS and Bible school will be big helpers for mother.

Of Interest to the People of the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. XII. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, June 21, 1928 No. 8

3 Hilltop Playgrounds Are Ready for Children

Holton and Glenwood Opened Wednesday; Westgate on Saturday.

Two Hilltop playgrounds were opened for the summer on Wednesday and the others will be opened not later than Saturday according to Arthur Raymond, director of recreation.

Glenwood and Holton park playgrounds were opened yesterday in the group of 19 over the city.

W. C. Dyer, Mary Moler and Irene McKinley will be in charge at the Glenwood lot this season. Mr. Dyer, principal at Reeb Ave. school, and Miss Moler were at Glenwood last season. Miss McKinley is a resident of the Hilltop living at 159 Belvidere Ave.

Wayne Helfrich, Margaret Holmes and Agnes Warner will be located at the Holton grounds. This will be the first season for them at Holton.

At Westgate park Phil Bedlock and Miss Ardine Wildermuth will be in charge. Miss Wildermuth was at Westgate last year.

Frank Shugart, 533 S. Park Ave., and Neil Thompson will supervise Dana playground. McKinley ground will be in charge of William Waite and Miss Lurie Grim.

Miss Dorothy K. Payne, 73 S. Eureka Ave., passed the examination as class "C" supervisor. She will be at one of the other playgrounds.

The playgrounds will be open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. Games and various kinds of recreation will be supervised by those in charge at the grounds. The children will also be instructed in recreational work.

Mayor Thomas and Director Raymond addressed the group of supervisors at a meeting on Tuesday afternoon in the council chambers at the city hall.

OLD SOL AND WOMEN HAVE THEIR DAY

June 21—longest day of the year

It's here again and with it comes a bountiful supply of warm weather to tell the world that we live in the temperate zone and that the sun has wended its way as far north as is possible and will now return to the south.

Even though old sol has turned southward again the warmest rays of summer are yet to come. The reason for the continued warmness is that the earth which has been in the more direct rays of the sun for the past few weeks has retained a great part of its heat and this will be used to help old sol keep things warm during July and August in this section.

But it is unfair to devote a whole story on the longest day of the year to the sun alone. The women must receive mention herein. For it is an established fact that today is the day the women talk the most.

CAR HITS WOMAN; LEG FRACTURED

Miss Emma Burns, 30, of 147 S. Park Ave., received a fractured leg on Monday night when she was pinned between a street car and an automobile at State street and Grant avenue. She was attempting to board the car when the auto of Thomas Hubbard, 2000 McAllister Ave., struck her. She was treated in Grant hospital.

The car driven by Pearl Watson, 502 S. Hague Ave., collided with another car on the National Highway, one-half mile east of Rome on Wednesday night of last week. Dorothy Hillyer, aged 20, of 84 Dakota Ave., a passenger of the other car received a knee fracture.

LIGHTS TO BE ERECTED SOON AT AIRPORT

Companion of Lindy Visitor at Hilltop Field, Compliments New Airport.

Erection of the lights at the new Columbus Airport will be started by the last of the week according to E. L. Harris, president of the Commercial Airways Transit association of Ohio. The lights will cost from $8000 to $10,000. They will make the field safe for landing at night.

The first hangar is nearing completion. An office and an administration building will be erected within the next few weeks. The building will include sleeping quarters and large rest rooms for the accomodation of the flyers. A well will also be drilled soon.

Work on the four runways is being completed now. They will make a landing and taking off possible at all points of the compass.

A very distinguished visitor landed at the Hilltop field on last Friday. "Bud" Guerney, close friend of Col. Charles Lindbergh landed at the field on his way from New York to St. Louis. He complimented the men at the Hilltop field on the condition of the field. He came direct to the Hilltop field and failed to see Norton field. Guerney took Lindbergh's route in the Air Mail Service when Lindbergh gave it up for his trans-Atlantic hop. He has always been a close friend of Lindy.

The air mail planes will probably begin landing regularly at the Hilltop field as soon as the lights are installed to meet the requirements of the government flying service.

Planes are at the airport at present for the purpose of giving the public thrills in the air if they so desire at the rate of two cents per pound. Councilman and Mrs. Floyd Green took a short trip in the air a few days ago at the Hilltop field in a Ryan brougham. It was their first ride in the air.

No definite report from the city council airport committee, of which Mr. Green is chairman, has been made as yet. The committee has been investigating several sites in the districts near the city for the proposed air terminal of Columbus. The Johnson farm on West Broad street is one of the possible sites.

OFFER MANY PRIZES AT GROCERS' PICNIC

Drye, Mrs. Flora Decker, Mrs. A. C. Market, Mrs. J. H. Drumm, Mrs. Daniel Jerman, Mrs. J. A. Moore and Mrs. R. L. Jacobs.

Miss Mary Gretchen Jones is spending two weeks at the home of J. W. Durr, 41 Midland Ave.

Annual Hilltop Picnic Wednesday, Aug. 22

Will Be Staged in Westgate Park, Near Last Year's Site.

Wednesday, August 22, is the tentative date set for the annual Hilltop picnic sponsored by the Hilltop Business Men's association. This time was decided upon by the members of the picnic committee at their meeting on Tuesday night at the Matsonia.

The picnic will be held in Westgate park this year. This is just a short distance from the place where it was held last year. The park is in good condition and is well shaded by a large grove of trees. In addition there is a large cleared section that may be taken in by the picnicers.

There will be no ox roast at the picnic this year. The added feature of the cash prize drawings on the five Saturday nights before the picnic and the capital cash prizes to be given on the night of the picnic will take the place of the free ox roast sponsored by the association on former years.

It is the plan of the committee in charge to make the outing an old time basket picnic. Each family will bring its prepared picnic lunch. Plenty of entertainment will be furnished during the whole time on the picnic grounds. Contests in which both old and young will participate will be conducted during the afternoon. There will be no speakers.

Complete plans for the baby contest and baby parade will be announced in an early edition of the Hilltop Record. The affair will be in the hands of competent Hilltop physicians. Prizes will be awarded the winners.

STATE OF OHIO HAS BIG PAY DAY

It's pay day for the State of Ohio. Tax notices were sent out by State Treasurer Buckley to about 24,000 corporations in Ohio and outside the state covering the corporation franchise tax due for 1928. This is payable within thirty days following June 15.

But pay day for the Buckeye State is not just a matter of getting enough to pay the grocery bill and the over due installment on the gasoline buggy. Instead it amounts in this case to some $7,000,000.

And from all reports from the treasurer the funds were getting down to the bottom of the pit. But a few scheckles were left in the money bin. But, says the head of the finance system, the shifting of the payment of the corporation taxes to this time of the year will make a more even flow of cash into the treasury and furthermore he wishes to state he does not like to penalize any firm for delayed payments.

RITES FOR MRS. JONES TO BE HELD TODAY

Was Former National President of Ladies' Auxiliary of Letter Carriers Group.

Mrs. Ella B. Jones, 47, wife of Forney C. Jones, 24 S. Richardson Ave., died early Tuesday morning in Grant hospital following an operation for tumor.

Rev. H. C. Hutchison, pastor of Hoge Memorial Presbytrian church, left early in the week for the meeting of the Ohio Synod, Synodical and the School of Missions at Wooster. He is a delegate from the Columbus Presbytery. The meeting began on Monday and will last through Sunday. Rev. Hutchison will return on Friday, however.

What A Whale of A Difference Just A Few Years Make

What's the price of Columbus real estate? How far will a few thousand dollars go in the real estate game today?

Everyone has heard of the price the Dutch paid for Manhattan a few hundred years ago. Some beads and bright trinkets were exchanged for land that now supports sky scrapers and couldn't be purchased with all the beads in the world.

But to come a little closer home we might give you a little real estate story right from the Hilltop. And furthermore no centuries have passed since the time of the transaction.

Would you give $8000 for the land enclosed by Richardson avenue on the east, Warren avenue on the west, Broad street on the south and Steele avenue on the north?

Just such a transaction was made on March 27, 1906. The land was transferred from Eliza G. Rodgers, mother of A. D. and Archie Rodgers, to Joseph S. Van De Bow of Cleveland, Ohio.

It was described as being "lot number 23, as the same as is shown on Plat 'B' partition of William B. Sullivant's estate" and "the party of the first part agrees to sell the above described premises for the sum of nine thousand dollars. . . ."

The territory that sold for $8000 just 25 years ago now contains eight blocks and approximately 150 lots for building purposes. If the land stood cleared today with the present property values of the Hilltop in force it would be worth about $200,000. This is an increase in value of approximately $191,000 in 25 years. The improved real estate as it stands today is worth over [illegible]

Now look back and regret that you passed such a bargain by.

West High Class Song

By FRIEDA STEELE

Following are the words of the Class song of the June graduating class of West High school. The song was written by Miss Frieda Steele, a member of the class.

Our high school days are ended, and those joys are o'er,
We will not forget them but love them
more.
We all worked together, each a place
to fill,
So we now can conquer, if we say
"I will."

West High School is the best school of all the schools we know,
And twenty-eight is the best class of all that come and go.
Though ev'ry school tie we never, our hearts will not forget,
For we will e'er remember those happy days we spent.

As we begin our life work, with the strength we have gained,
We will spare no effort to uphold our name.
As we go striving onward to our high est aim,
We can only hope that we shall meet again.

HOW I MAKE

By Readers of the Hilltop Record

Veal Loaf

Mix the following ingredients together thoroughly: Three pounds of ground veal, one chopped onion, two cupfuls of bread crumbs, three teaspoonfuls of salt, two eggs, the juice of a lemon or one cupful of tomato juice and three-fourths of a pound of fat pork ground. Make into a long roll, place in a baking pan, rub with lemon juice and bake in a hot oven for an hour, basting often with the juices from the pan. Serve with:

Apple Pudding

Grate six greening apples, add eight crumbed macaroons, one cupful of milk, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, five beaten eggs and a few grains of salt. Butter a mold, pour the mixture into it, dot with butter and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Unmold and serve with plain cream.

Frozen Custard

2 cups scalded milk,
1 cup sugar,
5 eggs,
1 quart thin cream,
2 teaspoons vanilla,
Few grains salt,

Make a custard of milk, sugar, eggs and salt. Strain and cool, add cream and vanilla. Freeze like vanilla ice cream.

Wade and his friends did not seek adherents among Fair's friends on the ground that Barker ought to have Stella if he wanted her. Far from it. Wade conferred with Barker secretly and got his support by promising to turn over Stella as soon as he was chief; then he and his friends sought recruits by saying that Fair was old and no longer capable of leading, and there was a lot of truth in this. Luckily for Stella, however, Jack Green, who had always worshiped the child with doglike devotion, overheard the bargaining between Barker and Wade and reported it to Fair; and Fair promptly sent him East to find the Mortons.

A week or ten days after Green had gone, Fair took Stella into his confidence. "Bob, dear," he began. "I've got something to say to you. What would you think if I told you that for years I had been doing you a great wrong and that now you and I must both pay the penalty?"

Stella looked up with a laugh. She thought that Fair was joking. "I'd think that you were dreaming, daddy dear," she said. "You do me a wrong? Why! you couldn't."

"But I have done you one—a continuing one. I'm not joking, dear."

Again the girl laughed, though a little uneasily. Fair's tones sounded ominous. Still she could not take them very seriously. "Confess, then, quick," she said; "and I'll give you absolution." Then, glimpsing the expression on Fair's face, her heart sank and she ran to him.

"Don't mind my nonsense, daddy, dear," she pleaded, with her arms about his neck. "I don't know what you're talking about, but I do know that you never did me any wrong, big or little—unless perhaps you didn't spank me enough when I was small. You saved my life when my real father died and you've been more than a father to me ever since, you darling."

"Yes," Fair admitted sadly. "I've taken care of you, because I loved you. I loved you too much to give you up to your own people—the people who would have cared for you as you ought to have been cared for. And now—"

But Stella could not let him finish. "Wh—what on earth do you mean, daddy?" she cried.

"I mean that when your father was dying I promised to send you back to his people in Virginia, and I meant to keep my word. I wasn't a bandit and a thief then, and—"

"A bandit and a thief!—"

"That's what I am, Bob. That's what we all are—miserable scoundrels who ought to hanged twice over—"

"Daddy!"

"That's what we are, Bob." Drearily Fair repeated his assertion. "I know you think differently. Not the least part of the wrong I've done you has been to let you grow up thinking differently. But you've got to know the truth now. You think we are a sort of romantic soldiery, waging war against tyrannical police who have been hounded on by rich men, whom we are justified in robbing in return. It's all wrong, dear; all wrong. Some of us may have been started on the wrong path by some sort of oppression (I was myself); but most of us were wrong from the first; and none of us have any real excuse for the crimes we have committed, none of us, none of us."

Stella listened, wide-eyed, dumb with amazement. She was not ignorant of world events outside of her valley; newspapers, magazines and novels had all been brought into it from time to time; and she had read them and absorbed them. But she had done so from the wrong angle. Since childhood she had listened to the tales told by the outlaws of police tyranny and treachery of which they were the innocent victims, and she had naturally sympathized with the tellers and had become firmly convinced that all outlaws were heroes and that all officers of the law were tools of a cruel and vicious code of laws framed to enable a few wicked men to crush those who were brave enough to stand up against them.

To Stella, Fair's words came as a terrible, an unbelievable shock— a shock that later, when she absorbed it, would shatter the very foundations of her life. She could not take it all in a moment. It seemed to her that Fair must be wrong somewhere, though she could not find words to combat what he said.

But at last she answered, feebly but all womanly. "Well, never mind, daddy," she said. "I'll never believe that you did anything wrong to anybody. And as for not sending me away, I suppose you couldn't because those hateful police wouldn't let you—and that's the only good thing I've ever heard of their doing." Desperately the girl was trying to take the blow lightly.

Fair nodded. He knew how severe the shock must have been to Stella and he gladly followed her lead. "Yes," he said, "that's my only excuse. I couldn't send you back at once, not with safety to you or me. And after a year you had grown too dear to me. . . . But now the hour of punishment is at hand."

"What do you mean?" Stella did not understand.

"I mean that you are not a child any more. You have grown up. You have become a woman—and a very lovely one, if you were properly dressed. When you put on those woman's clothes that Barker brought you a month ago I realized it. That was why I made you take them off quick before anyone saw you. I was afraid. But I was too late. Barker had seen you and wanted to marry you—"

"Barker?" Stella blushed. But she laughed scornfully. "Wasn't he ridiculous? He's as old as you, dads? And, anyhow, I don't want to get married. I'm not a girl really. I'm a boy. I decided to be a boy years ago; and I've never changed."

"Not in your own mind, Bob. But in other people's—Barker's for instance."

"Oh, darn Barker!"

"Darning him won't do any good, Bob. He's not given up the hope of getting you. And if it wasn't he, it would be some one else. You—you're not safe here any longer, Bob. I can't be sure that I can protect you—not even for a week ahead. You must go away." Fair's voice quavered.

"Then you'll go with me!" Stella's chin set mutinously.

"I can't go with you. The minute Barker knew that I had gone, he'd set the police on my track, and I couldn't possibly escape. They'd catch and hang me in a week."

"Ha—hang you? Oh, daddy!"

"There's no chance for anything else." Fair pushed his advantage. "It's up to you, Bob. I can stay here and protect you as long as possible—till one of Barker's friends shoots me down. Or I can go with you and get caught. Or I can send you alone—"

"But—but—" Stella was weakening; "I can't go alone—"

"I don't mean really alone, of course. I've sent word to your people—"

"Daddy!"

"Yes. Don't breathe a word to a soul. I sent Jack Green East two weeks ago to find them and tell them to come for you. They may turn up any day. That's why—"

"But suppose they don't come? Suppose they don't want me?"

"They will want you. They're Virginians. And I know the Morton breed. I was a Virginia gentleman myself once. Oh, yes! They'll come."

"But—oh—"

"They'll love you and make you one of the family; and you'll live the life you were born to. Later you'll marry some good, honest Virginia boy—"

"I won't! I won't! I'm going to stay a boy myself."

"Yes, you will, some day. But we can leave that to time. You needn't marry anyone till you want to, you know. But once you're away from this nest of d—d thieves and murderers—"

"Daddy," Stella put her small browned fingers on his lips.

Fair dropped back in his chair. "Oh, all right," he said. "Call them what you like. The point is that Green may be getting back nearly any day and that I wanted you to know and be prepared. And when your relative comes you'll have to go quick. Barker's spy system is good; and he's likely to find out what's up if your man has to wait around long. Now go to bed, child. It's late, and—"

But Stella shook her head. "I'm not sleepy, dad," she demurred. "I feel as if I'd never sleep again. I don't want to go to bed. I want to know—so many things. You must tell me about them, daddy. Please! Please! Pretty please!"

Far into the night Stella and Fair talked.

CHAPTER III

After Fair's startling revelation the days once more took up their course, as days will and must, superficially peaceful and quiet on the surface, but, for Stella at least, wildly turbulent below it.

She did not want to leave the only home that she could remember, but—she did want to see the big, far-off world of which she had heard so much. She fingered her boy's clothes, wondering how she could ever bear to hamper herself in women's garments, but—she dreamed also of soft robes and gleaming colors, and of the bright lights of the ballroom. She could not bear to leave her foster father, but—the idea of playing with boys of her own age and perhaps finding among them one who might l—lo—. But at this point she always pulled herself up short with a red, red blush; the idea of a boy making love to her was too new as yet to be readily entertained.

Meanwhile Fair was worrying because Green had not come back. He could feel the insubordination in the band growing, and he knew that at any moment it might flare into open revolt. Once Stella was gone he would welcome—would incite—a showdown; but until she was gone he could only walk delicately.

If he could have kept the men busy he would have been less concerned, for busy men are far less likely to make trouble than are idle ones. But somehow all his plans for raids of any kind were not ready or had fizzled out completely; and he strongly suspected that Barker had been instrumental in bringing about this condition in the expectation of making the men discontented.

Then, abruptly, to Fair's delight Barker sent him word of some Mexicans who wanted him to run a shipment of rifles and ammunition across the line into Mexico and take back in payment a shipment of whiskey. The transaction would be enormously profitable to both parties; and Fair jumped at it, though ordinarily he would have considered it rather below his dignity—something like "taking candy from kids," and all that.

Easy as it was, however, it would get Wade away from camp—he decided at once to put Wade in charge of the expedition—for a day or two at least; and it would restore the morale of some of the men. It did not occur to him that it would especially interest Stella.

But it did. Stella had been finding the suspense of waiting for Green anything but pleasant; once she had decided to go East, she wanted to go right away. And now that the chance offered for one more night ride (undoubtedly the last that she could hope to see) she made up her mind to go, willy nilly.

The ethics of the expedition did not trouble her at all; in fact, it did not even occur to her that any question of ethics was involved. The only thing that troubled her was in regard to Fair. She knew that he would object to her going; and, though she was sure that she could persuade him to let her go, she shrank from the necessity. Why not just go and let him find out later? Really, there was no risk to her; nobody had ever hurt her; therefore nobody ever would. Her arguments were those of reckless youth the world over.

She could not guess that Wade had noticed how she was moping, and that he and Barker had between them hatched up a scheme for the purpose of getting her out of the Roost and safely away without Fairs' knowledge.

To make assurance doubly sure, Wade applied a prod during the three or four days that passed while Wade and his men waited for the word from Barker that the rifles had reached Barker's place (known as the J-B ranch) and were ready to be started for the border. At Wade's orders sundry of his friends dropped remarks in Stella's hearing in regard to thrilling adventures that were likely to happen on the trip, knowing well that the promise of adventure was the bait at which she would most eagerly snap.

The results appeared when the word from Barker came, and Wade and his chosen ten met in the corral in the early dawn to saddle their horses for an immediate start; for at that moment Stella slipped to Wade's side.

"Bill," she pleaded, "can't you take me with you?"

Bill looked at her and sniffed. "We ain't takin' no ladies on this trip," he announced.

"Ladies!" Stella blazed in sudden fury. "Who are you calling ladies?"

"You! Leastways, that's what Fair thinks. I guess he wants you to stay at home and learn to sew."

"Sew! Me?"

"Sure. What else? That's what girls do."

"I'm not a girl, I'm a boy!" Stella's words were bold, but most unboyish tears lay very close behind her eyes.

"Not by a dang sight you ain't. Pants are all right to swell around in; but they don't make a girl into a boy. This trip's likely to be excitin'; and when it comes right down to trouble a boy's worth three girls."

The tears welled into Stella's eyes, but she winked them back. "Not three girls like me," she protested.

Bill snatched at the psychological moment. "Well, maybe worth only two girls like you," he chuckled. "Shucks, Bob, I'd like to take you. But I can't risk it. Fair'd kill me if anything happened to you. He would so."

"Nothing's going to happen to me. Please, Bill."

"No I can't— Oh, shucks! D'you know that little Charley Harris is sick?"

"No." Stella did not see the connection; but her tones were breathless.

"Well, he is. He's too sick to go with us today. I was just goin' to pick somebody for his place. But I ain't told Fair about it. An', of course, it'll still be pretty dark when we report as we go out."

"Oh! Take me along in Charley's place."

"Nix. Not on your life. I ain't disobeyin' orders none. . . . 'Course, if somebody came along in Charley's place without my knowin' it I couldn't well be expected to send him back after we got fifty miles away."

"Oh, good for you, Bill! Thank you."

"Thanks nothin'. You ain't got anything to thank me for. An' I ain't got any more time to waste. You run along an' let me be." Bill turned away.

So did Stella. But when the raiding party halted at Fair's door in the dim of light of the dawn to report their departure and receive any last minute instructions; and a little later when they rode away, out beneath the waterfall, there were ten of them instead of nine, in addition to the leader, Charley's place had been filled.

Fair did not miss Stella until hours after she had gone. That is to say, he missed her but thought nothing of it. Stella seldom appeared at breakfast; usually she was up and out long before the rest of the camp opened its collective eyes. Even when she did not return at midday dinner he was not alarmed, supposing that she was chatting with the women or playing with the children somewhere in the valley. And in the late afternoon Green turned up with the big news; and he and Fair had to talk things out at length.

A BAD STREET

One of the roughest spots in any of the streets in Columbus is located on the Hilltop and on the main thoroughfare of the city. The spot is in West Broad street between Richardson avenue and Hague Avenue.

The center of the street is so rough it is practically impossible for a car to drive over it without breaking a tire or sliding to the side of the street. The street is in such a condition on either side of the car tracks for about one and one-half feet.

Such a bad place in the street is dangerous because passing cars may be jolted aside and strike another car or person. It also throws all the traffic to one narrow line when going between Richardson and Hague avenues.

The eastern end of Broad street toward the State buildings is not in good shape. For several years this section, which is in the heart of the Hilltop business district, has been continually torn up and repairs being made. Since Broad street is on the National highway we advocate a paving program for this rough section of the Hilltop.

HILLTOP TRAFFIC

The Hilltop is yet but a community and claims none of the qualifications of a metropolis but there is one matter that is deserving of consideration here even though this is but an outlying part of the city.

Traffic conditions in the vicinity of Broad street and Park avenue as on other nearby streets present a situation to be dealt with immediately.

At evenings and on Saturday nights it is practically impossible for a person to cross the street in this section with out making himself a target for a passing motorist. And it is needless to say that in the evening rush there are none who go at a moderate rate of speed and pedestrians lives are always endangered as well as their time lost in trying to cross the street.

A light was placed at Broad street and Hague avenue a few months ago and has been found to be a relief to that section and a great factor in protecting the children in the vicinity of West Broad Street school. It is our belief that another light placed in action at Broad street and Park avenue would relieve the situation here. We strongly favor such a move. There may be objections on the ground that there are too many lights at present but this can surely be shadowed by the fact that it may mean lives and time saved.

The West Side traffic within the boundaries of Central and Sandusky, and Broad and Sullivant, is controlled by eight traffic lights, whereas the Hilltop has two, the one at Richardson and Sullivant being a school light.

Another feature of the Hilltop traffic that should be corrected is the double parking on the main streets and the parallel parking on some of the side streets leading north and south from Broad street. A very narrow path is left for the cars to pass in. It is no wonder that a few fenders are scarred every day while the cars are left on the side streets.

SWIMMING TIME

Swimming time is here again and has already claimed its first victim.

It may be a foolish idea, this old saying "never go near the water till you learn to swim" but if more people believed in it and would learn to swim under proper supervision there would be less accidents and fewer funerals due to drowning every season.

Close by are several good places to swim but herein lies the danger of all swimming. The places we have reference to are the Stone Quarry, Big Darby and the Scioto River. But for the most part these places are not well taken care of and very few ever go there. Then when help is really needed there is none to be had.

The "old swimmin' hole" is a dangerous place regardless of how famous it may be made by Hoosier poets. Step offs, undercurrents and quicksands may be present from one year to the next unknown to the swimmer.

Boys will be boys but parents should be a little more cautious about the places they allow their children to go bathing unaccompanied.

The man that joins an organization and pledges himself to be an asset and turns around and grumbles because he is asked to do something would have been more of an asset if his name had not been entered on the records of the organization. And it is surprising the number of this type that can be found.

It's about as bad to have the goods and not advertise as it is to advertise and not have the goods. The store that tells the people it gives service and doesn't live up to it's slogan is halfway out of business by the time it is started.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE BRAIN OF MAN

Some time ago a scientist kneeling on a rock on the eastern shores of the United States studied with intense care the first known footprints of a dinosaur.

Those footprints were made not less than ten million years ago when the hard rock upon which the record has been kept was soft and yielding sand.

Almost at the same time another scientist on the other side of the country was looking into the largest reflecting telescope that science has ever known and peering millions of miles farther into space than human eye had ever before penetrated.

For the first time new worlds were visible, new solar systems were looked upon.

Light which had been traveling for years at the stupendous rate of 186,280 miles per second flashed upon the observer's retina and told him its story of a world new to human knowledge.

Wonderful as is the instrument that pierces the unknown of the skies and interesting as are the footprints of that ancient beast, still more wonderful and far more interesting are the brains of those two men piercing time and distance to learn the lessons of the centuries and the far-off worlds.

To the man who bends over the impressioned stone all the millions of years since the dinosaur walked there, are as an open book. To the geologist the history of the world is as plain as the written tale or the branching of the family genealogy. Upon the blackboard he can sketch for you the story of our earth from far beyond the dinosaur down to the last layer of forest leaves. He can tell you the story of the ages with as great accuracy as he can recite the unimportances of yesterday.

It is the brain of man that is the most wondreful thing of which the finite knows. It is the ability to think, to reason, to put facts in their proper sequence and draw therefrom the logical conclusion, that surpasses any other of God's creatures.

It was the thinking power of man that made the telescope possible and brought it to its present efficiency. It was the thinking power of the human brain that has mapped out the past; placed upon the written page the accurate history of the earth and its inhabitants and made each one of us the heir of all the pages.

And yet there are men who pay more money to their barber than they do to the bookseller; who can find more enjoyment in the banalities of a "show" than in the pages of a history or the written thoughts of the world's great masters.

Why not devote some of the time you waste, or worse than waste, to the acquisition of the wonderful soul-stirring facts that other men and women have dug out of the earth or filched from the stars and written down for the world's enjoyment and betterment?

Good books are plenty and cheap. There is nothing in the world so low-priced as information, intelligence and wisdom. Five cents' worth of fact will be enough to keep you busy for a week if you give it the thought that properly belongs to it.

Republican Enters Race for Sheriff

CLARENCE S. RANCK

Mr. Ranck filed his petition for nomination as Republican candidate for sheriff late last week. He has been a Hilltop resident for the past three years and now resides at 77 Brinker Ave.

He is in the tire and battery and restaurant business on the East side. For 11 years he was a railroader and was with the city fire department for nine years.

Another Hilltop man filed for nomination for state representative on last Thursday. E. B. Eyler, 401 Midland Ave., desires the nomination on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Eyler is a contractor. His petition was signed by Henry E. Bradford, Walter J. Shapter, E. L. Kramer, Virginia Jones, C. E. Berridge and W. J. Dusenberry.

PURVEYORS OF WATER CARRY HEAVY LOADS

Around a fountain in one of the principal squares of Quioto assemble every morning the city's aguadores. These water porters differ from the less energetic ones of some South American cities in carrying their jars upon their backs instead of on the backs of mules. Their earthen jars are deep, have a wide mouth and hold about 40 liters.

The porter carries the jar on his shoulder, fastened with leather straps. He never detaches himself from his jar either to fill it or to transfer its contens to that of his customer. He turns his back to the fountain so that the jar comes under one of the jets of water, listens to the sound of the water in the jar, and his ear is so well trained that he always walks away at the exact moment when it is filled to the brim.

Arriving at the house of a customer he goes to the household jar, makes a deep gow and disappears behind a torrent of water. Foreigners can never receive, wthout laughing, the visit of their aguador, the respectful little man who bows to one behind a cataract of water.—Washington Star.

One Piece Sleeveless Type Favored For Tiny Tots' Frocks

Sleeveless, that is fashion's edict for daughters of the household, whether they be tiny tots or grownups. It is a fact, the sleeveless type of dress is perhaps more in evidence than any other, especially among styles for little girls.

Of course the armhole is either prettily trimmed with frilly ruffles or ribbons, or if the effect i to be tailored, then neat contrasting bindings are employed. When sleeves do appear they are mostly of the cunning tiny cap versions.

Just now the little flower girl attendant to the June bride is the inspiration for the creation of frocks which are somewhat elaborated, to tone in with the festive occasion. To impart an extra loveliness to these wee "picture" frocks, daintiest of handwork is lavished on them, such as French knots, hemstitching, fagoting, smocking, piping, fine tucks and such. There is also a bewilderment of cunning rosettes, sashes and other ribbon restments.

It is just such charming little ribbon-trimmed frocks as the one shown in this picture as are most fashionable for wee tots this season. This model adopts the one-piece sleeveless styling which is so extremely popular for summer. The frilled ribbon is deftly applied so as to form a scalloped hem line, and there are tiny rosettes of the ribbon, too, just to add to its prettiness. A fine quality of crepe de chine is the chosen material.

Now that the frilly, fluffy types are indorsed for the juvenile mode, there is much use being made of sheer materials such as organdie, voile, batiste and dotted swiss, also pastel georgette.

Myriads of tiny ruffles are employed. A very beautiful swiss with buttercup yellow dots is designed to fall straight from the shoulders. The hemline is ruffled in tiers to the depth of nine inches. Each ruffle, which is pleated in yellow, is not more than an inch and a quarter wide.

The Sandman Story

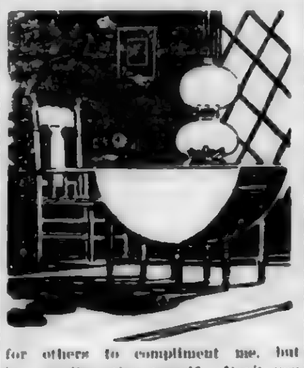
THE PROUD WOOD FAMILY



A table and a lamp and a chair were talking when all was quiet in the house.

All the members of the family had gone to bed, for the table and the lamp and the chair could never have talked if anyone had been around to hear them.

Although, it is true, no one could have understood them, for the talk of a table and a lamp and a chair is very strange. Only the objects themselves can understand what they say.

"I am very nice," said the lamp. "Of course I suppose I should be more modest and wait for some one else to compliment me, but if I did wait I might have to wait too long, and that would never do.

"I think I shall always make sure of being complimented by not waiting for others to compliment me, but by complimenting myself. Don't you think that shows wisdom?"

"Doubtless it does, doubtless it does," said the table.

"But of course, lamp," the table continued, "you're not so nice when you haven't been filled. You're an oil lamp, and you have to be filled quite often."

"I'm not nice when I'm not filled," said the lamp. "That is perfectly true. But, then, it is not my fault. I cannot fill myself with oil.

"I have to be carried out to the woodhouse where the oil is kept and filled there, and I can't do that myself.

"So I say 'never expect too much and then you won't be disappointed.' I don't suppose that thought is original with me, but then, though I'm a bright lamp when lighted, I'm not supposed to think up great and wise things.

"I give cheer during the long winter evenings. And if, by chance, I have not been filled and so go out, I'm sorry about it.

"I hate to hear the disappointed people say:

"'Oh, dear, that lamp was forgotten again today.' Yes, it makes me sad."

"Well," said the table, "I am what might be called a proud piece of wood. Not only am I used to hold books and games and you, my good friend lamp, but when people want to have good luck they knock on me."

"They do the same to me," said the chair. "I'm glad I'm a wooden chair, for I heard of a dentist's chair which was far from being a favorite.

"In fact, a little girl made up these lines about it:

"It takes a lot to do and dare
To actually go to a dentist's chair.
But once you're really truly there,
You feel as brave as a fine big bear."

"Of course she showed by that verse that while she was proud of herself after she went to the dentist's chair she didn't actually feel any love or affection for the chair!

"But when people say:

"'I haven't had a cold for six months,' they knock on me to make sure that their boasting won't bring them one. I don't suppose it means anything, but it's a nice compliment to the Wood family.

"Indeed it is," said the table, "and so I think the Wood family may well be proud of itself. I know I am. I feel as pleased as can be when people give me a little rap when they've boasted as though I'd protect them and see that their good luck continued.

"All nonsense, perhaps, but it's a source of joy to the family, and so while creatures call me a table I think of myself always as PROUD WOOD!"

INFINITE NATURE

System of nature! To the wisest man, wide as is his vision, nature remains of quite infinite depth, of quite infinite expansion; and all experience thereof limits itself to some few computed centuries and measured square miles. MAKE YOUR APRONS OF PAPER

A dozen basting stitches, a half roll of cheap crinkled crepe paper, and an apron is made which never knows the labor of ironing or washing day. Its life is shorter than cotton, but its expense is infinitely less, and its labor is nil.

A half roll is taken for the skirt, a double band for the waist. A small section for the bib and two crinkled straps frilled at the edges make quick decoration to take the place of lace or embroidery. There is enough paper left from the single inexpensive roll to make another shorter apron.

The new paper table cloths are also a great saving in ironing, and they can be purchased in packages of one dozen, with the varied designs of linen cloths put into them.

Crepe paper dust caps are a better protection to the hair while cleaning than those made of loosely woven cotton. We also get the message that at the smart boarding and day schools the little girls are wearing generous bows on their hair of bright crepe paper to take the place of expensive ribbons. The bows are first made and then fastened to the hair with the usual small comb or loop of tape.

Poultry-raising is one of this country's leading farm pursuits. In order to supply the chicken raisers with the adequate scientific information, the Government has a sixty-acre chicken ranch about twelve miles from Washington. There are between 4000 and 4500 fowls, of twelve different breeds, with which to experiment. The government scientists are learning how to improve the egg-laying qualities and the meat value of the chickens. The hens among them lay approximately 1,054,044,932 dozen eggs each year. Eight long poultry houses are set aside for laying hens, and the breeding pens are portable so that they can be easily moved to different places. The results of all experiments are carefully tabulated, and later included in the Department of Agriculture's poultry pamphlets.

INDIAN VILLAGE OFFERS KIDDIES A REAL TREAT

Glenwood Park Tribe Will Attend Camp Week Beginning July 6th.

Children from the ages of 8 to 14 will have a chance to visit a camp for a short period during this summer that has all the appearances and activities of a real Indian camp. It is the new Indian village being operated by the city recreation department on the Scioto river north of the storage dam. It was built by Earnest Thompson Seton.

The children will go to the camp with their own playground group. Each playground will organize tribes. The boys' tribes will attend the camp beginning Wednesdays and Fridays and the girls will be in camp beginning with Monday sessions. The village will be closed on Sunday. Camp will last for two days. No one will be allowed to attend camp for more than two sessions.

Cost per person for the camp is 90 cents. This includes transportation and board. All tribes will go via the Dublin bus line and return the same way. Each tribe is limited to 42.

The tribe from Glenwood will be the first Hilltop group to go to the camp. They will attend on July 6. The tribe will leave Glenwood park at 8:15 and take the Dublin bus at Long and Water streets. The boys will leave for home on the morning of the third day.

Each boy will be required to bring the following articles: two or more woolen blankets, one hand and one bath towel, wash cloth and cake of soap in metal case, nightie or pair of pajamas, bathing suit or pair of old pants, note book and pencil, sweater, tooth paste and brush, comb and pocket knife.

Glenwood girls will probably go to camp on July 16. Other Hilltop playgrounds will go later.

At the meeting at the city hall on Monday, members of the various tribes staged a mock Indian ceremony. Charles Bonner, who is at Holton this week, warrior of the Cherokee tribe, sounded the tom-tom. Little Thunder, Robret S. Craig, teacher at Highland Junior high, of the Chippewas, lighted the council fire by rubbing two sticks together. Chief Tecumseh, W. C. Dyer, of Glenwood, presided as chief of the paw-wow and council ring. Miss Mary Moler, Pocohontas, and Miss Irene McKinley, Minne-haha, both of Glenwood, had a part, as did Bill White, Heap Big Feet, formerly in charge of Glenwood shelter house. Peaceful Bear, Ralph Allen, a real Pawnee Indian told of his people.

Bitten by Dog

Thomas Huffman, 5, of 49 Clarendon Ave., was bitten in the right hand by a dog late Thursday. He was treated in St. Clair hospital. The dog was owned by Mrs. J. W. Wickman, 66 Clarendon Ave. The boy was playing in front of his home.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

Mrs. Charles Stout to Head Tenth Ward Club.

Officers were elected at the last meeting of the Tenth Ward Women's Democratic club on Wednesday, June 20. The rally was held at the home of Mrs. Charles Stout, 452 Belvidere Ave.

The new officers are: Mrs. Stout, president; Mrs. Catherine Boggs, vice president; Mrs. Genevieve Christianson, secretary and Mrs. Cora Wilkins, treasurer.

Henry J. Kline, Democratic candidate for treasurer, was a speaker at the meeting. Other speakers were Auditor Thatcher, Mrs. Florence Holmes Bay, Mrs. W. K. Merriman and Mrs. Charles D. Cussins, president of the Franklin County Democratic Women's club.

NEW CIVIC GROUP WILL ASK IMPROVEMENTS

Lights, Mail Delivery and Sewers Discussed by Broadview Organization.

Delivery of mail south of Palmetto St., the sewage problem and the lighting of streets not equipped with lights were among the topics discussed at the meeting of the newly organized Broadview Civic association at the Westgate Temple on last Thursday night. About 50 Broadview residents were present despite the heavy rain.

No action was taken in regard to the matters under discussion. At the next meeting which will be held on July 19, the by-laws will be submitted for approval and action will be started to secure the proposed improvements for this section of the city. A board of directors will also be elected at the next meeting.

Councilman Floyd Green expressed his appreciation of the organization of such a civic group in Broadview.

Three hundred houses have been built in Broadview in the past three years.

"Girl Evangelist" Here for Ten Days

Miss Alfrieda Veyhl and her sister, Miss Minnie Veyhal of Florida will conduct a ten-day evangelistic campaign at St. Paul's church on South Warren avenue beginning July 5. Miss Veyhal is widely known in the South as the "Girl Evangelist." The meetings of the Veyhal sisters have been very successful. This is the first time they have visited the Hilltop.

Auto Co. Opens

C. M. Thorpe, 2556 W. Broad St., opened the new Hilltop salesrooms for the Willys-Knight and Whippet motor cars last week. Mr. Thorpe was in the automobile business at Centreburg, O., for the five years before he came to the Hilltop. R. F. Ferguson, 340 S. Warren Ave., is a salesmann for the new firm.

W. BROAD GETS SKIP STOP CARS

New Speed-Up Service Will Begin Here on Sunday Morning, 5 a. .m

Extension of the skip-stop car service in the city including West Broad street was announced on Tuesday by C. C. Slater, president of the Columbus Railway, Power and Light Co. The service will begin on Sunday morning at 5 o'clock. This makes 11 lines that will have the new skip stop service.

Painted "Car stop" signs are being placed at all the streets at which the cars will stop. It is figured that the new service will save from eight to ten minutes on West Broad street. The plan will be inaugurated on all the lines on July 8.

Following are the stops on the West Broad line:

Westbound—Front, Scioto, Central High School, Morgan, N. Y. C. R. R., May, Skidmore, Sandusky, Davis, Hartford, Avondale, Cypress, Lorain, Chicago, Hayden, Central, Stevens, Isabelle Asylum, R. R. Spur, State Hospital, Belvidere, Midland, Highland, Oakley, Eureka, N. Terrace, Ogden, Harris and Hague.

Eastbound—Hague, Warren, Burgess, S. Terrace, S. Park, Wheatland, Clarendon, Whitethorne, State Hospital, R. R. Spur, Isabelle Asylum, Schultz, Guilford, Central, Dana, West Park, Yale, Glenwood, Dakota, Avondale, Skidmore, Souder, Davis, Sandusky, Skidmore, May, N. Y. C. R. R., Belle, Central High School, Scioto and Front.

GREEN TO HEAD AIRPORT BOARD

Councilman Floyd F. Green, 3046 Crescent Drive, was named last week as chairman of the City Airport Board by Mayor J. J. Thomas. The airport commission consists of 15 Columbus business men.

The committee will investigate and study the airport facilities and formulate a program for obtaining them for the city. Councilman Green was also chairman of the airport committee of city council before the appointment of the new committee. The first meeting was held on Wednesday noon.

NEW $50,000 CHURCH TO BE ERECTED HERE

Structure May Be Completed in September at Richardson and Eakin Road.

A new $50,000 church will be built by the Heavenly Science Association at South Richardson avenue and Eakin Road within the next four months, says Rev. J. Daniel Carrick, of the Waldo hotel.

Rev. Carrick states that a great part of the pledges for the new building have already been secured. He believes that the new church will be completed by September 20.

The building will be of stucco, stone and glass construction and different from any building in the city. It will have a seating capacity of about 350 with facilities for making 150 extra seats available.

Rev. Carrick claims that the church has a present membership of 200.

The association will hold a tent meeting next week on the Hilltop at which Rev. Carrick will deliver the messages every evening. The exact place of the meeting has not been decided yet but they will probably be held on the West Broad Street school grounds where the Chautauqua was held last year. They will probably begin on Monday.

Tent Meeting

A tent meeting will be held at 340 Lechner Ave., beginning tonight. Services will begin each evening at 7:45. Rev. C. E. Miller, pastor of the Hilltop Church of God, and others will be in charge. The meetings are undenominational.

H. E. BonDurant of 2511 Ridge Ave., who has been conducting educational work for the United States Public Health Service in West Virginia for the past three years has returned with his family from a vacation trip to northern Indiana and Michigan.

Mr. Harry Fleming, 104 N. Warren Ave., was honored on Tuesday evening with a birthday dinner at his home given by Mrs. Fleming. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Martin and Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Coyle.

Miss Leola McMorrow, 136 N. Harris Ave., has as her guest, her cousin, Miss Marie Pospichel.

Equipment Ordered

Steel shelving and oak furniture for the new Hilltop branch library has been ordered and will be installed within a short time according to J. H Pugh, city librarian.

No date has been set for the opening of the library. The librarian will be named by the city library board before the opening.

Early Copy

Due to the fact that the Fourth of July is on Wednesday it will be necessary for all copy for next week's issue of the Record to be in the office by Tuesday noon. Social notes should be in Monday.

Want ads will be accepted at the stations until 6:30 Tuesday evening.

BUSINESS MEN'S MEET CHANGED TO JULY 10

Nominating Committee Will Report Their Candidates for August Election.

The regular meeting of the Hilltop Business Men's association has been postponed from July 3 to July 10 because of the date conflicting with July 4.

At the meeting on July 10 the final plans for the picnic and the distribution and drawing of the tickets to be offered by the association members will be made. The regular picnic committee which was to have met on July 10 will meet at the time of the regular meeting.

The nominating committee will report the candidates for the election which will be held at the August meeting. The committee is made up of R. G. Harrison, chairman, George Matson, W. L. Millikin, Carl Sherburn and Dr. T. S. Fox.

The place of the next meeting will be announced next week.

Bible Certificates to Be Given to Five

Five will receive certificates of graduation on Sunday morning in the personal Evangelism class at St. Paul's United Evangelical church. The work has been conducted by Miss Helen Snider, a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute. She has been teaching the same course as taught in the institute. Mr. Skeen has been selected to represent the class as the speaker.

Those who will receive certificates are Mr. Harry Maupin, Mr. Donald Baker, Mr. Skeen, Mrs. B. F. Baker and Miss Ruth Leach.

Condition Serious

Miss Emma Burns, 28, of 147 S. Park Ave., is in serious condition in Grant hospital where she was taken last week after being hit by an automobile at Grant avenue and State street. She suffered a fractured leg when she was pinned between the car and a street car.

SUBWAY WORK TO START SOON

Committee Asks Widening of National Road to 40 Feet From Big 4 to Rome.

Contract for the construction of the West Broad street subway at the Big Four Railroad crossing was awarded by the state highway department last week to Radebaugh-Graham Co. of Columbus on a bid of $113,764.

Work is expected to start within the next week. The state's part includes the sewer and paving work. The contract for the structure is to be let by the Big Four R. R.

Harry J. Kirk, state highway director was asked to widen the National road between Columbus and Rome by a committee of property owners on Friday. They have asked that the road be widened to 40 feet, whereas the present plans would make it 34 feet wide.

To adopt the plan would mean the construction of a new highway, according to Kirk. From Rome to the Big Darby the highway would be 24 feet wide according to the plans of the committee.

Members of the committee are Thomas Johnson, Alva Richards, H. D. Freeman and Charles Kirk.

ECONOMY STORE OPENS ADDITION

Fred Raether, manager of the Economy Variety store, 2402 W. Broad St., announces that the new section of his store which he has recently built is ready for business.

The increased space allows a greater stock of goods to be carried and also provides a better display. The new store front which has been installed has made a big improvement in the front appearance of the store.

Mr. Raether is sponsoring a one cent sale in celebration of the opening of the addition.

Mrs. R. D. Doty, 134 S. Terrace St., is in White Cross hospital for goiter operation.

WESTGATE TO HAVE NEW GAS STATION

B. C. Confers to Build on Lot at Sylvan Ave. and West Broad St.

B. C. Confers, manager of the Westgate Barbecue, announces that he will build a large ornamental filling station at the southeast corner of West Broad street and Sylvan avenue. Excavation was to start this week. It is expected that the station will be completed within 30 days.

Mr. Confers will handle Shell Oil Co. products and a small line of automobile accessories.

The building will be of combination buff and red colored brick. The drive will be 16 feet and will be covered by a long portico. Three 2000 gallon tanks will be buried in the ground. The building will contain a basement and furnace under the service room.

Entrance to the station will be from West Broad street and Sylvan avenue on a curved driveway. The traffic of the detour during the elimination of the West Broad street crossing will pass over Sylvan avenue.

Mr. Confers plans to build an addition to the building if future business conditions justify it.

Candidates Speak

Fred W. Postle, Pop Hoenig and C. R. Petrie, candidates for city council, addressed the Eleventh Ward Republican club on Monday evening at West Broad Street school.

Wyatt L. Millikin, Democratic candidate for state representative will address the Seventh Ward Democratic club in Legion hall tonight.

Mrs. Eunice Shuler and two daughters, 494 S Warren Ave., and sister, Miss Frances Potts, 458 S. Warren Ave., left June 23 for a week's visit with their sister, Mrs. Phil Coates of Detroit.

Mrs. Lellie Jay, 532 S. Eureka Ave., reports that she lost $17.75 late last Wednesday when a thief entered her home.

Marble Champ Goes to National Meet

Paul Gildersleeve, aged 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gildersleeve, 232 S. Harris Ave., winner of the city marble tournament sponsored by the Columbus Citizen, left late Tuesday for Atlantic City where he will represent Columbus in the National Marble Tournament.

During his stay at Atlantic City he will live in a hotel near the board walk a few yards from the Atlantic Ocean. Much in the way of entertainment has been planned while in that city. Valley Forge and Philadelphia are included in the itinerary.

BIBLE SCHOOLS START MONDAY

All Hilltop Children May Take Courses Free.

Daily Vacation Bible school work will start on Monday. The St. James Lutheran Mission announces that it will conduct classes again this year at 3115 W. Broad St., beginning on Monday. The classes will be held there every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m. No tuition will be charged. Children of elementary school age may attend. They will be instructed by Mrs. D. Wetterman and Rev. P. Pennekamp.

All children of the Hilltop are invited to attend the classes that will open at Hoge Memorial and the Hilltop Lutheran churches. Only the kindergarten classes will meet at the Hilltop Lutheran church.

Classes will begin at 9 o'clock and last until 11:30.

TWELVE ATTEND C. E. CONVENTION AT LIMA

Hoge Memorial Sends Delegates to State Meeting; President From Here.

Twelve members from Hoge Memorial church are attending the State Christian Endeavor convention at Lima, O., this week. Most of them left on Tuesday morning in a special bus which was chartered by the Franklin county delegation to the convention.

Those attending the convention are Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Harrison, Ethel Humphreys, Margaret Morgan, Mary Eleanor Price, Alice Latham, Gertrude and Priscilla Held, Jack Merriman, Carol Castleman and Gladys Hoffman. Rev. H. C. Hutchison left on Wednesday for the convention. The convention will be in session until Friday evening.

Herman Klahr, 33 N. Eureka Ave., is state executive of the association. He recently moved to the Hilltop from Akron, O. Rev. Hutchison will be in charge of the Presbyterian group on Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison are active state members.

New officers for the association will be elected and installed on Friday evening.

DeMolays Elect

Three Hilltop boys were elected to offices in the Columbus Chapter, Order of DeMolay, at the regular election held on June 16 at the Woodmen home, 36 W. College St. They are: Emerson Ogburn, 341 N. Harris Ave., senior councillor; Carl Ryan, 631 S. Burgess Ave., junior deacon, and Lawrence Tracy, 130 Eldon Ave., standard bearer.

Injured in Fall

M. L. Kitrick, 61, 110 S. Oakley Ave., suffered a broken hip and a broken arm when he fell from a stepladder on Thursday. He was treated at Mercy hospital.

HILLTOP RECORD TO OCCUPY NEW BUILDING SOON

Will Be Located on South Oakley Ave.—New Press to Be Installed.

A new home and a new press are listed as improvements for the Hilltop Record within the next two months according to B. D. Hastings, publisher of the Record.

The Record Printing company will occupy the new building now under construction by Milton W. Westlake on the east side of South Oakley avenue, one door from Broad street. Excavation for the new building was started last week.

One story in height, the building will be 60x30 feet. It will have a foundation strong enough for the addition of another story for future building purposes. The building will be of red brick and white stone coping. It will probably be ready for occupancy by the last of August.

A new press will be installed before the present equipment is moved to the new location. It is a Duplex web press manufactured by the Duplex Printing Press Co., Battle Creek, Mich..

It prints from type forms with roll paper and can produce 3500 folded papers of 4 to 8 pages per hour. This is about three times the speed of the press on which the Record is printed at present. It is 14 feet long and has a height from the floor line of five feet and weighs 19,500 pounds.

The new facilities will assure a better paper for the Hilltop. All the pages will go to press at the same time on the new press. This will give more time for securing news and advertising.

Opens New Store

Singer Sewing Machine Co. will open a new store on Monday, July 2, at 2329 W. Broad St. Ance Queen, manager of the South High street store, will manage the Hilltop branch. He expects to move to the Hilltop soon. The new firm will be equipped for repairs and hemstitching work in addition to sales.

The W. H. O. club will meet on July 3 at the home of Mrs. Homer Scoles, 155 N. Oakly Ave., instead of 123 N. Powell Ave.

James A. Trebearne, one of the surviving veterans of the Hilltop, was pleasantly surprised at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. L. Dunavent, 77 Clarendon Ave., last Sunday, on the anniversary of his 87th birthday. The following were present: A. L. Cryder and wife, Delaware, O.; J. B. Cryder, and wife, London, O.; A. J. Blue, wife and daughter Emily, and son Ellis, London, O.; Mrs. Ed. Williams, daughter Amy, and son Ross, of Plumwood, O.; Dr. J. R. Trebearne, wife and children Bobbie and Mary Elizabeth, Will S. Trebearne, Miss Helen Koons and John Welch and family of Columbus, Ohio.

Wednesday Cal's Day and July 4th

Wednesday is July 4th. Perhaps we are approaching the subject a little early but we offer this little story at this time as a reminder of this popular day in this country.

Associated with Independance Day is the thought of fire crackers—picnics—home comings—races—shows—motor trips—and good times in general—and for the most part no thought of Independence or the significance of the day itself. In truth we say to ourselves, "What is the use of thinking about a thing we already have? Our forefathers were thoughtful enough to get it for us so why worry as long as we have it."

And about this time we are aroused from this thoughtless mood and our attention is drawn to the flags blowing in the breeze and the "ruffle of drums." Somehow or other there is a feeling of delight and a nervous tingling at ones spinal cord and a wrinkle in his brow—all of which we may call patriotism. So after all we are forced to recall that this national holiday is in celebration of Independence Day.

Another interesting sidelight of July 4th is the fact that the present head of the United States was born on that day. Next Wednesday, Calvin Coolidge will be celebrating July 4th and his birthday at his summer vacation headquarters in the west.

And in connection with this little comparison it is fitting to relate the following story of our president: It was night time at the little farm house in Plymouth, Vermont. The farmers had all retired, and late at night all was quiet at the house.

Then suddenly there was a strange sound in the kitchen. It was a dragging, bumping noise. The father of the house heard the noise and jumped out of bed to investigate the cause of the commotion downstairs. There in the kitchen in the light of a flickering kerosene lamp was the boy of the house bending over something in the corner.

"What are you doing up so late at night?" was the inquiry of the man.

The boy jumped to his feet and explained, "I was told to fill the woodbox and forgot to do it." It was Calvin Coolidge.

Flower Basket Book Ends

If you are losing sleep nights trying to "think up" the daintiest and loveliest of bridge prizes for your club, here it is—flower-basket book ends. They are all that esthetic feminity might wish for. Conjured of gold lace, stretched over colorful satin-covered basket forms, they are as substantial and practical as if of heavy bronze. Those pretty posies which spill over the top are handmade of gay silk and satin and flued—very "Frenchy"!

I-ON-A-CO

1150 Bay Avenue, Columbus Ohio.
April 8, 1928

Dear Mr. Wanhope:

I am giving you this letter in the hope that it may be of benefit to sufferers in Columbus who areskeptical about Ionaco.

For many years I sufferesl from an inward goitre which caused a general nervous condition and palpitation of the heart. In addition my blood pressure was low.

In December 1926 I went to Oakland, California, to visit a sister. She owned an Ionaco, and both she and her husband has obtained wonderful relief from the use of an Ionaco. She had had neuritis and her husband an ulcerated stomach. My sister urged me to try Ionaco.

With regular use of the Ionaco the size of my neck was decreased two and one-half inches. My general health improved and my blood pressure returned to normal.

I purchased an Ionaco in California and brought it home with me. If I could not replace my Ionaco there is not money enough in Columbus to buy it.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) Bertha M. Agler.

HEALTH IS WEALTH

You can find out what the Ionaco can do for you. You may try the Ionaco three times without charge or obligation at any of our offices. If you are unable to come to an office telephone and a representative will be sent to your home to give you a demonstration without charge or obligation. If you live out of town write for our free literature.

Continued from last week

"You were right in thinkin' the Morton you wrote to would be pretty old," began Green, after preliminaries had been ended. "He was away from home, up in New York; but he's got a son that sure is a hellyon. He's got a flossy name—George Ashmead Morton, but every one calls him Go Ahead, an'—"

"Go Ahead? You mean—"

"I reckon I mean just what you're thinkin'. He's sure got a big reputation for bringin' home the bacon when he goes after it."

"But—did anyone tell you he was a D. J. man?"

"That's what they did. But I took a chance on his playin's square; everybody in his parts says he always has."

Fair drew a long breath. "I guess you didn't make any mistake, Jack," he decided. "Anyway, the cards are dealth; and I'm willing to play them. Which of my letters did you give him?"

"Gave him your number one an' told him mighty nigh everything he wanted to know."

"Did he open up too; tell you he was a dick, and all that?"

"Sure! We had plenty of heart-to-heart talks comin' across the country. He knew who you meant by 'Jim' in your letter; and he knew that he was in with us. 'We ain't got the goods on him yet,' he says; 'but we will some day.' And he told me right out that he and his people were doin' their best to break us up. But, of course, that wasn't no news. 'We're enemies,' says he; 'an' we've got to stay so till you fellows are smashed for good and all. We're in it to win; an' any of you that's got good hard sense had better take my advice an' beat it while the beatin's good.'"

Fair frowned. "I don't like that," he said hesitantly.

"Does sound like a bid, don't it? But I reckon it was just a warnin'. 'We're enemies,' he goes on. 'You an' I and Fair are just meetin' now under a flag of truce for a particular purpose. Once we've put that over, we'll did up the hatchet again. Meanwhile I don't want to take any unfair advantage. You tell Fair that I'm wholly in his hands, an' that I'll meet all his conditions about Cousin Stella and all that. And tell him to be careful not to let me find out anything that he don't want me to know, for I'll have to use it after the armistice is over. An' I told him that would be all right."

Fair nodded. "Right enough," he agreed. "Now what's the layout?"

"'Bout as we fixed for it to be. He got off at Mustin last night, in cow puncher rig, lintedin' to get a horse an' ride toward Loboville, knidder loafin' along an' askin' for work but takin' care not to get none. Loboville and on to here, after plantin' Go Ahead's nigger there."

"His nigger? "

"That's right. I guess I ain't mentioned him. He's a smart darky, all right. He's fixed up as a Mexican. He's goin' to project round Loboville and find where he can get horses muncho pronto if Go Ahead needs 'em, and all that. Bridget knows about him. I told Go Ahead to stop at Bridget's place if I didn't meet him with Bob before he got Loboville."

"Good." Fair got up. "You've done fine, Jack," he said. "Fine!"

Green stirred awkwardly. "I'd do a lot more for Bob's sake," he muttered.

"Bob's sake!" Fair started at the boy. "You, too, Jack?" he said, sadly.

Green nodded. "Yes! Me, too," he answered.

Impulsively Fair held out his hand. "We're going to miss her, Jack," he said. "But—it's for her good."

Green took the hand. "Yes," he said. "It's for her good. I reckon it's the only way to get her safe from Barker."

"It's the only way, Jack. . . . Now I'll see if I can find her."

But Fair could not find her, of course; and for some time he was unable to discover where she had gone. Her horse was in the stable (she had ridden Charley Harris' horse); and the sentries at the exit swore that she had not gone out that way.

Deeply alarmed at last, Fair spread the alarm; and in time learned that Charley, whom he had supposed gone with the whisky runners, was sick in camp. And the discovery that some one riding Charley's horse had gone with Wade seemed to explain what had happened.

This discovery comforted Fair considerably, for he knew that more than half the men in Wade's party were very friendly to the girl, and he was entirely sure that they would not let her come to any harm. The thought of Barker, of course, occurred to him; but he speedily dismissed it, feeling sure that the sheriff would not risk a showdown under such circumstances. Stella, he decided, was safe, unless something went wrong at the border crossing; and this was improbable.

Only one thing troubled him, and that was lest Stella's absence would interfere with her meeting Go Ahead and leaving for the East. But, after a little thought, he began to hope that her escapade might be for the best.
